KING LIKELY TO ASK FOR A CONFERENCE OF MINISTERS

Sir Edward Carson in a Hostile Town--Revolver Shots Greet His Arguments--Grave Crisis Nearing

Belfast, Oct. 3.—Information is given to-day as coming from a close personal friend, but who is allied to the Ulster Unionist forces that it is probable His Majesty may intervene before long to compel a conference of Messrs. Asquith, Bonar Law, Carson and Redmond.

This was partly confirmed in speeches on Wednesday, which though suggesting a conference, were firm in the declaration that Ulster must not be included in the Home Rule Bill. The rank and file Ulsterites would ditch Sir Edward Carson, Mr. Craig even Mr. Bonar Law, if the compromise meant power for Mr. Redmond in this section of Ireland.

Dungannon, Oct. 3.—Carson carried the war into the enemy's country, reviewing 1,200 volunteers in this busy town in the constituency that returned a Nationalist, and none other than John Redmond's son, William, an arch Redmondite.

Sharp division was shown in the market place where mobs between streaming Union Jacks showed cordiality and also sullen faces.

The Earl of Ranfurly, former Governor of New Zealand, was chairman. Mr. F. E. Smith attacked the Asquith Cabinet and declared it met at Arran because of the seriousness of the situation and dispersed immediately panic stricken, at the command of Mr. Redmond.

Depends on Drilling Men.

Interruptions to the speech were frequent, but silenced quickly by Sir Edward Carson.

The most serious argument in the present campaign was greeted by revolver salutes and showed the possibilities of settlement farther off than ever.

"I know the time is coming when men on whom I rely are not the men who cheer, but the men who drill and prepare to fight. A great deal is said in the political world about conference and conciliation. That may be well enough but until the principle is agreed upon, which is consonant with our covenant, no

Peterborough Protests

The following resolution was passed unanimously at the last monthly meeting of the Protestant Benevolent Federation of Peterborough, and a copy forwarded to Sir James P. Whitney:

Resolved,—That the Protestant Benevolent Federation of Peterborough, numbering one thousand paid-in members, protest with all their strength against—

1. The recognition by the Government of Ontario of any language of communication and instruction, in our schools other than English.
2. Any recognition of bi-lingualism by the said Government.
3. The action of the Government of Ontario, with respect thereto.

Mr. Redmond at this moment is not merely dictator of Ireland, but England and Scotland, and almost the whole destiny of the Empire. We have the promise of Mr. Bonar Law, one of the best leaders of the Unionists ever had, that we will have behind us the whole force of Unionism in Britain.

May Involve Empire.

"With such a promise it is impossible to confine our battles to this country. They must be fought to a finish in England and Scotland as well as here. The fight will mean disaster which 'rend not only Ireland, not only Great Britain, but the whole great overseas Empire into two parties, struggling in religious and fratricidal warfare and just at the time when we need the unity of the Empire. ...

The usual despatch riders guarded Sir Edward throughout the trip of twenty miles which the mixed reception showed really necessary.

WILL PETITION SAVE CHARLES GIBSON FROM THE GALLOWS

Belief That He May be Shielding Another Man, Case Has Excited Sympathy--Petitions being Largely Signed

Toronto, Oct. 3.—A petition for executive clemency for Charles Gibson is in circulation and is being largely signed by people of all classes who feel that there may be a doubt as to the youth's guilt.

The date set for the execution is next Thursday.

"The Jews of Toronto have no desire for vengeance in this case for the death of one of their number. They are only anxious that the Government of Canada should protect the lives of their people here, as it does the lives of Canadian-born citizens. They are satisfied now that no new trial has been granted, and will do all in their power to help have the death sentence commuted."

This was the statement made by a prominent Hebrew this morning in discussing the Gibson case. Feeling has run high in the Jewish section for some time past while the attempts were being made to secure a new trial for Gibson, but now that there is no hope except in executive clemency, they are willing to unite in an effort to secure leniency. It is understood that leaders among the people will take an active part at once in circulating a strong petition asking for clemency, and that practically every Jew in the city will sign it.

The letter written yesterday, by Charles Gibson, written practically in the shadow of the gallows to his father, has succeeded in arousing considerable sympathy for the young man, twenty men at once started out with petitions asking that Gibson's sentence be commuted. Many people were signing the petition last night and to-day.

The application made to the Department of Justice at Ottawa some time ago was for a new trial or the sentence of death commuted and an effort will now be made to to one of life imprisonment.

There is a strong feeling that some mistake has been made, and that Gibson may have to suffer the penalty of the law for another's crime.

While the sentiment is that Gibson is innocent, many people believe that he has a guilty knowledge of the murder, and although he did not commit it, through a mistaken sense of honor he is shielding the man or men who did it. Whether he will tell if he does know the name of the murderer or whether he will go to the gallows with his lips closed, is a question which he will have to decide for himself.

The only way for him to escape the consequences of the crime is to tell, if he knows who committed the murder. In the event of him doing this, a [illegible] new trial. Gibson's attitude all along has been that of complete innocence. He has only denied that he is guilty of the murder, but he refuses to admit that he may know of any person who might be guilty. Admitting that there is some person living in Toronto now, who killed Joseph Rosenthal, that person is calmly sitting by, allowing Gibson to pay the penalty the law requires. The fact that this man has not come forward and admitted his guilt, should prove conclusively to Gibson that it is a case of every man for himself, and should encourage him to help the authorities in every way possible to find the guilty man.

Gibson's Letter.

"To my many friends who have since my conviction believed in my innocence, and have, as I understand, contributed on my behalf, I wish to express to them my everlasting gratitude, and in conclusion I wish to say that, just and fair as my conviction may to some appear, I repeat that I go to the gallows on Thursday next innocent of the murder of Rosenthal, suffering for the crime of another man.

"To my friends—farewell.

(Sgd) "CHARLES GIBSON, JR.,
Toronto Jail."

TARIFF WILL NOT AFFECT CANADA

Toronto, Oct. 3.—That the new Underwood tariff bill in the United States will have but slight effect upon general conditions in the Dominion is the view expressed to-day by Mr. R. S. Gourlay, immediate past president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Gourlay's opinions are in complete harmony with those expressed by a number of prominent business men on Tuesday. "Articles in the agricultural, animal and pulpwood schedules will have an easier access to the American market," he said, "but there will be no material change in our trade with the United States. The new tariff is still considerably higher than the level of our own."

"Some time ago you expressed the opinion that by the new tariff Canada would secure all the advantages of the Reciprocity pact without the disadvantages involved," he was reminded.

"So we do," Mr. Gourlay replied. "But I never saw much advantage in the reciprocity agreement you know."

DUKE AND DUCHESS ARE COMING BACK

London, Oct. 3.—The renewed rumor that the Duchess of Connaught would be unable to accompany the Duke of Connaught to Canada is authoritatively contradicted. The Duke and Duchess will proceed to Rideau Hall after Prince Arthur's marriage in the middle of October. They will stay in Canada through the winter. The Duke anticipates a brief visit of inspection to the middle west early next summer prior to the arrival of the Prince of Wales. Princess Patricia will be a member of the party and will remain with her mother throughout the whole period. If the Duchess had suffered no setback it was hoped the Princess would be able to spare a month or two out of the Canadian term in order to visit her sister in Stockholm. This prospect is now postponed until after the return of the Royal family to England late in the summer of next year.

WHAT MIXED MARRIAGES MEAN

It is not generally known that in handing out "The Olive Branch" in Latin with curses of Protestantism attached there has also been handed out some pretty stiff sentences for mixed marriages. The following taken from this week's Catholic Register, shows how "friendly" some people can be:—

"Protestant young men do not relish taking a whole week of instruction under the Catholic priest before being married, as they now will have to do, nor do our Catholic girls who persist in keeping company with Protestants, relish being refused Holy Communion in public. If these wise and salutary rules were in force years ago, we would have less mixed marriages. It is a matter of congratulation that the number of mixed marriages in Ottawa are growing less and less. However, these plagues come in cycles — waiting as it were, for someone to start the ball a-rolling. They have not got over the "Ne Temere" scare yet, which stopped them to a large extent, but the company-keeping goes on so far, here, without restriction, and we may soon look for results."

"The truth of all these separations in education, marriage, &c., is that a store of hatred is being laid up that will increase in volume and intensity as the years go by. How could it be otherwise? People will hate those who despise them. It is natural.

CANADA'S NATIONAL PORTS DEVELOPED ON BIG SCALE

Active Policy of Hon. Robert Rogers Being Vigorously Carried Out

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works has during the past week been inspecting the harbors of Montreal, Quebec, Toronto and Hamilton where the government is planning big development work. A broad statesmanlike policy is being advocated by the Minister of Public Works in connection with the building up of national ports. Mr. Rogers in a brief but succinct statement at the banquet to Sir Rodolphe Forget in Quebec, explained the government's stand.

"To create systems of internal transportation, railway and canal, and not provide proper outlets is insane," said Mr. Rogers. "For fifteen years the Laurier government tried transportation but neglected our harbors. The present government in carrying out its great national transportation policy is providing for adequate facilities in our national ports. Your great harbor in this, one of Canada's greatest ports, is being developed in keeping with your importance as a city and your certain growth. In the near future a portion of the great trade of Western Canada will be seeking the markets of the world through your port, and I can assure you that the government will so act that your growth will not be dwarfed nor your great trade handicapped by lack of harbor accommodation or modern facilities."

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair and a little cooler.

JAPAN AND THE AUTOMOBILE TAXES

Tokio, Oct. 3.—In Yokohama the rate of tax on automobiles is much lower than that in Tokio. The tax is divided under two classes, one being the prefecture and the other the municipal tax. The prefectural tax on automobiles for private use is 30 yen per car carrying not more than two persons, and is increased by 2.50 yen per seat, while the municipal tax is 30 yen per car for private use and 15 yen for business use. Neither additional nor special tax is imposed. Thus the burden of owners of automobiles in Yokohama is practically one half that in Tokio, and not unnaturally there is a growing tendency of owners in Tokio to register their automobiles in Yokohama.

Re-Fined.

Stopping the sporty student, who was having a hot time scorching over the speedway with a fast bunch, the country constable brought him before the judge.

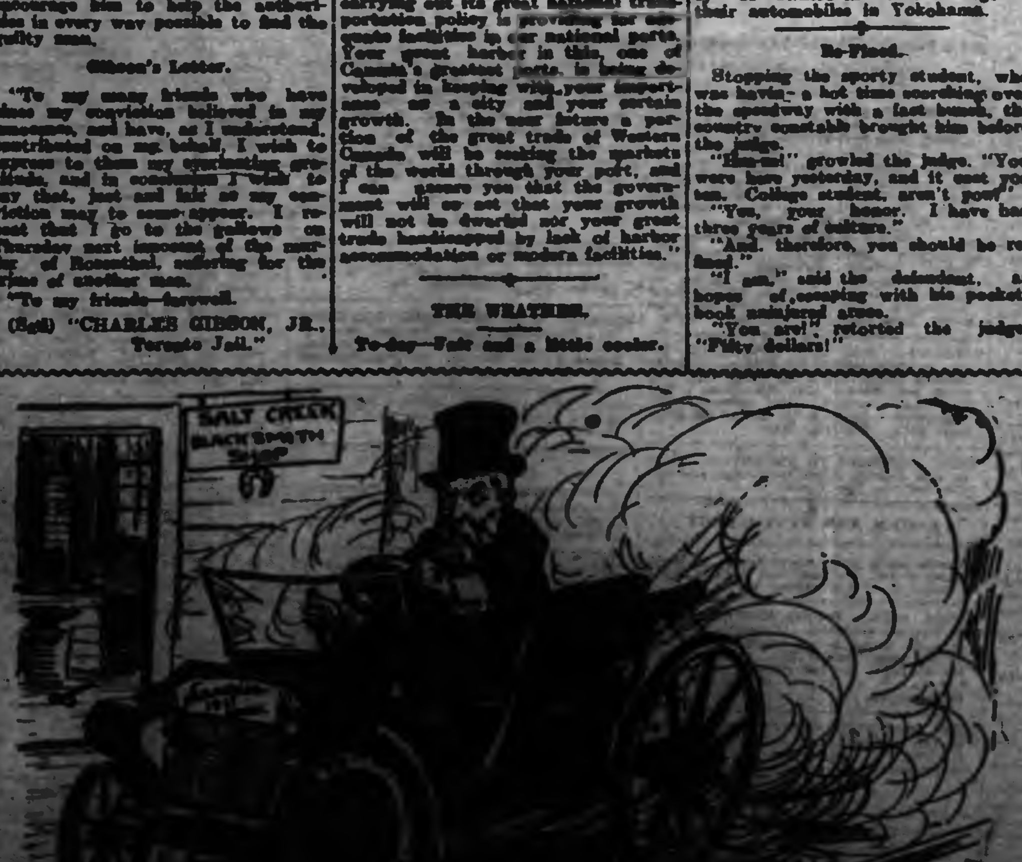
"Hm-m!" growled the judge. "You were here yesterday, and it cost you ten. College student, aren't you?"

"Yes, your honor. I have had three years of culture."

"And, therefore, you should be refined."

"I am," said the defendant, as hopes of escaping with his pocketbook uninjured arose.

"You are!" retorted the judge. "Fifty dollars!"



Hon. Sidney Fisher will try to get back to Ottawa by way of Chateauguay.

IF GIBSON HANGS HERE'S THE HANGMAN

Toronto, Oct. 3.—If Gibson is hanged Ellis will act as official hangman, and at dawn on Thursday will pull the lever in the Toronto jail which will end the earthly existence of the convicted slayer of Rosenthal. City Sheriff Mowatt communicated with Ellis, who is at present in British Columbia, and the sheriff has received his acceptance. No amount of persuasion would induce Sheriff Mowatt to tell the amount of the fee the executioner will receive for carrying out the unenviable task.

There will be no necessity of building a scaffold. There is a permanent one in Toronto jail in a small room along the corridor from the death cell.

"It will be all over in two minutes," declared sympathetic Sheriff Mowatt.

DEFENCE ESTIMATES ARE INCREASED IN AUSTRALIA

Budget Speech Shows Five Million Dollars More, Totalling $38,750,000--Decline in the Revenue

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 3.—Sir John Forrest, Treasurer of the Federal Government, yesterday delivered his budget speech, which had been awaited with especial interest in consequence of his recently reported intention of "drastically pruning the defence estimates." The facts are that he has increased them by over five million dollars, bringing the amount per capita of population to 23s. 6d. The precise amount now allotted to defence is $38,750,000.

The budget is noteworthy for the decline shown in the revenue. There is an increased expenditure of $1,300,000, which is met by new taxation in lieu of the loan, at one time proposed for railways, post office, and defence.

Sir John Forrest called the attention of the House to the fact that during the last 12 years there had been an increase in the public debt of Australia by loans amounting to £20,000,000 floated in London, and £65,000,000 in the Australian Commonwealth.

The Treasurer alluded to the tendency now being shown to invest in Government securities instead of industrial enterprises, and ascribed it to friction between capital and labor in the industrial sphere.

Wanted!

Perfectly healthy men and women who will voluntarily submit to an experiment which may lead to temporary or permanent impairment of health, or possible death.

This experiment to be conducted with the drug, "caffeine," in tea and coffee.

Would You Apply for the Job?

Thousands are trying the experiment every day in spite of the fact that physicians and government experts have proven:

That the average cup of tea or coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grs. of caffeine;

That caffeine is attributed to be one of the principal causes of headache, billiousness, heart disease, indigestion and kidney, liver and bowel trouble;

That caffeine in doses as small as that contained in two or three average cups of tea or coffee has killed rabbits, guinea pigs and other animals in laboratory tests.

To be sure a guinea pig or a rabbit may weigh but a pound or two, while the average human may weigh 100 times as much.

A few cups of tea or coffee or a single cup (according to the resistance of the individual) will not kill, but the poison is there and can be added to day by day.

That's why so many tea and coffee drinkers suffer from headache, dizziness, indigestion and other symptoms referable to the poison effect on heart, liver, nerves, kidneys and stomach.

If you know tea and coffee have no bad effect in your particular case and you like them, why, bless your heart, stick to them, but if tea and coffee drinking leaves a tell-tale mark by some symptoms of physical discomfort or peace of mind, it's a good idea to stop and use

POSTUM

This pure food-beverage, made of prime wheat and the juice of sugar-cane, makes a rich, seal-brown blend, turning to golden-brown when cream is added, which has a rich, snappy taste, but is absolutely free from the drug, "caffeine" in tea and coffee.

Postum comes in two forms. One, called Regular Postum, must be boiled full 15 minutes.

The other, Instant Postum, is in powder form and a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water makes the beverage instantly. Grocers keep both kinds.

EXPENSIVE NEWSPAPERS

Century Ago Fifteen Cents Per Copy Not Uncommon Price

The history of the London "Times" which now sells at 4 cents per copy provides a remarkable illustration of the fluctuations in prices of newspapers during the last hundred years. The cost of the "Times" on its first issue in 1788 was 6 cents; but eight years later it was raised to 9 cents and in 1799 to 12 cents. Two years later another cent was added to the price, while in 1828 it rose to 15 cents. This was due to the fact that during the [illegible] of George III. the [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] heavy [illegible] posts. At the beginning of the reign the tax on newspapers was 2 cents a copy. In 1766 it was raised to 3 cents, other increases following till in 1815 it had reached 8 cents per copy. This caused a general rise in the price of newspapers to 14 cents a copy, a condition of things which lasted until 1836, when the duty was reduced, the tax being entirely abolished in 1855, when the price of the "Times" was 8 cents. It was reduced to 6 cents, six years later and remained at that price for half a century.

It is generally thought that the "Times" is the oldest London daily but the "Morning Post" was in existence in 1772. The oldest Sunday newspaper, the "Observer," was established in 1791, when it was sold at 16 cents a copy, a price which was also charged for the "Weekly Dispatch."

The result of these prices was that the average person could not afford to buy a newspaper, but used to pay for the hire of one.

CROSSES FOR SERVANTS

German Empress's Rewards for Long Service

The German Empress has embarked enthusiastically on the encouragement of long and faithful service by cooks, housemaids and children's nurses. She has distributed nearly two hundred gold crosses to servants who have been in the same family over forty years. Accompanying the gold cross is an illuminated document, which ends up with the quotation, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant!" A pathetic story is told of an old nurse in Silesia who served in one family 38 years and brought up two generations of children. The nurse had been hoping that she would serve long enough to earn the gold cross. When two years short of the necessary term she got ill and was expected to die. She wrote to the Empress telling her story, and saying that the one disappointment in her life was that she could not earn the cross. Three days later she died. On the morning of her funeral a letter came from the Empress sending the cross.

MAN AND WIFE FIGHT A DUEL

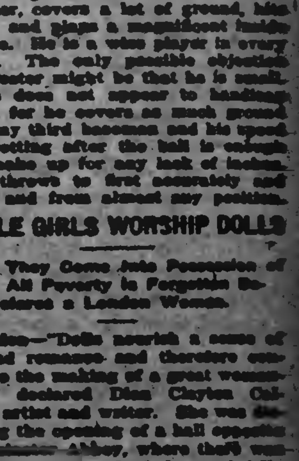
Great excitement was caused in Moscow by a fatal duel between a man and his wife. Nadja Putokin was the wife of a fencing-master, and was herself exceedingly clever with the foils. She had won the first prize in a fencing competition, and this fact made the fencing institute that she and her husband ran more popular than ever. Expert fencers considered it a great honor to have a few bouts with the beautiful swordswoman. The harmony between Putokin and his clever wife was disturbed by the appearance of an officer in the fencing-room. The officer paid more attention to the woman than her husband liked. The fencing-master became jealous, and at last the officer challenged him to a duel. A remarkable thing now happened. When the fencing-master arranged with the officer's seconds he received a visit from other seconds who had been sent by his wife. The woman considered that she had been insulted by her husband's behaviour and sent him a challenge. She insisted that he should fight with her before his meeting with the officer. At first the fencing-master was not inclined to accept the challenge, but he eventually accepted it in the hope that it would lead to a reconciliation between them. But instead of the reconciliation a tragedy resulted. Putokin faced his wife, and the order "Allez!" was given. The wife attacked fiercely, but the husband drew back, contenting himself with parrying the lunges and letting it be seen that he was not fighting earnestly. While it was clear to the spectators of the duel that Putokin had no thought of wounding his wife she fought with only one object in view—to vanquish her husband. In the third bout she sprang upon him and plunged her weapon in his breast. It was the end of the fencing-master.



EDDIE FOSTER

who began his ball career in the Washington club. Foster is a fast fielder, covers a lot of ground, hits well and plays a magnificent inside game. He is a wise player in every way. The only possible objection to Foster might be that he is small. This does not appear to handicap him, for he covers as much ground as any third baseman and his speed in getting after the ball is enough to make up for any lack of inches. He throws to first accurately and fast and from almost any position.

LITTLE GIRLS WORSHIP DOLLS

When They Come Into Possession of One All Poverty is Forgotten Declares a London Woman.

London—"Dolls nourish a sense of joy and romance and therefore conduce to the making of a great womanhood," declared Dion Clayton Calthorp, artist and writer. She was discussing the opening of a hall opposite Westminster Abbey, where there was a show of one hundred thousand dolls for distribution among the poor children of London.

"Come with me in imagination," continued Mrs. Calthorp, "and see what happens in the case of one of these dolls, which we shall call Amelia. Picture a little girl in the slum district, a 'Madonna of the doorstep.' Her eyes do not see the dingy houses opposite, the gray sky or the smoking chimneys. Neither do they see the dirty pinched faces and ragged clothes of the other children in the street. She is looking at the magic vision of her dream. In her thin arms she holds Amelia and every now and then steals a look at the doll, just to be sure that she is still there.

"Her face takes on a faint glow. Amelia has golden locks, a spangled dress with ballet shoes, a wide balled skirt, rosy cheeks and a steady, placid smile. The radiance of Amelia fills the little mother's heart. Cold winds sweep up the street. The child draws a bit of dirty shawl over Amelia. If a king's crown and scepter lay on the ground at the foot of the 'Madonna of the doorstep' she would not pick it up. Before the doll came, the child possessed nothing—now she possesses everything."

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

In the case of some editors, the dislike of Hon. R. L. Borden is more than a habit; it is a disease.

It was a pillow slip that led to the detection of the murderous priest in New York, and there always is a slip of some kind to betray a murderer to justice.

What adds much to the contentment of the country at present is the fact that the Cabinet ministers are really earning their salaries.

Says the Department of Agriculture: "Eat what you want when you feel like it." We would applaud the advice lustily were it not for the fact that it is not easy to get the things we want to eat.

Miss Annie Kenney, who has succeeded Mrs. Pankhurst as the leader of the militant suffragette has, as her photograph shows, a chin shaped like a battle axe, and seems to be otherwise well qualified for the job.

The story that a man in Omemee saw a white rattlesnake a few days ago ought to interest the License Inspector, for it is quite clear that some one is shipping booze into that Local Option village.

We have been looking for it for the last two or three days and knew it was bound to come because the temptation to make a pun was too great to be resisted. Mr. J. D. Armstrong, a well known traveller, blew into our sanctum the other day while in the city, and said that the row over building the new dam at Fenelon Falls was not a good thing, by a damsite.

Two Good Years

Pretty good Government down at Ottawa when you consider that it's only had the job two years. Those two years have been great years for Canada, years of phenomenal expansion in trade and revenues, of increases in our national wealth and improvement of transportation and trading facilities all over Canada. Public money has been used in the execution of great national undertakings, and with all this there has been a record-breaking reduction in the national debt.

How to Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice raspy?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrh germs.

"No one can know better than I the enormous benefit one gets from the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Westvale, P.Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, ear noises, headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath weak. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit last two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size, 50c, sample size, 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Lord Methuen as Governor-General

If the announcement that Field Marshall Lord Methuen is to succeed H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, as Governor-General of Canada, proves to be correct, this appointment, like the choice of the Duke for the premier position in the Overseas Dominions, ranks high among the fruits of supreme moments in British history. All the world worships success; the worship of success, it is sometimes said, is one of the weaknesses of democracy. In appointing Lord Methuen Governor-General of Canada, the Imperial authorities have said, in effect, that they consider Canada above that weakness. Here is a man worthy to stand in a distinguished line of succession. If he comes he will come without the glitter of popular achievement.

Success or failure is, to a great extent, a matter of circumstance. The Boer war, in which Lord Methuen was prominent, was quite as remarkable for its failures as for its successes. General Buller went out to South Africa convinced that he was going, not to victory, but to defeat. Buller was a fine soldier; he did not hesitate to go to defeat. After his return he tried, once or twice, to explain his non-success, but those lapses into the weakness of self-vindication are forgotten. Lord Methuen is also a fine type of soldier. With a fortitude superior to that of his commander-in-chief, he has never attempted to explain how this thing or that happened. He did his part and left the judging of how he did it to others. Roberts at Paardeberg; White and Hunter at Ladysmith, and Baden-Powell at Mafeking, did no more. Neither did that greatest of modern soldiers, Lord Kitchener, when he brought military science to bear upon the problem, do more than his part.

Lord Methuen is a good soldier, who has displayed qualities which stood him well in war, and should bring him distinction in peace and politics. As the success of the Duke of Connaught and the representative of the King in Canada, he may be expected to add to the dignity of an office which has been filled by some of the most distinguished men in the British Empire.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

NEW REGULATIONS FOR LIFE-SAVING

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The board of steamship inspection has just concluded drafting life-saving regulations for all Canadian vessels, which contain radical changes from the old order of things. The changes have to be approved by the government.

The new regulations grew out of the world-wide demand for reform in marine rules, following the Titanic disaster and will go into force at the opening of navigation next spring.

Particularly important are the changes with regard to vessels certified to carry passengers. The first law laid down in respect to these is that they be required to carry lifeboats "in such number and of such capacity as shall be sufficient to accommodate the total number of persons which the ship is certified to carry."

The captain or owner of a foreign-going ship, before it clears from port, must declare before the collector or other chief officer of customs that the life-boats actually carried will be sufficient to accommodate all persons that will be carried at any time during the voyage to foreign ports and back again to Canada. The appliances for launching the life-boats must be of such a character that the lowering into the water can be done speedily, efficiently and safely.

The rules further provide that all life-boats shall be efficiently equipped, and, in the case of foreign-going vessels, shall be fully supplied with provisions and with appliances which make for the greatest possible comfort of the occupants.

One approved life-jacket shall be carried for every passenger and member of the crew, and a proportion of these must be of suitable size for children.

The new rules will be submitted to the government, and it is practically certain they will be approved.

There is a drastic new rule proposed in regard to the use of searchlights. It is as follows:

"Any master or pilot or any steam vessel who shall flash or cause to be flashed the rays of the searchlight into the pilot-house of a passing vessel shall be deemed guilty of misconduct and shall be liable to have his certificate suspended or revoked."

NEW SIDE WALKS IN MONAGHAN

There have been several inquiries at The Times, as to who built the sidewalks, on the new roads that have been opened up in the south end of the city, or rather as it has transpired, in North Monaghan. Upon inquiry we find that this is the enterprise of certain individual parties, and not as was supposed, the work of the council of Peterborough.

One result of the action it is reported, is the erection of a number of houses on these lots which have been purchased, and the general centering of real estate interest will likely be seen in this district.

Morrow and Albertus streets, for such are the names that have been given to the newly opened property, extend east from Lock street, practically to the river edge, and Sherbourne streets cuts north and south from Lansdowne to Albertus. On Morrow street there are a few houses built, while on Albertus, there is only one, while provision has been made for drainage. It is evidently the intention of the owner of these lots to make these improvements, and then sell them, so that the buyer would have to pay the frontage tax.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—The Examiner is on the warpath once again, trying yet another try to get the scalp of our member. Ever since Sept. 21st, 1911, it has been suffering from fits of rage and hatred of Mr. J. H. Burnham. What is the reason of all these fits? The reason is so plain that everyone knows it. Up till Sept. 21st, 1911, the boss of the Examiner was a big man—the biggest man for miles around, and he let everyone know it. He was the great "I AM." On Sept. 21st he ceased to be the great big man, the chief guy, and from being the great "I AM" he fell down to being the great "I AM NOT." Naturally, such a lofty tumble hurt him some, and when he had been picked up by his weeping friends and had received first aid, his rage broke out, as his new position came home to him. He first got enraged with the electors, and The Examiner informed them that the election had been won over the hotel bars in the city. This was tantamount to saying that most of the electors were the worse for drink when they voted. After the storm came a great calm, and when The Examiner recovered from fit number 1, some of its common sense came back to it, and it realized that it did not pay to insult the electors by telling them Tory beer had influenced their votes. But true to its nature, the Examiner had to abuse somebody, so it abused the new member. Every now and again, especially around the latter half of September, the memory of its first fit, causes it to have a series of new fits, and it tries the old remedy—abuse Mr. Burnham—to the amusement of that gentleman and the disgust of every elector. Now one easily understands why The Examiner got so sore two years ago. It is after all, only natural that after being everybody and everybody else for so many years, to have such a bitter tumble down to being nobody and nobody at all, it should have a few violent fits. We all expected it to get wild after such a knock-out blow, but why does it stay wild all the time? What keeps it going in fits two years afterwards? The answer is the same. It is —Mr. Burnham who is the cause of all these wild exhibitions of rage in The Examiner. And when you look at things you can't wonder at it. Before the election The Examiner boastfully boasted that it would beat Burnham to a frazzle and beat him easily. Mr. Burnham and the electors showed The Examiner how weak and foolish that pitiful boast really was. But sad to relate, Mr. Burnham not only made The Examiner look silly two years ago; he has made it look silly ever since. That is the way of it: Notwithstanding the disastrous defeat of the election boasts, it boasted again. It told us all in big black type, that Mr. Burnham never could, and never would, do half so much for Peterborough, as its own boss did. What happened? We all know how foolish and childish that boast has proved to be. In two years our member has done more for Peterborough than Mr. Stratton did all the years he represented us. That is why The Examiner gets more fits and worse fits all alone. That is not all he did to give the grit organette fits. We all know—everyone in the city knows —Mr. Burnham has done what our late member COULD NOT DO; he has given us our rifle range. For eight years The Examiner kept telling us its boss was going to get us a rifle range. It preached such a beautiful serial story of that rifle range; that lots of people bought new rifles, and went into raptures as they read the touching and eloquent descriptions The Examiner featured of the great brand new rifle range its boss was getting for them. Time sped on; the years rolled round; the same as they always do, and the Examiner rolled on in the same sublimely simple way it always does, but the rifle range did not come. It failed to materialize, and the sale of rifles slumped. Why didn't our late member get us the long promised rifle range, everyone was waiting for? The truth is sad—but must be told. HE COULD NOT GET IT. Why he couldn't get it is easily seen by those who know the state of things previous to 1911, in the Grit party here. No, the truth is: Mr. J. R. Stratton did not and could not keep his promise. He failed and failed completely, and everybody knows it. Now comes the sequel. Mr. Burnham had not been our member for eight months before he got it all settled. We were to have the rifle range his predecessor failed to get for us. Fancy, in eight months our new member succeeded in getting for us the rifle range that our old member could not get in eight years! That meant more fits for The Examiner. No wonder is it that it gets sore and keeps sore with our member. Again, while the election of 1911 was going on, our late member found it convenient to put up one or two rusty looking mail boxes and as usual the Examiner advertised its generosity. The great "I AM" had opened his heart, and at no expense to himself, had put up a few melancholy looking mail boxes. Then once again our member annoyed The Examiner. He actually put up ten times as many mail boxes as Mr. Stratton, and not only erected them, but had them painted as well—a little oversight on the Hon. J. R.'s part he didn't paint his mail boxes. They were useful, but not ornamental. Mr. Burnham erected more mail boxes and painted them; they were useful and ornamental, too. That meant another series of fits for the Examiner. Then our member secured new mail routes—again fits for the Grit press.

Well, space forbids us telling all the improvements Mr. Burnham has secured for our city and all the fits The Examiner suffers from in consequence. Mr. Burnham, as we all know, has secured more for our city in two years than our late member did all the years he represented us. [illegible] docks, custom house, canal, &c., &c. The Examiner can neither forget or forgive him, for proving himself so superior to its boss, our late member. That is why it keeps so sore with Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

The great Grit boss sat on a high wall
The great "I AM"—he had a great fall;
All the grit papers and all the Grit's pen
Can't put the big boss up there again.

Percival G. S. Webb.

BALKAN STATES AT IT AGAIN

Paris, Oct. 3.—Balkan fireworks are blazing again in a most dangerous fashion. This is attributed in official circles here to the action of Austria and Italy in indiscretely encouraging the Albanians who, after all, are wild tribes, always fighting among themselves or with their neighbors, war being their normal condition.

French diplomacy fears unpleasant surprises from the Balkans, first owing to the aggression of the Albanians in Servia. The latter power is resolved to invade Albania, where the revolt is nourished by Austrian officers and by Bulgarian refugees. Moreover the war party in Servia announces its determination to "annihilate the Albanians." Second, Enver Bey, head of the war party in Turkey, whose influence is greatly increasing, is preparing to attack Greece, and by the aid of the revolting Albanians regain the provinces which Turkey lost."

Enver Bey after his political and military success in securing Adrianople begged the sultan not to congratulate him until he had re-conquered Salonika and Kavala.

Meanwhile the Greek soldiers, tired of war, want to get back to their homes, just as the Turks are getting their second wind, as it were. In spite of the unexpected re-lighting of the Balkan fire brands, the French official conviction is that this new conflagration can be localized.

Saw a Woman Drown

"You are the most miserable specimens of men I have ever seen," said the West Middlesex coroner at an Uxbridge inquest on Miss Ellen Brunfield. Evidence was given that two men saw her in the river immediately after she had fallen in and that one of them went to the police station a mile away while the other remained on the spot.

White Paper Glare

An electrical authority has attempted an analysis of glare from paper. It is well known, he says, that glare in any of its forms diminishes the effectiveness of an illumination. We are able to see printed letters because of the contrast between the dark letters and the bright back ground. The reflection from commercial papers is a combination of diffuse, or widely spread out, reflection and specular or mirrorlike, reflection. The greater the amount of diffusely reflected light compared with the specularly reflected the less is the annoyance from glare. Those who have difficulty in forming an idea of these two kinds of reflection can construct a model of a semi-diffusing paper by placing a clear, plain sheet of glass over a white mat surface, such as a blotting paper. The glass will reflect specularly, while the blotting paper reflects diffusely.

Calendar Stone of the Aztecs

The famous Aztec calendar stone, now in the National Museum of Mexico, is a block of basalt weighing 25 tons and having a diameter of 11 feet, illustrating the head of the sun god in a diadem bearing hieroglyphics representing the divisions of time and the Aztec method of numbering the years. The number of days in their year was 365, as in ours. Each year had a different emblem repeated every four years. The first year was called Tochtli, or rabbit; the second, Acatel, or reed; the third, Tecpatl, or flint; the fourth, Calli, or house. The years were further arranged by thirteens, four such periods making a Mexican age. When the City of Mexico was taken by Cortez in 1521, and the great temple destroyed, the calendar stone was left in the square. It was buried in 1558, and not recovered again until 1790.

HANDS UP

Shot by Fellow-Student at Essex School—Would Not Box

Once more the danger of young people being in possession of firearms has been demonstrated. The practice nearly ended in the death of Manuel Coelio, a Spanish student at Forest House School, Woodford, when Frederick Sauri, sixteen, a Mexican, also a student at the school, was charged with attempted murder. Inspector Ellis saw the injured boy lying on a table, with a bullet-wound in his stomach, and a doctor was attending him. In consequence of what he was told, he informed Sauri that he would be arrested on a charge of attempted murder, and when they walked into the latter's bedroom he said:

"We were playing here with boxing gloves, and I said, 'Shall we box?' and he said, 'No, no.' I said, 'Hands up! Hands up!' I took the revolver from the top of my desk and put it close to his stomach. I said, 'I will kill you.' I had no intention of shooting, but the revolver went off. The revolver fell on the floor, and he began to cry. I took hold of him around the waist and assisted him to the nursery. I am very sorry, as he was my best friend."

The inspector added that Sauri also told him that he purchased the revolver for $5 about three months previously, had the revolver in question—an automatic one—with three live cartridges in it, was handed to him by one of the masters at the school. On the floor in the prisoner's bedroom was a spent cartridge and also a live one.

In opening the case, Mr. Bolton (prosecuting) said the scholars in the school were mostly foreigners, who stayed there. Coelio and Sauri went out for a walk, and Sauri alleged that Coelio had played some trick on him, and he would "have it back on him in some way." Sauri tried to entice Coelio to box, but he would not, and Sauri said, "I [illegible] won't fight, I'll take [illegible] kill you." Whether [illegible] he would not say, but it was certain that the pistol was loaded, and that it was fired by Sauri. Coelio had since been at the London Hospital, where the bullet was extracted.

Coelio, a youth of sixteen, said when they got back to the school they went into Sauri's room and put on boxing gloves. Sauri wanted him to box, but he would not, and took off the gloves. Sauri then said, "I'm going to shoot you," and picked up a pistol, which was loaded, and "took aim." He then unloaded the pistol, "because he did not want to shoot me," and, believing there was no other cartridge in the revolver, pulled the trigger.

Mr. Melville (defending) said, having heard the evidence of the injured lad—for they could not call him a prosecutor—he felt that there was no evidence to show that the affair was other than an accident. After it occurred somebody appeared to have lost his head and sent for the police.

The case was dismissed.

CARRIERS REFUSED TO PROCEED TO THE DREADED SPOT

News has been received from Southern Nigeria of a remarkable discovery just made by Mr. P. Amaury Talbot, a District Commissioner, of what is known as the "Sacred Lake of Life," on which, according to popular belief, the existence of a hundred thousand people depends.

When, some months ago, Mr. Talbot returned from extensive travels in unknown parts of Nigeria, he announced as one of the most interesting discoveries the finding of the Lake of Dead in the Oban country. This he visited after great difficulty, and in spite of the fact that porters and carriers refused to proceed to the dreaded spot. The scene about the lake, he said, was full of mystery and dread.

The surface of the water was absolutely still, and round about were ten-foot high bushes, bearing what looked like great tufts of creamy flowers. These, however, proved to be nests of tree frogs. The place was a sanctuary for all wild things, for no hunter would dare to penetrate the bush to this fearsome place. Hither, the natives believed, came by night the ghosts of long dead Ekoi, to drift in sad companies, hopeless and wailing, over the surface of the water. On Mr. Talbot's return to Nigeria he found that the news of the discovery of the Lake of the Dead had brought to light the fact that another sheet of water to which mysterious powers were ascribed existed in the neighborhood of Ikot-Obo, the chief town of the Ibibios, and one afternoon Mr. Talbot and Mr. Eakin, accompanied by Mrs. Talbot and her sister, set out to endeavor to locate it.

Hitherto the knowledge of the lake had been kept a jealously guarded secret from all Europeans, and not even the natives, with the exception of the high priests, had been allowed to approach the sacred water—the dwelling-place of the greatest deity of the race. Access to the lake was through a sacred grove so cunningly contrived that a stranger might pass within a few yards, yet never find the holy pool. Mr. Talbot and his party, guided to the spot, found that the water was full of great fish, on the welfare of which depended the life of the Ibibio race. The fish were so tame that they fed from the hand of the reigning high priest, the only native human being allowed to look upon the water. Formerly many victims were annually sacrificed here, though at the present day human life was not permitted to be taken.

Countless legends had grown up round the spot. It was said to be placed by its first guardian, the Thunder God, under the care of a python and a leopard, who consciously kept watch and ward, and destroyed anyone rash enough to seek to penetrate its mysteries. It is especially sacred as the dwelling-place of the most powerful Deity—the Great Mother—whose symbol is a holy rock facing the entrance. Near by the travellers found a second pool ancillary to the lake itself. In the centre of this is a palm tree, near which, in the water, are stationed a man, a girl, and a boy, who bear the name of the goddess, as they were granted to the parents in direct answer to prayer.

PATHETIC STORY OF SUFFERING

Moving Little Play That Was Acted Too Often

A couple of clever swindlers victimized several fashionable hotels at Vienna. It appears that a well-dressed man was in the habit of frequenting the hotel lounges, apparently waiting for a friend. Soon after his arrival, in would come a very poorly dressed woman and appeal to the gentleman, to whom she was to all appearances a total stranger.

She would tell a pathetic story of privation and suffering, and the benevolent hearer would draw the other guests' attention to her case and start a collection for the woman, placing a piece of gold in his opera hat. Soon a substantial sum would be obtained and handed over to the woman, who would depart with tears of gratitude. The gentleman would later leave the hotel.

But the game was played once too often. A visitor who had seen a similar performance enacted some time previously at another hotel at which he had been staying recognized the well-dressed stranger and gave information.

The stranger was followed, and was found in the street sharing the money with the woman. They were arrested and identified as a married couple, who spent their time travelling from town to town all over Europe in order to carry on their operations.—Central News.

WILL CARRY THEIR OWN HYDRO AREOPLANES

German Battleships and Cruisers are to be Equipped

The Berlin correspondent of The Naval and Military Record announces that at an early date it is probable that all the larger German battleships and battle-cruisers will be equipped to carry their own hydroaeroplanes. The idea is, of course, only in the experimental stage, and is far away different from the huge cumbersome erection of timber that made us the laughing stock of the flying world last summer. The Germans are quite aware of the fact that the aeroplane does not require a launching-platform able to stand a traction engine, and as a matter of fact have no launcher at all. The machine is simply let down into the water on the lee side of the ship and skims off the surface. The machine is carried on the ship out of the way of the artillery and out of the way of the general working quarters, and is housed in a light steel-framed shed to protect it from the weather. It is proposed to provide four machines to each of the latest type "Dreadnoughts" and two to the smaller craft. The Pritzig aerodrome near Dantzig where the budding naval flyer is taught his business, is a busy spot just now, and conveys a different impression from the usual empty "nothing-doing-to-day" look of our military and flying centres. The Teuton places no little reliance upon the hydroaeroplane.—The Sphere, London.

Too Lazy to Marry

During the hearing of a case at Blackburn it was stated that an organ-grinder and a woman had been keeping company for three years but they were "too lazy to get married." They had declined the offer of a Catholic priest to marry them without fee.

MENTAL LABOR IN OLD AGE

Writer Points Out How Impossible it is to Mark Culminating Point in Man's Career

Who talks of fifty years as the culminating point in man's career? Were all the great work performed by men even beyond seventy erased from history the human race would be bereft of some very proud achievements.

Jefferson founded a university by his own activity after he had passed three score years and ten. John Quincy Adams, although he had been president of the United States and five times a foreign minister, wrought as a congressman by far his greatest deeds after he was sixty-five. His robust father sat in a constitutional convention when he was almost a nonagenarian. Franklin did valiant service in helping to frame the Constitution of the United States after he had turned a serene and contented eighty.

Seventy saw Gladstone so vigorous that he was still good for the greatest battle of his political life and a premiership. England's foremost living historian, Sir George Otto Trevelyan, who is even now completing his monumental story of the American revolution, occupied a seat in parliament half a century ago. This brilliant nephew of Lord Macaulay has done his best writing since reaching seventy.

Germany's first emperor, the venerable William, saw Waterloo as a soldier, but fifty-five years later he was directing armies at Sedan and welding an empire after the fall of Paris. John Bigelow at four score was mentally as virile as a boy, and his powers as an author were not dimmed.

Our own Frederick Fraley was an active business man, president of a bank and the national board of trade since the Spanish-American war, and yet he was prominent enough in 1844 to serve on a committee that welcomed to Philadelphia Daniel Webster.

Science is making lives longer than they were in the days of our grandfathers, and also far more comfortable. The same agency that prolongs bodily vigor will surely lengthen the age of man's most virile mental labor.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself, and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of them have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar secretions as effectually as SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES. This preparation is successfully applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbo-hydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects, whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly request anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We can also send testimonials from some of the most prominent people in nearly any town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

WHY BURNS FOUGHT

Canadian Boxer Took a Beating to Satisfy Newspapers

Tommy Burns feared Jack Johnson and gave the big negro fighter his chance at the title only because the newspapers forced him to do so.

Tommy admits this freely in a letter to a friend in Chicago. Burns says he believed every boxer in the world has some man he is side-stepping and doesn't want to fight. He then goes on to say that Johnson always "had his goat," and that he never had any idea of fighting him.

Indeed, Tommy made the price for meeting Johnson so high, as he thought, at the time, that no promoter in the world would have the courage to make a bid for the match.

Further, Tommy freely admits that he is sorry now that he ever did such a thing, and it will be a life-long regret to him. Still, as an afterthought, Burns expresses the opinion that he would have won from Johnson had the battle been permitted to go along to the finish, and not been stopped by the Sydney police.

"The press is to blame for the match," says Tommy, "as I was practically forced into it."

How Pat Proposed to Make the Petrol Hang Out

Of course you know the story of the Irishman who was painting a fence, and who worked for all he was worth in order that he might get his job finished before the paint gave out.

The hero, again, is an Irishman, but this time not a painter. Oh, no; a chauffeur driving his master home from the country late one evening.

The nearer the car approached the town the faster it went until, when about ten miles out, it was travelling at something like fifty miles an hour.

"Steady, man, steady!" cried the master to his servant. "If you go on like this we shall get held up by the police."

But the Irishman set his lips firmly, made the car go faster still, then hissed:

"We're still nine miles from home, sir, and I've only enough petrol for three. If we hurry we may just do it!"

SHAVING SOAP HOLDER

Keeps Soap High and Dry Above Bottom of Shaving Mug

An ingenious barber designed a simple and effective holder for shaving soap in the cake. A metal platform has a pair of bowed springs crossing each other at right angles mounted under it. The ends of the springs project beyond the edge of the platform. To place the contrivance in the shaving mug, all that is necessary is to bend in all four ends of the springs, lower it to the bottom of the mug and release the springs. They fly out and engage the sides of the cup, holding the platform firmly several inches above the bottom of the receptacle. The edge of the platform is turned up at points to keep the soap from sliding off. The advantage of this device is the saving of soap, which, when it lies in the bottom of the mug in the midst of water and lather, wastes away to a large extent.

GEORGE OF GREECE A GOOD MONARCH

The assassination of George of Greece came at the very time when his life work was being crowned with success. That life work was the creation of a nation in the land which had been the cradle of European civilization. It was no light task. The [illegible] of Greece [illegible] years ago that it was an [illegible] task. More than one eligible [illegible] son was offered the chance to try it and was held back by the wise advice of [illegible] who reasoned from precedents that only assassination or deposition after insurrection could be the lot of the man who seated himself upon the throne of Greece. In a sense the gloomy prediction was fulfilled in the case of King George, but assassination did not come till after a reign of 50 years had raised a half-savage population of warring tribesmen into a compact, orderly and civilized nation and had brought under its flag a greater territory than was ever at any one time united into a single government even during the most glorious days of ancient Greece. This, of course, assumes that Philip and Alexander are properly to be classed as Macedonians and not as Greeks, and that the Greece of their day was a conquered province, not an independent nation. Upon the resignation of Otho in whose reign there was constant insurrection the powers of Europe looked around for a successor, and finally offered the throne to Christian of Denmark's son William who at the age of eighteen was crowned King George of Greece. This Danish boy was no weakling. He could ride, run, box, fence. He was an unerring marksman. He is said to have repeated the feat of Lysander by swimming the Hellespont. After he had established himself, he was accustomed to enter athletic contests incognito, and he carried off many a prize. Once he was denounced as a professional and precipitated a riot, escaping only by disclosing his identity to the police. He mastered the Greek language, making himself a genuine Greek in speech and sentiment. He established a constitution and a free parliament. He adopted the principle of ruling by allowing his people to rule themselves, but at the same time he kept always a guiding hand on public affairs. When rival politicians quarreled so fiercely that it became impossible to form a ministry, King George calmly announced that he could get along without a ministry and he did until the politicians came to their senses. He fostered education. He gave all possible aid to the study of Grecian antiquities for the purpose of reviving among the modern Greeks a proper pride in the achievements of their ancestors. And [illegible] of all he set himself to develop an army, for he was ambitious to place his country in a position in which it would no longer be obliged to depend on the protection of the powers for its existence.

Terrible Life and Death Combat Between Officer and Private

A fearful struggle on a mountain pass, near a precipice of 2,000 feet took place on the south slopes of the Bernina Range, between an Italian officer and a private.

An Italian custom house patrol under the command of Lieut. [illegible] was visiting the Alpine posts in the Valtelina on the Swiss frontier, when the officer had to reprimand a soldier named Coll. This man determined to have revenge.

When the patrol was away on duty, Coll attacked his officer on a lonely Alpine pass, and attempted to throw him over the precipice. A [illegible] struggle followed, the men being of about equal strength and [illegible]

The officer, to save his life, [illegible] through an artery in the [illegible] of his subordinate, who collapsed owing to the loss of blood. Soon afterwards the patrol arrived and carried [illegible] a hospital in the valley, where he recovered.

The military court which had [illegible] tried the case at Milan took into consideration the sufferings and [illegible] good conduct of the soldier, and [illegible] of the refusal of his officer [illegible] prosecute, and sentenced Coll to [illegible] months' imprisonment.

A Soda Lake

Signor Cavicchioni in his official report upon his visit to Lake Magadi, in East Africa states that the lake in question is a lake of pure soda, and although at a distance it appears to be of water, its surface is solid and dazzlingly white. The lake comprises 30 square miles, and at present a considerable quantity of soda is daily taken from it, while a railway is under construction from the lake to the Uganda Railway. When the railway is completed it is expected that Lake Magadi will supply soda to the world.

MAKES MOUSE TRAPS

A London Woman's Big But Peculiar Business

Mrs. Mary Ann Eaton, London, is probably the most picturesque personality among those engaged in the queer trades of London, says the Mail. Misty Ann, as she is familiarly known in Homerton, has attained the age of 88. Her husband, the founder of this mouse trap business, died some years ago. Since then Mrs. Eaton has carried on the great work.

She does not make the mouse traps herself. This is done by workmen in the back room of her little home. Mrs. Eaton does the brainwork. She spends the day answering letters from her customers headed "Re mouse traps." The traps are those simple affairs of wood with wire bars and the little catch which the mouse in his greed for cheese sets free. It would be impossible to estimate the number of mice that have been lured to their doom by this simple device. The traps are small, but the machinery for their making is on a large scale. There are steam saws for cutting the wood, and the back of the little home is quite an engineering shop. Mrs. Eaton is not unnaturally convinced that the simple trap is best. "I do not believe in these new-fangled affairs," she said. "The old-fashioned ones are good enough for me." Mouse traps from Homerton are sent to all parts of the country and also to the Continent, and Mrs. Eaton's customers are chiefly the owners of large warehouses.

Diversions of a Tramp

The occupants of a Welsh farm were alarmed by the unusual behavior of a tramping laborer who had been allowed to sleep at the farm one night on the promise of work next morning. The man demanded breakfast before commencing work, but was refused a meal until after he had done something to earn it. He then chased the farmer's wife round the house with a pitchfork. He afterwards went into the farmyard, where he proceeded to milk a cow and drink the milk, afterwards stealing a number of eggs and trying to escape on the back of a pony which was in the yard. He was, however, prevented from doing so by two laborers, who chased him from the premises, but he outdistanced his pursuers.

Four Hundred Trout Poisoned

No fewer than 400 trout were killed as the result of a collision on the railway at Okehampton, Devon. The accident occurred during shunting operations, and a tank containing several tons of vitriol was thrown over an embankment into the road. The acid poured in streams down the roadway and flowed through a field and down gulleys to the river. Many of the poisoned trout were found to have had their skin peeled and bleached by the acid. A number of dead eels were also found on the banks of the river. They had evidently jumped out of the water to escape the vitriol. In a roadside garden which it invaded the acid destroyed every plant it touched.

Postman Travelled 500,000 Miles

It is computed that John Cooker, the letter-carrier between Dale and Milford and the villages of Hubberston, Herbrandston, St. Ishmael's and Marloes, Pembrokeshire, for forty-nine years, who died at the age of eighty-six, travelled 500,000 miles in performing his duties.

Tobacco Round the Legs

In connection with a burglary two suspicious-looking characters, known to the police as expert thieves, were apprehended in the vicinity of Farm Cross. When the men were searched rolls of tobacco were found coiled round their legs. The tobacco was identified.

Dying Consumptive's Suicide

It was shown at the inquest at Godmanchester on a consumptive named Walter Sandifer that he paid the doctor for attending him, and while the medical man was receipting the bill in another room Sandifer shot himself dead. The doctor said the man would have died a natural death within three days.

Explosive Manufacture

South Africa not only supplies itself with explosives, but exports dynamite in large quantities to Australia and the East. The saving to South Africa by this means is estimated to be £125,000 a year.

WHO WAS "TOMMY ATKINS"

How the Soldiers of Great Britain's Army Came by the Name

Questions are sometimes asked as to the origin of the expression "Tommy" or "Tommy Atkins" as applied to a soldier in generic form. Mr. J. H. Leslie explains in Notes and Queries that its origin dates from the year 1815, when the "Soldier's Account Book" was called into use by a War Office circular letter of August 31, 1815. Sample forms of the book (for cavalry and infantry) accompanied the circular letter, and in every one of them the name "Thomas Atkins" is used as a specimen name. Atkins evidently could not write, as in the several places where his signature occurs it is given as "Thomas Atkins X his mark." This, Mr. Leslie adds, [illegible] disproves that "Tommy Atkins" was suggested by the Duke of Wellington in 1843 as being the name of an especially brave soldier in his own regiment—the 33rd.

The Oldest Presbytery

Nearly a century and a quarter ago the Presbytery of Truro, N.S., was organized and stands in the honored position of being the most ancient in the Dominion of Canada. At the time of its formation, it consisted of five ministers and two elders. Owing to scarcity of laborers it could do little to supply the spiritual necessities of the sparse population.

Here and there throughout the Maritime Provinces there were several families of Highlanders who had emigrated from Scotland who were not privileged to enjoy the ministrations of the Gospel. One of their own number, after the formation of the Truro Presbytery, the Rev. J. McGregor, D.D., was the great pioneer of the Presbyterian Church in Nova Scotia.

Two Suicides in a Family

An inquest was held at Warrington on James Tomlinson, forge laborer, who was found hanged in his bedroom. It was stated that Tomlinson served in the South African War, and was in receipt of eightpence a day pension. His wife committed suicide seven years ago, when he gave way to drink. A young daughter stated that about eighteen months ago her father sent her brother to a reformatory, and this worried him a good deal.

Memorial to Executed Men

It is proposed to place two memorial tablets on the mausoleum in Loughmore Cemetery, county Tipperary, where rest the remains of the Brothers Cormack, who were hanged in Nenagh Gaol in 1857 for the alleged murder of a land agent named Ellis. The remains were removed from the gaol to Loughmore about three years ago.

In Bed For 51 Years

As the result of an accident to her spine a woman named Hatherley, of St. Mary Church, Torquay, took to her bed fifty-one years ago, and has lain in bed ever since. In the same room for over seven years lay her deaf and nearly blind mother, who died at the age of ninety-seven.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You

Fine Results in Two Weeks

Miss Nellie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, pimples gone, and I felt I was growing well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

A Runaway.

Last night about nine o'clock, on George street, a horse attached to a farmer's buggy, which was standing near the Y.M.C.A. bolted, and but for its capture about a block away from where it started, there might have been a serious accident, either to pedestrians or other traffic.

Now that the contractors are through with laying the cement foundation for the paved street, they are busy extending the sidewalks on the north side of Hunter street to the gutter, thus making an addition of nearly two feet to the width of the sidewalk, and at the same time fitting in the gutters.

Rally Sunday.

The services at the Mark street church to-morrow will take the form of a rally. In the morning there will be a rally in the Sunday School, and the service will be addressed by Mr. H. B. Cowan. At night a platform service will be held, when Mr. R. J. Downie, and Mr. G. N. Baker will be the speakers. Special music will be rendered at both services.

To Be Deported.

At a session of the police court this morning McLaughlin, alias McPhee, the Sells-Floto circus employee, who was beaten with a tent pin, and who has been in the Ross Hospital, was charged as a vagrant. The man has recovered sufficiently to enable him to depart. He was therefore remanded until Friday until deportation papers are made out.—Lindsay Post.

Millbrook Fair.

The Millbrook Fair, that annual event that arouses so much interest in the district in which it is held, drew large crowds yesterday, notwithstanding the fact that the weather was of none too bright a character. Several Peterborough people motored in the morning, and helped to swell attendance. The fair has never before been of so bright a character, and the exhibits were far above other years. The directors stated that so far as they know, this was the most successful fair that has ever been held.

GIRLISH, WRINKLE-FREE SKIN EASY TO HAVE

(From Pilgrim Magazine)

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the world have been using the Saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles, and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus [illegible]. The formula is: Powdered Saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint.

Another wonderful facial "beautifier and rejuvenator that has become quite a rage in the United States, as in Europe, is mercolized wax. Druggists report a great demand. The wax literally absorbs a sallow, blotchy or withered complexion, giving the fresh vigorous, healthy-hued young skin underneath a chance to "breathe" and to show itself. Applying the wax at night, like cold cream, washing it off mornings, will completely renovate a poor complexion in a week or ten days. One ounce usually is sufficient.

Nicholas Keating.

Another old and much respected resident of the district passed away on Saturday last in the person of Mr. Nicholas Keating.

Mr. Keating had suffered from heart trouble for some time and for the past few weeks had been confined to his bed where his condition gradually grew worse until he passed away as stated above.

A native of Otonabee where he was born seventy-two years ago, Mr. Keating moved to Percy in 1866 and resided there until a couple of years ago when he sold his place and came to reside in Hastings with his brothers. He was of sterling Irish stock and one of the district's most highly respected men. He leaves to mourn his loss, one sister, Mrs. Rahal, of Hastings, and five brothers: William, Thomas and Patrick, of Hastings, Michael, of Peterborough, and Richard, of Saginaw. The funeral was held on Tuesday morning to the Church of Mount Carmel and R. C. Cemetery and was largely attended.—Hastings Star.

Morning Papers.

Toronto Mail and Empire—As a result of a conference yesterday with Superintendent Arundel, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the late delivery of the Toronto morning papers which has been troubling the citizens of Peterborough for some time, will soon be done away with. Yesterday C. H. Pennefather, president of the Peterborough Board of Trade; Hon. J. R. Stratton and representatives of the Toronto morning papers waited [illegible] and laid before him their grievances. He assured the delegates that the matter would be remedied as soon as possible, and it is likely that in the very near future a freight train will be run from North Toronto to Peterborough carrying the morning papers. If this service is secured the people of Peterborough will have the Toronto papers shortly before eight o'clock each morning.

INDIGESTION ENDED, STOMACH FEELS FINE

Time "Pape's Diapepsin!" In five minutes all Sourness, Gas, Heartburn and Dyspepsia is gone.

Sour, gassy, upset stomach, indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia; when the food you eat ferments into gases and stubborn lumps; your head aches and you feel sick and miserable, that's when you realize the magic in Pape's Diapepsin. It makes all stomach misery vanish in five minutes.

If your stomach is in a continuous revolt—if you can't get it regulated, please, for your sake, try Pape's Diapepsin. It's so needless to have a bad stomach—make your next meal a favorite food meal, then take a little Diapepsin. There will not be any distress—eat without fear. It's because Pape's Diapepsin "really does" regulate weak, out-of-order stomachs that gives it its millions of sales annually.

Get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. It is the quickest, surest stomach relief and cure known. It acts almost like magic—it is scientific, harmless and pleasant stomach preparation which truly belongs in every home.

Increased Membership.

It may not be generally known that for some time past the Membership of the Young Men's Christian Association has been steadily increasing, and the paid membership is now over six hundred. In September the statistics on the attendance in the gymnasium were the highest of a number of years. Tuesday night, the Employed Boys' Leader Corps was organized with the following officers:

Hon. Pres.—J. J. Thompson.
President—Bert Hamilton.
Vice-Pres.—Geo. Nelson.
Sec.-Treas.—Lang Thompson.

MATRIMONIAL

McCrea—Stanley.

Western papers report the marriage at Hanna, Alta., on Sept. 26th, of Lottie Stanley, of Hanna, to H. G. McCrea, late of Peterborough.

Lailey—McLaren.

A very pretty wedding took place in the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Toronto, yesterday afternoon at 2.15, when Grace W., daughter of the Hon. Justice J. J. McLaren, was united in marriage to Dr. W. W. Lailey, of Edmonton, Alta., the Rev. Dr. Aikens officiating.

The bridesmaids were: Miss Grace Grange, of Napanee; Miss McConnell, of Ottawa, and Miss Lena Deane, of Peterborough.—(Extract from Toronto World.)

Mr. J. Carruthers, of Prescott, is in the city.

Mrs. R. H. Turner, Gilmour street, held a reception at her home Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, of Belleville, who is the guest of Mrs. Turner.

Mrs. C. Conner, of Smiths Falls, is the guest of her son, Rev. F. A. Conner, of Peck street Baptist church.

Rev. Father John R. Quigley, who was in the city for the consecration of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, left yesterday for his home in Rockford, Ill., U.S.A.

Mr. J. C. Birmingham, who for the past three years has been in business here has gone to Peterborough where he has a lucrative position as manager of a large hardware concern. Mr. Birmingham will be greatly missed here. We wish him every success.—Campbellford Herald.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY OF THE P. C. I. A. A.

Interesting List of Sports Run Off at Nicholls' Oval—The Cup Winners.

No slight interest was manifested in the Field Day of the local Collegiate Institute, which was held yesterday afternoon at the Nicholls' Oval.

There were a large number of students present, and all the events were well contested. The following is a list of the events and the results:—

100 Yards, Jr.—Green, Patterson, McNeilly. Time, 12 3-5 sec.

220 Yards, Sr.—McDonald, Horsfield, Hopkins. Time 27 1-5 sec.

220 Yards, Jr.—Patterson, Green, Soward. Time 28 4-5 sec.

440 Yards, Jr.—Patterson, Soward, Austin. Time 1 min. 4 sec.

Putting shot—Peever, Cahill, Pelfer.

Sack race—Harstone, McNeill, and White.

880 Yards, Jr.—Soward, Patterson, and McNeilly. Time 2.40 2-5.

Mile, Sr.—McDonald, Austin. Time 5.10.

Mile, Jr.—Soward, Austin, Green. Time 5.14.

Girls' Suit Case Race—Miss Drew Stocker.

Obstacle Race—K. Harstone, McNeilly, Green.

As to whom would secure the Senior Cup at one time seemed doubtful, as Horsfield was three points ahead of McDonald, who subsequently got all the running, before the half mile race. Here McDonald jumped into prominence and carried off both half and mile race in fine style.

He is now the possessor of the Senior Cup and Fred Soward a sturdy little runner holds the Junior Cup.

All present enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent, and will doubtless watch for the same events next year.

The following were the field officers:

Starter—J. J. Thompson.
Timers—Mr. Morris, Mr. Pettit, Mr. Firth.
Clerks of the Course—Mr. McKay, Mr. Harvey.

Some good records were made in several of the events. In the 440 Jr. Patterson made the distance in 1 min. 4 sec. the former record for that race, for the Juniors, being 1.05 2-5 sec. In that race he really ran well, and deserved to win.

To put a 12 lb. shot a distance of 31 feet 7 inches is by no means an easy accomplishment, and yet this unique record was made yesterday by Mr. Manley Peever, who easily beat the former record of 30 feet 10 in.

Young Fred Soward certainly set things humming when he ran the half in 2 min. 40 2-5 seconds, and only just beat out the previous record of 2 min. 50 sec.

SPORTS

Rugby.

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the Rugby season at Nicholls' Oval this afternoon when the fast Capital team of Toronto will be the opponents of the Peterborough O.R.F.U. team. The Petes had a good workout at Central Park on Thursday night and are in good shape for the hard contest before them to-day. Langley was elected captain during the practice.

The game will be called sharp at 3 o'clock, and there will undoubtedly be a big crowd on hand to see the Petes break into organized Rugby circles again.

The Petes line-up will be as follows:

Centre Half—Kirk.
Quarter—Breckenreid, Mullenhagen, Legendre.
Centre Scrimmage — Ecclestone, Long, Davis.
Inside Wings—F. Turner, Bartlett.
Middle Wings—Davidson, Langley, (captain), McCrimmon.
Outside Wings—Lewis, Noble, Smith, H. Rogers.

The players are asked to be ready to leave the Y.M.C.A. at 2.30 o'clock for the Oval.

On Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds the following games will take place in the Football Competition:

Cockneys vs. Glaziers at 1.45 p.m.
Magpies vs. Costers at 3.45.

These games will be hard fought and every lover of football should come and see them.

Mr. A. Day will referee both games.

GOVERNMENT TO INTRODUCE PROGRESSIVE MINING LAW

Present System of Administration by Regulation is Considered to Be Defective

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—It has been left to the Borden Government to initiate mining legislation long desired by miner and prospector alike. The effect of it will be to protect human life and also give [illegible] the assurance that [illegible] capital will at least have the assurance of stability guaranteed by legislation passed by Act of Parliament. At the next session of parliament, Hon. Louis Coderre, Secretary of State and Minister of Mines, will introduce the bill, which has been under consideration since the prorogation of Parliament.

System is Faulty.

It has been found that the system of regulations is unsatisfactory, affording no protection whatever to the prospector or miner. The regulations not being passed by Parliament but by order-in-council, can be changed at any time and it is felt that considering the amount of capital invested and the nature of risks entered into, that a law subject only to the control of Parliament itself would prove of greater stability.

Greater Protection Given.

The new act will afford greater physical protection to the Canadian miner. The number of accidents in the various provinces of Canada is greater than in any other country in the world. While last year the death rate in Great Britain, with over a million miners employed, was only 1.19 per thousand, in British Columbia it was over 3 per thousand. In Ontario it is computed that one miner is killed or hurt every third day.

As to Jurisdiction.

The difficulty encountered in framing a Dominion mining law is found in the question of jurisdiction. The [illegible] laws at present in force in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario and British Columbia were passed before Confederation, while Alberta only last year passed a new provincial mining law.

Provincial Rights Maintained

The rights of the provinces will not be interfered with by the new law. During the past year the Government has been in conference through a representative with the commissioners of mines of the various provinces on the subject and certain difficulties have been cleared away.

Any law, which goes far to protect human life, will be welcomed by the Canadian people and legislation which protects human life and man's earnings is doubly welcome. The Borden Government is winning its way by sound and healthy legislation.

To Improve Meat Supply

It is true that the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa got busy in regard to increasing the meat supply. The following programme is suggested:

1. The establishment of municipal abattoirs through the country.
2. The raising of stock by small farmers.
3. The formation of co-operative live stock associations by the farmers of the whole country.
4. The formation of boys' pig clubs, similar to the boys' corn clubs in the United States, which the U.S. Government has been fostering for several years.

IRISH PROBLEM IS GIVEN SOLUTION BY SOBER MINDS

Political Capacity of British People Comes to the Rescue --See No Bloodshed--Sir Edward Moves to Exclude Ulster

London, Oct. 3.—Universal belief of the quiet solid men in all parties here to-day is that the instinctive political capacity of British people is asserting itself and slowly but surely moving towards settlement of the Irish problem by consent and without bloodshed.

Court influence is potent with Mr. Asquith in this direction and after all it is not Sir E. Carson or Mr. Redmond, but English political leaders and English people who must say the decisive word. The solution which finds the most influential support is the total or partial exclusion of Ulster from the Home Rule Bill, which will be passed next session, leaving Ulster or the Orange Counties of Ulster with power to come in at any later stage, as was done with certain Canadian Provinces and Newfoundland under the British North America Act.

The latest speeches of Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Smith suggest they are likely to agree to this method.

Mr. Redmond keeps discreet silence on this point, but many influential Nationalists believe financial and other advantages of the Union must in time operate as powerfully and speedily with Ulster as they did with Prince Edward Island and British Columbia.

The average Englishman is increasingly humiliated by the long drawn out Irish wrangle and refuses to believe the solution is beyond combined British statesmanship.

Influential Unionists feel extremely uncomfortable over the latest developments of Carsonism, especially its [illegible] incitement to [illegible] to take the law into its own hands. We showed a well known English Unionist member of Parliament, of Winnipeg, the message announcing that Orangemen offered Carson a regiment of 500 drilled men to aid Ulster to fight. He said: "I detest some disruptionist tendencies of the Home Rule bill, but these Carson capers are nothing short of criminal folly. More sober counsel must prevail if incalculable harm is not to be done to the cause of law and order everywhere."

On the other hand Sir Edward Carson's sympathizers declare the Winnipeg movement is admirably calculated to awaken Englishmen to the Imperial peril involved in the attempt to drive loyal Ulster to extremities.

A NEW SYSTEM OF HEATING C. P. R. CARS

Montreal, Oct. 5.—Canadian Pacific Railway trains are being equipped with an entirely new heating system. The main features of the new system will be the possibility of regulating the heat in the cars, and preventing overheating in mild weather. In very cold weather the maximum heat is turned on, and no one suffers inconvenience. The method is known as the vapor heating system, and it is in operation on several American lines.

The arrangement is a very simple one. It consists of a series of separate heating pipes which are [illegible]. These valves are turned on and off according to the condition of the car. In sleeping cars the heating apparatus for the parlors and toilet rooms is distinct from that of the main sleeping apartment. This is to allow of the sleeping quarters being kept cool without discomfort to people who wish to remain out of bed.

BUFFALO AFRAID OF OUR WATERWAYS

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 5.—Warning against Canadian competition in water transportation was sounded by John A. Bensel, State Engineer and Surveyor in an address to the Chamber of Commerce here last night. Canada, he said, is spending many millions on its waterways.

"If Buffalo is to retain her position as a great transportation point, her people must never lose interest in the state waterways," he said. "Future competition with Canadian waterways must not be overlooked."

Mr. Bensel predicted that, within two years, boats drawing twelve feet of water will be able to go from Buffalo to New York. The barge canal between Buffalo and Oneida Lake is practically completed and work on the remaining sections is progressing rapidly.

ENGLANDS NEW SUBJECTS

London, Oct. 4.—According to a report issued recently by the British Home Office, 1,284 aliens became naturalized Britons during the year 1912.

Of this number, Russia supplied no fewer than 493; but there was only one Bulgarian who decided to abandon the troublous land of his birth in favor of our more peace-loving country.

On the other hand 200 Germans renounced their allegiance to the Kaiser, and chose to become loyal subjects of King George V.; whilst, despite the prospect of having to serve longer with the colors in the future, only 23 Frenchmen deserted the Republic, so greatly in need of men, and came to Britain, there to be naturalized.

Of these new Britons, 1,235 have taken up their abodes in England and Wales and 583 of them are living in London.

MR. R. B. BENNETT MAY BE MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—There will probably be legislation introduced at the next session to provide for the creation of a new department. The Interior department has been growing in size for some years, and has reached a size which makes it difficult for one man to handle. It is proposed to separate the Immigration Branch from the Interior Department, and join it to a Branch of public health. Health and immigration will be placed under a Minister, while the remainder of the present Interior Department will be given to the care of one man. It is not unlikely that owing to his professional training in medicine, the new portfolio in health and immigration will be assigned to Hon. Dr. Roche, while the new member of the Government who will succeed Dr. Roche as Minister of the Interior will likely be Mr. R. B. Bennett, M.P., of Calgary.

ELABORATE WELCOME GIVEN AUSTRALIAN BATTLESHIPS

Melbourne, Oct. 5.—The battle cruiser Australia and the light cruiser Sydney met the other vessels of the Australia naval unit in Jervis Bay to-day, preparatory to entering Sydney harbor officially to-morrow.

Elaborate arrangements have been made for an enthusiastic welcome. The authorities are in agreement in recognizing the present as the most important national celebration since federation.

Premier Cook sends the following message to the Morning Post, London: "The event shows that we are grown up and prepare to bear our full share in the development of the family estate and to assume active responsibility for the preservation of Imperial patrimony. Our motto on this occasion, is 'One life, one flag, one fleet, one throne. Britons, hold your own.'"

COMPENSATION ACT UP NEXT SESSION

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—That Sir William Meredith's final report on the Workmen's Compensation Act will be printed and ready for distribution in about ten days, was the opinion expressed yesterday by Hon. I. B. Lucas, who has been working with the Government commission in the matter.

It seems probable that the bill which will come before the Legislature, at the next session, will differ very little from the draft submitted last session. It looks now as though this important matter may be dealt with before the next session has been long on its way.

EARLY SESSION IS NOT LIKELY

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—While the matter has not finally been decided, all indications still point to the session not starting before January.

The Ministers are practically a unit in favor of the late session, believing that as much will be accomplished by spring as would be the case if the House assembled in November.

Speaker Landry, of the Senate left to-day for a three-months' trip to Europe, and Hon. G. H. Perley goes within a fortnight. It is presumed that neither of these gentlemen would go on an extended visit abroad without being assured that the session is not impending.

The agitation for an early session comes mainly from Ottawa tradespeople, hotel men, and the sessional staff, paid so much per day. The average M.P. does not relish six months in Ottawa.

Knew It All the Time.

School superintendent [illegible] the terrified class—"And now I want you boys to tell me who wrote 'Hamlet.'"

That same evening the superintendent was talking to the squire of the village. The superintendent said:

"Most amusing thing happened to-day. I was questioning the class over at the school, and I asked a boy who wrote 'Hamlet.' He answered, tearfully, 'P-p-please, sir, it wasn't me.'"

After loud and prolonged laughter, the squire said:

"That's pretty good, and I suppose the little rascal had done it all the time!"

PLOT TO MURDER LORD KITCHENER

New York, Oct. 5.—A cable from Rome, published here this afternoon, says: "Plans to assassinate Lord Kitchener, it was said here caused his sudden departure from Venice last week, announcing that he would remain a month and on Sunday he left suddenly.

It was learned to-day that the arrival of 18 Mohammedans from Egypt made the British warrior uneasy. International police have the Mohammedans under surveillance."

C. N. R. LINE TO OTTAWA BUILT

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Sir William Mackenzie, accompanied by a number of leading Canadian Northern officials arrived here last night, having come Toronto to Ottawa and then to Montreal. The president said that by taking the Canadian Northern steamer from Quebec, the trip can be made from Western Ontario to Bristol, England, without leaving the C.N.R. system.

He announced officially that the entire road from Montreal to the coast would be linked up by next Dominion Day, and that they would be operating the system from the port of Montreal to their Port Mann terminals by November, 1914. Sir William returned to Ottawa during the night.

EXTRADITION OF LUNATIC UNKNOWN

Concord, N.H., Oct. 5.—Supplementary briefs opposing the extradition of Harry K. Thaw, as requested by the State of New York, were filed with Governor Felker to-day by a local law firm. With the briefs were submitted telegrams from the governors of 32 states, all of whom advised the attorneys that they had no knowledge of a request having been made before for the extradition of a lunatic.

The message from Wm. H. Painter, acting governor of Missouri, is typical. He said: "Executive department of this state has no knowledge of record of extradition sought or honored for escaped lunatic or insane person charged with crime where person sought had been adjudged insane."

Thaw's attorneys set up that the requisition papers show no indictment against their client; that on the date of the alleged conspiracy to escape from the lunatic asylum at Matteawan, N.Y., he was insane and so legally incapable of committing a crime; and that on all the evidence it should be determined that the real purpose of New York State is to obtain the return of Thaw to Matteawan. They argue that it is the legal duty of the executive to release the requisition.

Further briefs on behalf of Thaw will be submitted Monday.

LITTLE LAD WAS DROWNED IN THE RIVER LAST NIGHT

Sad indeed are the circumstances that surround the death of little Ian Grant, aged 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant, of 595 George street. He was drowned last night, about ten minutes past six o'clock in that part of the river at the foot of Edinburgh street.

No one seems to know just exactly how the accident happened, as no one except a few small lads were present when the accident happened. As near as the Times could find out, the lad left the house shortly before six o'clock and a few minutes later his brother saw him playing with a companion on Aylmer street. The unfortunate little lad must then have gone straight to the spot where the accident happened, and as far as can be ascertained, was throwing a stone in the water, when he over balanced and fell in. His screams and those of his companions attracted a passerby, and the little lad was pulled out by a man, who is not known. He was taken to the residence of Mrs. Patterson, 630 Water street, where Mrs. Putty, a nurse, did all in her power until the arrival of Dr. Morgan and Dr. McPherson. Little Ian was then taken home, where after working for an hour and a half, the doctors pronounced life to be extinct, resuscitation being of no avail.

Mrs. Grant moved to Peterborough from Toronto only five weeks ago, and is heart-broken by the loss of her little boy. As she said: "It seems as if I came here to lose my little boy."

The general public extend to Mr. and Mrs. Grant the most sincere condolence in their sudden and terrible bereavement, the weight of which is keenly felt by both mother and father.

Coroner Dr. Greer informed The Times last evening that an inquest has been deemed unnecessary.

No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral.

WAR OFFICE IS HELPING CANADA REFORM MILITIA

Col. Lyons Biggar Hopes to Establish a Canadian Aldershot Shortly

London, Oct. 4.—The following officers sail to-day: Col. Clark, Brandon, who has happily recovered from congestion of the lungs. His wife accompanies him; Colonel S. Jamieson, of Edmonton; Col. Howard, of Brantford, and Mrs. Howard; Col. Weigall, of Windsor, and Mrs. Weigall; Col. and Mrs. Bull of Brockville; and Major Robertson.

Col. Watson of Quebec, has already sailed. Col. Edward Leckie, of the Seaforth Highlanders, Vancouver, is going to Shorncliffe to pay a fraternal visit to the officers of the parent regiment of Seaforth Highlanders there.

Col. Cruikshank, of Calgary, who in the absence of Hon. Col. Hughes, had charge of the Canadian officers during the visit to the French manoeuvres, says:

"We were much impressed with the discipline and general smartness and endurance of the French troops, but we particularly noted the good behaviour of the troops in the English manoeuvres. There was no sign of intoxication or rowdyism."

Colonel Lyons Biggar of the Canadian permanent force, having thoroughly inspected the new war office system of motor transport and supply, says he hopes to secure a thoroughly qualified officer to handle a similar Canadian service.

The inferiority of Canadian roads is a great drawback. He also hopes to establish a Canadian Aldershot. Col. Biggar especially commended the British system for the settlement of farmers' and others' claims for damages done during the manoeuvres.

All the officers seem to praise the arrangements of Col. Sam Hughes and the unvarying kindness of the War Office officials, who show the keenest desire to assist Canada to co-ordinate methods to increase the striking power of the combined forces of the Empire, whenever the occasion for united action arises, as it did in South Africa.

BORDEN FRIENDLY TO QUEBEC PEOPLE

Montreal, Oct. 4. — The Conservatives have issued pamphlets to Chateauguay electors, in which the argument is made that Premier Borden has given better treatment to the French than the Laurier Administration. One of these pamphlets argues that Mr. Borden has appointed fifty French translators for the blue book so that they could be translated quickly.

"Under Sir Wilfrid Laurier we would not have blue books printed in French for at least two years after they had appeared in English," is a statement this pamphlet contains.

Other brochures contend that Mr. Borden has spent more money in the province of Quebec than his predecessors, and statistics are given purporting to prove this statement.

Plenty of literature of a laudatory character is also being issued by the Liberals.

FINAL EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO SAVE CHARLES GIBSON

Toronto, Oct. 5.—A last effort to save the life of Charles Gibson will be made to-day when T. H. Lennox, K.C., his counsel, will appear before the full cabinet to plead for a commutation of the death sentence. Mr. Lennox has already made application for an appointment and will leave for Ottawa to-night.

Meanwhile every effort is being made by friends of the condemned youth to secure at least 25,000 signatures to a petition asking for executive clemency.

Son of Murdered Man.

As was expected, the Hebrews of the city are signing the petitions in large numbers. This is partly owing to the action of Mr. Harry Rosenthal, son of the murdered man, who has addressed a letter to Hon. W. T. White, acting Minister of Justice, [illegible] a commutation.

Charles Gibson, himself, has issued a statement to the public pleading with them to take up his case. He emphatically denies having killed Rosenthal, although admitting his connection with the selling of the junk, and his presence on the bridge at Strachan avenue on the night of the murder.

Send in the Petitions.

Mr. C. F. Storey, who was active in circulating the petitions asking for a new trial, stated this morning that there are still a large number of these petitions in the hands of those who circulated them. They will prove of value to Mr. Lennox when he applies for a commutation.

COBOURG WOMAN RENEWS APPEAL FOR DIVORCE

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Lenore Power, of Cobourg, is again applying for a divorce from her husband, R. J. M. Power, a rancher of Wawa, Saskatchewan. Last year a divorce application was the subject of both a debate and a vote in the House of Commons, something which had not occurred for years.

Her application was recommended by the Senate Divorce Committee and passed the upper chamber. When it reached the private bills committee of the lower house there was a lively fight in it. Several members took strong ground that the evidence was not sufficient. The divorce passed the committee by a majority of one and had to run the gauntlet of the Commons. There an [illegible] in the gallery made a hurried exit. A vote was called. Premier Borden voted for the divorce and Sir Wilfrid Laurier against it. The majority was in favor of refusing a divorce. Nothing daunted Mrs. Power is renewing her application this year. Notice is given in this week's Canada Gazette.

THESE ARE NOT CHRISTIAN NATIONS

Chautauqua, N. Y., Oct. 4. — That both America and England are not Christian nations was a declaration made here in a sermon by the Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of London.

"Is the church in your land or mine able to speak with authority so as to make men listen," he asked. "The governments are not asking the church what she thinks on great moral issues. They make laws without consulting the church. Great moral problems are discussed and solved and the voice of the church is silent.

"The church has lost her authority. The great world acknowledges the church, patronizes us, but never trembles when we speak. The government here gives us toleration, but never takes from us the settlement of questions of morality. If the church has lost her moral power it is because she has lost her spiritual power.

"You can't have a Christian labor church or a Christian [illegible] church. Christianity has nothing to do with [illegible]. It is the business of the church to [illegible] them."

LONDON PAPERS PRAISE WILSON

London, Oct. 4.—The London newspapers devote much space to-day to the passing by the United States Congress of the Underwood-Simmons Tariff Bill, while the Glasgow Herald prints a supplement to its edition containing the bill in full.

The Chronicle says: "The President has fought for and won a policy of genuine fiscal reform."

The Daily Graphic says it is an extraordinary personal triumph for "a university professor, unfamiliar with the wiles of Washington," who succeeded where Roosevelt and Taft failed, the secret being "his own single-mindedness of purpose. The result means the inauguration of freer trade."

The Times says that the tariff is not intended as a step toward free trade, but that "what its framers aimed at, and what they accomplished, is a wide and wholesome reduction of that immoderate protectionism which led Chamberlain to describe the American tariff as something he would never think of urging Great Britain to adopt."

AN ETOMOLOGIST

A Yorkshireman's Success in Rearing Butterflies

One of the best-known entomologists in Yorkshire is Mr. H. W. Head, who now lives on his butterfly farm at Burniston, near Scarborough, but who did all his pioneer work while residing in Scarborough. Mr. Head was the first to breed the butterfly in captivity, and to-day he owns the largest butterfly farm in the British Isles, covering between three and four acres, mainly devoted to the breeding of butterflies and moths. In the rearing of hybrids Mr. Head has been remarkably successful. He has raised altogether [illegible] up to a dozen, and he recently showed specimens of a yellow form of the green-veined white butterfly the sale price of which is about $7.50 each. But what he is always on the look-out for are "sports," that is, butterflies or moths of well-known types but differently marked than the ordinary. There is a good demand for these, and a single specimen will fetch pounds. It is all a matter of luck. Since he has been in the business Mr. Head has tried to breed a black variety of the tiger moth but he has not succeeded. At the haven live butterflies are not supplied. The live stock does not go beyond the caterpillar, or the fertile eggs of any particular kind of butterfly or moth in stock; but his clientele is cosmopolitan and world wide in extent. A jet black butterfly valued at $5,000, as big almost as a robin, with wings measuring 11½ inches from tip to tip, was brought to London from New Guinea by A. L. Meek, an explorer in the service of Hon. Walter Rothschild, millionaire owner of the famous private museum at Tring Park. Several new varieties of butterflies, by far the largest in the world, were discovered in New Guinea by Meek. "I had to take up from the coast," he says, "cases of pearl shell, tomahawks and beads of all kinds before I could get the assistance of the natives in capturing the butterflies. The natives shoot them with four-pronged arrows which they use for killing birds. The female giant butterflies are black or brown or white, but the males are splendidly marked in green or gold. I brought back also with me a butterfly which has a hairy body, on account of the intense coldness of the Snow Mountains. A couple of my native boy hunters were killed and eaten by New Guinea cannibals, who kindly sent me back the bones."

POLITICS AND STAMPS

Innocent Little Stickers for Letters Have Caused Lots of Trouble

A piece of careless engraving led to the withdrawal from circulation, on political grounds, of two of the recently issued postage stamps bearing the likeness of King George in robes of state. Among the insignia worn by His Majesty in Mr. McKennal's portrait is the Order of the Indian Empire, in the representation of which a diminutive figure of an elephant is shown. Now, on the majority of the stamps there is not the slightest room for doubt as to the animal that it is intended to represent, but on the two annas and three annas values the elephant was poorly executed, and bore a remarkable resemblance, not to the stately lord of the jungle, but to the humble domestic pig! This fact did not pass unrecognized by the Mohammedan population of India, by whom the lowly porker is regarded as an unclean animal strictly forbidden by their caste and abhorred of all true Moslems. The grave affront to their religious prejudices, arising from the necessity of applying their tongues to this profane image, caused an immediate outcry amongst the native followers of Mohammed, who declined to have anything to do with the despised stamps; and as a concession to their scruples it was decided that the offending values should be called in, and a fresh printing made with the unfortunate elephant correctly delineated.

This is by no means the first occasion on which the postage stamp was the subject of internal and even diplomatic contention, particularly in respect of religion and party politics.

A case in point is proved by the first issue of Sudanese postage stamps. The paper upon which these stamps were first printed was water-marked with a curious device known to architects as a quatrefoil—a cruciform flower, bearing a strong resemblance to a Maltese Cross.

No sooner had the stamps been placed in use, however, than urgent representations were made to the Sirdar, Lord Kitchener, by the local Sheikhs, protesting against the presence of an emblem of the Christian faith on the stamps of the Sudan, and it is said that a native rising was narrowly averted by the immediate issue of an order for the watermark to be changed to the more appropriate star and crescent of Islam.

The first attempt at introducing the ubiquitous postage stamp into Corea in the year 1884, was fraught with disaster, being followed by a severe anti-foreign outbreak, attended with bloodshed and incendiarism.

Diplomatic rupture between Spain and the South American Republic of Colombia arose out of the design of one of the stamps issued by Colombia in 1910 to mark the centenary of her freedom from the Spanish yoke. On one stamp was depicted an incident in the country's history, when a number of citizens of Carthagena were publicly executed by order of the Spanish Government under circumstances of the deepest treachery. Naturally, the Spanish Government did not relish this raking up of past grievances, and threatened to recall the Spanish Minister from Bogota unless the issue was suppressed. This was accordingly done.

FAMILY OF FROGS HAS ONLY ONE EYE

Intended for Snake Food, Their Cyclopean Deformity Saved Their Lives

Way out in the valley of the Humber River, Ontario, where silence mostly prevails through the bulrushes and the lowhanging willows, there was discovered a new colony, which is known as the family of One-Eyed Frogs. Ostracised by their double-eyed brethren, they dwelt in a pool of their own, back in the swamp from the Humber River, where the good Elies winked one eye in sympathy. In many ways nature has contorted herself in an effort to be mystical, but perhaps the most useless joke of all was played upon these little green amphibious animals of the genus Rana. The little creatures were discovered late in the fall and, destined originally for no higher ambition than food for snakes, this shortage of nature prolonged their life and made them a curio, to be preserved by Mr. William James, Toronto. Mr. James has had a naturalist's leanings for some time, his plans being to keep a black snake as pet through the winter. To keep the reptile, a store of frogs must be provided, and Mr. James in search of fodder for his pet, penetrated the marshes of the Humber and there discovered the Family of One-Eyed Frogs. He was first astonished at the ease with which several of these usually elusive animals fell captive, and examination showed the reason. They were built with one Cyclopean eye placed askew.

The remarkable part of Mr. James' searchings was that while all the frogs in the neighboring ponds had been duly equipped by nature with two eyes, all the denizens of this isolated pond had but one.

USING WASTE PAPER

Many Ways in Which They Prove Valuable in the Home

Tissue and all soft papers are splendid for polishing windows. The texture is firm enough to stand a good deal of rubbing, and as the parts soil they can be thrown away. In this way a clean surface is applied to the glass throughout the operation. In using a duster the soiled part is rubbed again and again on the glass. This small point is worth considering.

Paper is the one great agent for cleaning the outside of frying pans and saucepans. A brisk rubbing with pieces of old newspapers will remove every trace of soot from the outside of these vessels after using, then they can be washed readily inside and out. The inside of a frying pan, too, readily yields its grease and burnt color if well rubbed with a piece of paper. When all the grease has been removed it can be washed in the usual way with no difficulty whatever.

Candlesticks, when made hot, will yield all their grease to soft paper far better than to a duster.

When grates and stoves are blackleaded the use of paper daily will keep up a high polish and remove all spots, thus saving more labor in re-black-leading.

Brass work and door plates will keep their lustre longer by being rubbed with paper than with a cloth.

Newspapers put down evenly and thickly under carpets not only make the carpet feel trebly thick and soft under foot, but moths, disliking the printers' ink exceedingly, will not lay their eggs near it. It is also said that moths will not molest furs if wrapped in newspapers when put away.

Shredded and finely cut paper makes a very good filling for cushions and pillows.

FUNDAMENTAL BASIS OF LIFE

Protoplasm Has Furnished the Scientists With a Most Interesting Subject for Discussion.

Protoplasm—the literal translation of which means "the first form made"—was the name given by a German scientist in 1846 to the slimy granular, semi-fluid contents of vegetable cells. It looks like the white of an egg, and it can be analyzed into four chemical elements—carbon, oxygen, nitrogen and hydrogen. It is now recognized as the fundamental basis for all life; the smallest particle of it goes through what is known as the cycle of life—birth, motion, feeling, feeding and reproduction. While in some unconscious way it grows membrane for a covering, or a little nucleus, a kernel somewhere within it—science calls it a cell. These cells are the same in plants and animals. Prof. Jacques Loeb showed the importance of this fact. Although plants, he explained, have no nervous systems, they have "instinctive movements." In analysis of instincts, he found together, in the cell common to them, the plant and the worm at the foot of the plant (as some day, perhaps, the tree of life and the serpent may be bound); and he called their reflex actions "tropisms." Then he pointed out that tropisms are [illegible] acts—that moth and fly and ivy leaf move, in spite of themselves, by chemical subjection to light, heat and odors (which the scientist calls sensations")—From the Metropolitan.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Hon. Adam Beck at Renfrew told of many uses to which Hydro-Electric power could be put. He only forgot to mention that it is also an excellent vote getter.

Canada was the largest buyer of automobiles and automobile parts from the United States last year. This country bought 7,200 cars in the year, valued at $9,200,000. This gives a good idea where a large portion of the money of the country is locked up.

Tons of the finest fruit are rotting on the trees in the Okanagan Valley, while the owners of it are being ruined. A few hours' ride from there poor people cannot get fruit, almost a necessity of life, because of the high prices. What a mess we do make of things!

An ungallant remark was made yesterday on Hunter St. in the hearing of The Times, to the effect that in the old country women sweep the paved streets. We might remark just here that there are two good and sufficient reasons why women should not be employed as street sweepers. One is that they are not fit for the work, and the other is they can't vote.

A man out in Alberta was soundly thrashed by his wife for not paying his newspaper subscription after she had given him the money with which to do it. May her crown be trimmed by the best celestial milliner, and her harp have an extra string. There should be more of such women and there would be no difficulty in securing for them the suffrage.

MORE WONDERS OF FLIGHT.

The performances of Garros, Pegoud, Thulin and other birdmen in the past few days with their wanton aerial iconoclasm make any record breaking seem almost common-place. But one cannot fail to be thrilled by the extraordinary exhibitions of speed at the Rheims international meet.

Maurice Prevost, the winner covered 124.28 miles in 59 minutes, 45 and 2-5 seconds. Vedrines and Gilbert, second and third respectively, were close behind, all three covering the distance at a speed greater than two miles a minute. Nothing in the annals of aviation or in any other branch of locomotion is comparable to this. It adds further confirmation to the plausibility of transatlantic flight in the near future.

Quit Sniffling, Stop Sneezing, Cure Your Cold Now

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured me thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months treatment; smaller size, 25c. and 50c. all druggists and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A short time ago Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, took a fortnight's holiday for the first time in many years. The result is that he is under the doctor's care and must spend some weeks in absolute rest before he will be able to resume work in his laboratory. Mr. Edison's holiday, a simple two weeks' relaxation roaming in the great out-of-doors, played him out. The man who for years has worked twenty out of twenty-four hours, giving to the world marvels of inventive genius, found that fourteen days in another environment, conducting no experiments, were actually more wearing on him than the immense mental concentration and strain involved in his daily work.

This is not hard to understand. The great wizard's laboratory work is part of his life which takes from him with one hand and gives with the other. It is the base upon which he stands, and if he is taken from it he loses his equilibrium and becomes restless. His wonderful brain cries out for what it misses and revenges itself upon the machinery of his system which goes out of gear, with the inevitable result that the doctor is trying to effect repairs. Edison has given too much of his life to his calling to benefit from a holiday as holidays are generally understood. He must work until he reaches the end of the road already marked with so many monuments to his genius.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

NOR A PROTESTANT ISSUE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Would The Times kindly give me a small amount of space, in the interests of farmers, thousands of whom no doubt read your valuable paper.

What I would like to impress upon the farmer is that after fifteen years in power at Ottawa, during which the Laurier government spent not one cent of the public revenues in the expenditure of good roads, and did nothing in the cause of agricultural education; after a Liberal Senate has twice thrown out the Borden government's Highways bill, designed to appropriate ten millions of dollars to be expended in co-operation with provincial governments in the making of national good roads; notwithstanding the Liberal opposition, led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and encouraged by the Globe, did everything in their power to defeat the measure in the House of Commons, the Globe now announces, with hypocritical insincerity that would put to the blush any decent journal, that it believes "the time has come for Canadians as a whole to grapple effectually and efficiently with the perennial road problem—to adopt a constant and consistent policy, and to devote some real enthusiasm and enterprise to working it out upon big, thorough co-operative lines. This project has no business to become a plaything of politicians. It involves too much. Its cost will be great, but its return will be greater."

No body of men, unless it be the set of discredited politicians who misrepresent Liberalism in the House of Commons and the Senate, wants good roads to "become a plaything of politics." Good roads are not a political issue today, despite the efforts of the Globe and its friend to make it such. It is a business proposition with the Borden government and it is the Laurierites who have tried to reduce it to the level of a "plaything of politicians." If the Globe is sincere in its desire to see inaugurated in this country a good roads "enterprise working out upon big, thorough, co-operative lines," let it counsel its own Senator-president, and the other senators, who voted willingly enough with the government in the granting of railway subsidies, because they had "interests to square," to lend their support to the Borden bill to afford a measure of relief to the overburdened farmers of the country.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am, etc.,

David H. Warren.

PANKHURST PUGSLEY'S DREADNOUGHTS.

Pugsley. Oh. my well-beloved,
Emmerson, my tried and true,
Ye who faced with streaming forelocks,
Borden's bolt from out the blue.

In this solemn naval crisis,
You're the sort the country craves,
Men who conjured out of sawdust
Wharves that brave the ocean's wave.

Tell us not that Laurier's projects
Are as dead as withered grass;
Pugsley made a wharf of sawdust,
Why not Dreadnoughts out of gas?

Ships of gas and wharves of sawdust
Can the country ask for more
Than the offering of Obstruction's
Leather lunged and senseless roar.

So while aid from other Britons
Guards the welfare of the State,
By the grace of Pankhurst Pugsley
We'll contribute a "Debate."

AN OLD TIMER.

CANADA GAINS BY THE TARIFF

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—That the new Underwood tariff as adopted in the United States gives the Dominion the benefit of a greater total reduction on articles enumerated in the reciprocity agreement than was offered in the Knox-Fielding agreement itself is shown by a comparison which has been made here, and which may be depended upon as absolutely accurate.

The comparison is made only in regard to articles specified in the reciprocity agreement, and is based on importations into the United States from Canada during the fiscal year 1910, according to the returns submitted to Parliament by Hon. W. S. Fielding in January, 1911.

On that basis the reduction by the United States in favor of Canada under the reciprocity agreement amounted to $4,[illegible]. Taking the same quantities and rates the reduction under the new Underwood tariff would be $4,[illegible]. In other words there is an increased reduction under the Underwood tariff amounting to $105,677 without any concession from Canada.

FIGHT JUSTIFIED

The Conservative contention in the fight against reciprocity was that the incoming democrats would reduce the duties against imports from Canada and that the Dominion ought not to make the enormous concessions involved in the Fielding agreement in return for what would be a very short time [illegible] them for nothing.

Short Paragraphs of British News

A youth named Arthur Pratt, returned for trial at Coventry Police Court on a charge of burglary, had in his possession a Mauser pistol, a false moustache, some spirit gum, and an electric flashlight.

Monster Salmon

A salmon scaling 47½ lb. has been captured in Dernish weir on the lower Shannon. This is believed to be a record fish for that portion of the river. In Lord Monteagle's weirs a few nights ago one of 46 lb. was secured.

Strength of a Hair

A Continental scientist has proved that a single hair will suspend four ounces without breaking, stretching under the process and contracting again. But the hair thus weighted must be dark brown, for blonde hair breaks when a weight of two and a half ounces is suspended from it.

"Woe to the Stranger"

At Tootstown, a property recently acquired by the Estates Commissioners, a good deal of excitement has been caused by the "cutting" of four graves and the erection over them of placards bearing the words, "Woe to the Stranger! The Land of the People! !"

Generous Gift to Native Town

Mr. Herbert Paul, formerly M.P. for Northampton, has presented a row of houses in Finedon, his native town, for poor widows. The buildings are to be known as the Dolben Houses, in memory of his aunt and cousin. Mr. Herbert Paul's father was vicar of Finedon for more than fifty years.

Cow on Fire

At the Valley Police Court, Griffith Griffiths was fined $10 for cruelty to a cow. The cow had been extensively burnt, and it was stated that in places the flesh was quite frizzled as though it had been roasted. The defendant said his woman-servant had dressed the animal with paraffin on account of vermin, and, as she was doing so the cow swished its tail, knocking the lamp over, and thereby set fire to itself.

Life for a Cat

Ernest Ellis, mate of the Hull trawler Sea Horse, who was drowned during the week-end voyage, gave his life to save the ship's pet cat. The cat had climbed into a precarious position over the side of the vessel, and Ellis went after it to rescue it. The skipper leaned over to drag him back, and both fell into the water. The skipper was rescued, but Ellis was drowned. He leaves a widow and a young child.

Cruel Rabbit Coursing

Three colliers were fined by the Ystrad magistrates for cruelty to rabbits in a coursing match. A police sergeant stated that the box in which eight rabbits were confined was surrounded by about twenty dogs "barking and yelling." When a rabbit was put down it was too terrified to move and had to be pushed away. Two dogs were released and caught the rabbit, which they dragged about until a man from the crowd took it from them and killed it.

Bullock in a Bedroom

Some excitement was caused in Wexford by the vagaries of a bullock which ran amok. The animal took refuge in the house of Mr. Moses Murphy, pilot, and climbed the stairs and entered the front bedroom. It demolished a large bed and other articles, and then took a "header" out the street twelve or fourteen feet below bringing down the window frame and sashes. It escaped into the harbor, and swam about for a considerable time before it was captured by means of boats.

Masked Intruder Caught

A struggle in the night with a masked man was described in Widnes Police Court, where Joseph Jackson was remanded on a charge of burglary. Mr. Hughes, a householder, was roused from sleep by his wife and saw a man in the bedroom rifling a dressing-table drawer. He immediately jumped out of bed and gripped the man by the throat. A struggle ensued, and Mr. Hughes pinned the intruder against the wall until help arrived. The man, who proved to be Jackson, was wearing a large black mask.

The Cat and the Pigeons

A novel small debt action decided in Hamilton by Sheriff Shennan involved a claim for damages for alleged loss sustained through a cat entering a loft and killing several pigeons. The sheriff, in dismissing the action, stated that the best fanciers are frequently honest sportsmen. It was preposterous to hold that the cat owner was under the obligation to so control it as to prevent it from killing birds. The pigeon owner must guard against hawks, rats, weasels, or such animals, as well as against cats, and if he caught a cat in "flagrante delicto" he had the right to treat it as he would treat a rat or weasel.

THERE IS PERIL IN CONVERSIONS

Calcutta, Oct. 5.—There is some anxiety here over the effect of a remarkable movement towards Christianity among the lower caste natives which has been developing for some time. These natives are now abandoning their caste ceremonies and Hindu methods of worship.

"The Indian Witness," the newspaper organ of the Methodist Episcopalians, claims that 150,000 natives have been baptized in certain specified districts, and predicts that the conversions will soon number 2,000,000.

While the figures cannot be verified there is no doubt that there is a great Christain wave, and trouble is feared from the resentment of the natives who have not been converted. It is said that persecution of the converts has already begun. Many of them have been beaten, and their property destroyed.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN NATURE

Man With the Grouch Draws His Conclusions From Observation of Pet Pair of Geese.

"I don't believe in suffragettes nor in the so-called new women," said the man with the grouch. "They're against the law of nature!

"I'll tell you why it isn't natural," he went on. "I've been observing life in the barnyard, and I've learned by analogy the real place of woman in the economy of life.

"My wife has started in to raise a couple of geese, and they are the most human things you ever set eyes on. She calls 'em Darby and Joan.

"We have no goose pond, so we've sunk a tub in the backyard for the recreation of the two geese.

"Well, Darby simply owns that tub! He waddles up to it very solemnly the first thing in the morning and takes an eye-opener.

"Joan comes waddling behind him, meek and wife-like, and tries to follow her lord's example. He scolds her and drives her back. She obeys with becoming feminine gentleness.

"Then, with the utmost care and deliberation, Darby proceeds to take his morning bath and make himself beautiful. He spatters in the tub, preens himself and has a beautiful time in his lordly, masculine way.

"When he has entirely finished he cackles with glee, comes out of the sunken tub and waddles off to graze on the new shoots of grass.

"Now that he is through with the tub Joan may have her turn. She may have what is left, now that her lord and master is quite finished.

"It's a lesson in wifely subjection to see Joan make her toilet and then waddle around contentedly in the wake of her proud, domineering mate.

"It goes to show what woman's place in the world really should be, according to the law of nature."—New York Telegram.

ANTIQUITY OF HYMNS

While hymns as we know them today are a comparatively recent innovation in church services, they are a very ancient institution, and existed long before the Christian era. Many important collections of hymns date back to about five hundred years before Christ, though, of course, hymns existed long before that period. Among the collections which have come down to us from then are the Sanskrit "Rig Veda," a Chinese "Book of Odes," the "Buddhist Hymns," the Grecian "Homeric Hymns," and the "Odes of Pindar." "The Latin Hymns," or hymns of the western church, date from the fourth to the twentieth centuries, while the "Lutheran Chorales" date from the sixteenth century. The hymns which play so prominent a part in the services of the modern Protestant churches were not in wide general use until about 1800.

FOSSILS AND GOLD

In Alaska the bones, and often the entire bodies, of extinct animals, such as the mammoth, the mastodon, the reindeer, and the bison, are found most abundantly in layers of soil directly above gold bearing gravels. So intimate is this association between fossil animal remains and auriferous deposits that one scientist, who has just been exploring Alaska, suggests [illegible] prospectors as indications of the metallic richness of the soil. In ancient times both the gold and the bones and the bodies of the animals were deposited at the bottoms of valleys by action of rivers and smaller streams, many of which have now disappeared. Consequently the appearance of fossils is, it is claimed, an almost certain indication that gold will be found in the neighborhood.

BALKED AT THE WOMAN JURY

Ship's Captain Derided Federal Regulations, but Dire Threat Brought Him to Time.

The prospect of facing a woman jury in municipal court was more effectual in making Capt. Brown of the American steamer Lockesaw, comply with port regulations than was the threat of Federal prosecution when Harbor Patrolman Rainey went to the ship to ask him to display port lights and rig a proper gangway. From his berth, whither he had retired early, Capt. Brown commanded the patrolman to a "warm climate."

Rainey replied that there was a federal fine of $500 for the offense; the captain growled from his berth. Rainey threatened arrest; the captain snored.

"They have a woman jury in municipal court," suggested Rainey, "and you will have to face that." Instantly the captain raised his head to his whiskers and the watchman came running.

"All hands on deck," commanded Capt. Brown, "and order the gangway changed and proper lights hung. I won't face a woman jury in any court, and me 60 years old."—Portland Oregonian.

Though wounded several times he still came on. When measured it was found to be seven feet from tip to tip.

Telephones in Canada

A copy of telephone statistics shows that the total number of telephones in service in Canada is 370,884. The total number of miles of wire is given as 980,572. This is divided into urban and rural as follows: Urban, 606,601; rural, 203,610. This indicates that there is one mile of telephone wire in use for every 8.1 of the total population of the Dominion, one telephone for every 19.3, and one telephone for every 2.5 miles of wire.

Written by
DR. DAVID H. REEDER,
Chicago, Ill.

SCALP DISEASES: Part 1—Hair grows upon the body of animals, as well as upon man, somewhat after the manner that plants grow upon the earth. Upon certain portions of the body of mankind, as the scalp of both men and women and the face of man, it should be luxuriant and beautiful, an ornament as well as a protection. It seems to be a law of nature that whenever a thing outlives its usefulness it inevitably decays. Whenever we find the hair used as nature evidently intended it should be used — for protection — it is usually abundant and rarely falls out. What then—shall we not wear hats? To discard them would not only be foolish, but would subject one to the ridicule of his fellows.

Therefore, as we have by adopting an artificial covering for the head, relieved the hair of the responsibility of protecting us from the elements, and reduced its use to that of ornament only, it finds nothing to resist, and grows weak from non-use, from confinement, from lack of proper care and from having the blood supply cut off by the hard, stiff brim of a hat, or, in the case of women, by being drawn into a tight coil over the head, or being burned to death by hot irons—a horrible death. The scalp becomes dry and hard, is not flexible, and the skin of the head adheres to the bones of the skull, frequently causing headaches and an irritable itching. Frequently the hair begins to fall out, and the tonics of all the barbers in Christendom cannot stop it.

The scalp must be kept loose and flexible or the roots of the hair vegetable will not be properly nourished and it will first die and then fall out. A comb is all right with which to straighten the hair preparatory to brushing, but the brush must be used vigorously and daily. Not only must the brush be used in order to keep a healthy scalp in condition, but where the hair has already begun to fall out the following radical treatment must be kept up for some weeks, or even months, if it is the desire to retain the beautiful ornament which nature has adorned us.

First the scalp must be relaxed and softened, so that nutrition may reach every hair follicle without let or hindrance, and our treatment will be a combination of the hydropathic and osteopathic methods of cure, which are both successful, in most cases, but by combining the two there need be no failures. Before retiring at night is about the only time this method can be used by most people. Procure from a reliable druggist or manufacturer, a soap that is made of the finest olive oil and potash. A skillful druggist can make it for you if he does not keep it in stock. It is really, or should be, a soft soap. The hard soaps are invariably made of soda instead of potash, and although most excellent for the skin under ordinary circumstances, are not so good for the purpose now on hand.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5032 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor:—I am twenty-one years old. When I was four I had what we know now to have been Infantile paralysis. The left lower limb is smaller than the right, but I think no shorter. I am lame, but seem to be getting better all the time. I mean, walk less lame. My spine is curved, but not bad. It cannot be noticed. I am five feet, one inch tall and weigh about one hundred pounds. I am nervous, but on the whole my general health is quite good. Live on a farm and do all kinds of work. Do you think there is any cure or help for me? But what I want to know is this. If I should marry and have children is there any possibility that because of my condition they would be deformed in any way? I shall await an early reply. — C. C.

There is no reason why almost, if not entire recovery from the effects of the Infantile Paralysis, may not be obtained, seeing that you are improving continually. Such continued progress will be very much hastened by the use of systematic massage to the affected limb. This should be done regularly three times daily if possible for 10 minutes at a time and a suitable ointment should be used, such as the herb ointment referred to in these columns. The effects of this disease are not transmitted to children. The only possible way in which the latter could be affected would be as the result of difficult childbirth resulting from changes in the shape of the pelvis which have followed the distortion of the spine. Whether or not this is present to such a degree as is mentioned could only be told on personal examination, but it probably will not be. Valuable information on the subject is given in the Home Health Club Book Vol. 2, which would be of great help to you. Changes in the diet would have no immediate influence on the condition, except that a very nutritious one would be best adapted to the most prompt recovery. Milk and eggs should form a large part of it. Baths would not be particularly indicated.

Dear Doctor:—Have had stomach trouble for three months and doctored with no relief. Have severe headaches. Some days vomit, other days not at all. Very sick at stomach that one hardly stand up at times. Get awful hungry, but when I eat, I bloat, and seems to be much wind in stomach. Very thin. What can I take to add flesh. — S. P.

You cannot expect to take on flesh and keep it until your digestion is perfect. The cause must first be found before you can cure the stomach and have good digestion. The fact that you have severe headaches should direct you to a skilled oculist. Eye strain frequently causes just such difficulties as you experience. Similar troubles also arise from worms, tapeworm, from overeating, from bad teeth, improper eating, etc. After proving that none of these conditions exist, write me again and I will tell you how to treat yourself through diet, etc., but you must state your age, height, weight and habits of eating and drinking.

MINERAL WEALTH MANITOBA PROVINCE

Agricultural Province Has Important Deposits of Gold, Limestone, Gypsum and Other Minerals

It cannot be said that a great deal of attention has been paid to the possibilities of Manitoba as a mineral producer. This is as might be expected in a province where agriculture has been and is of paramount importance. And yet the soil is not the only natural asset of any country, and a systematic investigation of the mineral resources must always play an important part in contributing to the development of the whole.

If we associate with the name of minerals such ores as are mined for gold or silver or copper, then it is indeed the case that minerals and good agricultural soil are not as a rule found together in nature. But under mineral resources must also be included materials such as clays, shales, sands and gravels, limestones, marls and coals, all of which are frequently found in districts which support a thriving agricultural population, and all of which call for development in the agricultural areas of Manitoba.

Although certain areas of new Manitoba have a coating of clay sufficient to provide an agricultural soil, the possibilities of revenue lie mainly in the mineral resources, the timber, the fisheries and the water power which the new territory will provide.

Cement and Gypsum

Up to the present time it has been found possible to carry out organized geological survey work only along some of the principal waterways, and private prospecting has been but desultory.

In one district, near the eastern boundary of the Province, and forming the western extension of the Lake of the Woods area, gold mining is an assured fact.

If Portland cement were manufactured from raw materials mined in Manitoba, a very considerable saving in freight rates might be affected. Limestones sufficiently pure for this purpose outcrop at various points on Lake Manitoba, and the necessary clay or shale is available conveniently near at hand. The calcareous Niobrara shales provide a suitable material for a natural cement, and future investigations in this direction may result in considerable increase of activity.

Valuable gypsum deposits are mined in the vicinity of Lake St. Martin, and in the country between Lake Manitoba and Lake Winnipeg; other beds may yet be found. Borings have shown the existing depths from the surface. A pure friable sandstone at the base of the sedimentary strata of the Province will provide a good material for a future glass industry.

Fertilizer Obtainable

A good phosphatic scale which is found in the western part of the Province will come into requisition as a fertilizer when the soil begins to show signs of exhaustion. Limestones are already a valuable asset, not only from the point of view of building stone, but as lime and rubble producers. Extensive northern areas of limestone are awaiting development, and for the furtherance of the "Good Roads" movement not only the limestones, but also the available sand and gravel ridges will be utilized. With regard to fuel, the value of peat is being more and more emphasized in Canada and elsewhere; and Manitoba has her fair share of this commodity. Of lignites, Turtle Mountain contains on a rough estimate 160 million tons; and the formations in which lie the Lethbridge lignites extend into Western Manitoba, and deep borings may yet repay the expense they entail.

GORGEOUS CHORISTERS

There are ten boys in London who every Sunday and on state occasions wear suits of clothes that in each instance cost something like $500. The lads thus expensively and brilliantly attired are the choristers belonging to the King's private chapel in St. James' Palace. When arrayed in their state suits they are truly a gorgeous sight.

Scarlet cloth is the foundation of this costume. Bands of royal purple between rows of heavy gold lace are the adornments. Old lace ruffles are worn at the neck and wrists. These ruffles are so valuable and so difficult to replace that they are worn only on the most special occasions. At other times white lawn bands take their place. The boys must take great care of their suits, which must endure three years. The "undress" suits are replaced every eight months.

This choir is one of the historical institutions of Great Britain, and many of its old-time customs, including the dress of the boys, are retained to this day. The choir has numbered among its singers such distinguished musicians as Sir Arthur Sullivan, Edward Lloyd, Sir John Goss, and Dr. E. J. Hopkins.

It is the right of the head boy to demand a guinea as "spur money" from any officer entering the chapel wearing spurs. It is said that when Arthur Sullivan was head boy the Duke of Wellington would always come spurred to the chapel, in order that he might have the pleasure of paying the forfeit to his favorite chorister.

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself, and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of them have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar secretions as effectually as SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES. This preparation is successfully applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbo-hydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly request anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We can also send testimonials from some of the most prominent people in nearly any town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

FINDS JOHN WESLEYS DIARY

Shorthand Notes, It is Learned, Cover the Ten Years of the Great Methodist's Life.

In the old strong room in City Road, London, England, where the Wesleyan Methodist book room keeps the archives of nearly two centuries of Methodism, the Rev. Nehemiah Curnock, editor of the new official edition of John Wesley's Journals, has made a surprising discovery of Wesley manuscripts. The chief of these is a diary in shorthand covering the greater part of the last ten years of Wesley's life.

This diary has been hidden in the last pages of a little book known as "Wesley's Last Account Book," and until Mr. Curnock re-examined it no one suspected that the hieroglyphics at the end were priceless notes written by Wesley himself in his old age. Mr. Curnock is the discoverer of the key to the cipher in which John Wesley wrote his early journals.

This last account book, which Wesley closed on July 16, 1790, also contains the shorthand diary from 1782 to 1790 which has now been discovered. The book shows in minute detail how the old man, almost to the very last, kept his accounts "exactly," ending the record with the often quoted sentence, written with a tremulous hand, "I will not attempt it any longer, being satisfied with the continual conviction that I save all I can, and give all I can, that is, all I have."

Dickens as a Reporter.

Mr. J. D. Irvine, one of the best known London journalists, has just retired from the press gallery of the British house commons after thirty years' service. In the course of some reminiscences he tells that when he first entered the gallery, he came into contact with a chief reporter who had had Charles Dickens on his staff. The chief had a very poor opinion of the novelist, and in supercilious tones, used to say—"He was a very poor reporter; but I believe the silly fool made money by writing books."

A FIGHTER IN AFRICA

Brigadier-General Sir W. H. Manning has had a remarkable career. There is probably no one alive who has seen more fighting in tropical Africa than he. Sir William is a slight man, spare of figure and with light grey-blue eyes. He is in appearance—as he has proved to be in fact—an ideal commander of native troops. Before he was married Sir William upon one occasion, when questioned why he remained a bachelor, gave as his reason that he could never find a lady who could bring herself to like his town house. "Why what is the matter with it?" asked his questioner. "Nothing whatever, I assure you," he replied, "only, you see, it happens to be situated in the heart of Africa."

FIGHT WITH FISTS

Fine for One and Black Eye for the Other

The story of a duel, with the hand and heart of a girl as the prize, was told in a Chicago court. It was not a French duel, with toy pistols or rapiers, nor an Italian duel with the deadly stiletto, nor an Irish duel with shillalahs, nor a German duel with sabers, but a modern duel with doubled fists and hard knuckles for weapons.

Accompanied by two blackened eyes and a crestfallen look, Peter Jensen stood before the bar of justice and told Judge Gemmill the story. He pointed to Miss Ada Christiansen, who stood beside Axel Anderson.

"You see, we both went to see the same girl," he said. "I went up to see Miss Christiansen at her home Sunday night and found him there. We fought it out to see who should stay, and you can see what he did to me."

"I certainly can," said Judge Gemmill, "and I am going to fine him $10 and costs." But Jensen still wore his crestfallen look when Miss Christiansen left with the victorious duelist.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

LLOYD GEORGE'S DOUBLE

There is in Harborne a man who is exceedingly like Mr. Lloyd George in personal appearance, and who is immensely proud of the fact. He so bored his friends with the subject that they decided to teach him a lesson. They took a devious course. In the first place they challenged him to put on the characteristic top hat and frock coat of the Chancellor, together with his self-complacent air, and amble through the Birmingham General Post Office on a Saturday morning, and cast a benevolent eye upon the queue gathered at the Insurance Stamp counter. A bet also was made. The bogus Chancellor arrived at the Post Office to find most of his friends in the queue. He wandered about and when he came back to the Insurance counter smirked with satisfaction at the thought of public attention bestowed upon him. A post office employe approached him. "Mr. Lloyd George, sir, I think." The friends lingering around became mirthful. "Um-um, what is it?" asked the counterfeit, an exalted pride coming from every pore. "I must call the postmaster, sir," went on the man, "he'll be pleased to see you." "No, no," said the other, alarmed, but the man made as if to go. He walked across the office. The moment he was out of sight, "Mr. Lloyd George" hurried out, and ran for cover, only to find a half-hour later that the clerk who had brought about his humiliation was in the conspiracy and had not gone for the postmaster.

MONSTER HEADDRESSES

Gay French Queen Wore One Nearly Four Feet High

Marie Antoinette had a passion for extraordinary headdresses. One structure that she invented was forty-five inches in height and was composed of many yards of gauze and ribbon. From the folds sprang bunches of roses, and the entire edifice was surmounted by a waving plume of white feathers. It is recorded that when Maria Theresa received a portrait of her daughter wearing this headdress she exclaimed: "This is no daughter of mine! It is the portrait of an actress!"

The Duchess of Chartres determined to surpass the Queen and designed a headdress two inches higher. It was made up of many plumes waving at the top of a tower. Two waxen figures, representing the little Comte de Beaujolais (the brother of Louis Philippe) in his nurse's arms, were worn as ornaments. Beside them a parrot picked at a plate of cherries, and the wax figure of a black boy reclined at the nurse's feet. On different parts of the tower were the initials of the Duchesse's husband, her father and her father-in-law, made from her own hair.

At this time France and England were at war. In a naval engagement of the French frigate Licorne struck her flag, but the Belle Poule, another French vessel, crippled the Hector, an English man-of-war. As the Frenchmen were about to board two English vessels bore down to their consort's assistance, and the Belle Poule sailed away. The English fleet returned to Plymouth with two prizes, the Licorne and a French lugger.

The French, although they had lost a frigate, proclaimed a victory. The Queen and her women wore headdresses that represented the Belle Poule under full sail plowing a sea of green gauze in pursuit of the English frigate. This construction was known as the "Coiffure Belle Poule."

The wife of an English officer living in Paris deemed the headdress an insult to the English navy and determined [illegible] of by [illegible]. Asphalt on Streets of Babylon.

That asphalt was known to the a cients is a well attested fact, its u as a binder for masonry in Baby being in point, but of its use oth than this we know nothing.

Strabo tells us that as early as 2 B. C. the streets of Babylon w paved, and so, too, presumably w the great roads leading out from t many gates of that city. Babylon w situated in the alluvial plain of Me potamia, and its building material w almost entirely clay, either as ea or in the form of bricks.

It seems rather doubtful that th latter were used to pave the streets that early date. Asphalt was als found and much used in building op erations, and it does not seem impr able that it was utilized to impro the streets.—Dr. E. W. Gudger in S ence.

DO NOT WASTE GOOD MUTTON FAT

There Are Many Ways of Using It and Rendering It Entirely Free of Odor

Mutton fat is wholesome, and when served properly it is palatable. But if you're going to eat it don't let it get cold.

You see, the mutton fat doesn't melt until it reaches a temperature of from 105 to 120 degrees, and the temperature of your body is only about 98. So the heat of your mouth won't melt the mutton tallow and it leaves an unpleasant "furry" taste.

But when the fat is once melted it won't turn hard again till it reaches a much lower temperature—say 77 to 98 degrees. And before it solidifies in the dish or on the plate you beat the game by eating it, and in your 98-degree mouth and stomach it hasn't a chance to turn hard. So it tastes better and digests better.

The fat you don't eat directly with the meat it grew on can be used as a by-product, for frying and all sorts of culinary purposes. There's real economy in that. And it's easy enough to "take the curse off it."

By mixing the hard mutton fat with a softer fat, such as beef suet or lard, you get a softer and more palatable combination for deep fat frying and for "shortening" foods. You can even get fair results with baking powder biscuit that way.

You can get rid of the odor of the mutton fat by mixing it with leaf lard and rendering it in milk. Divide the suet and lard finely by passing them through a meat grinder, then heat them in a double boiler with one-half pint of milk to two pounds of mutton fat and lard. When the fat has cooked out let the mixture cool. The fat cakes on the top and comes off easily. It is softer than mutton fat, has a good color, a good odor and flavor and keeps well for weeks.

Savory fat is easily made. For each pound of rendered mutton fat allow an onion, a sour apple and a teaspoonful of ground thyme or mixed herbs, tied up in a small piece of cloth. Cook them in the fat at a low temperature until the onion and apple are browned. Then strain off the fat. It will be well seasoned and may be used instead of butter or other savory fat for warming potatoes, cooking vegetables, etc.

The fat removed from mutton broth or soup is also useful in similar ways, as it has taken up the agreeable vegetable flavors. When the soup has cooled remove the fat, melt it and strain through a cloth.

UMBRELLA SUPPORT

Buckles Around Breast and Holds Umbrella Without Hands

Primarily designed for letter-carriers, the umbrella support patented by a Maryland man is likely to make other friends when it becomes well known. This support buckles around the chest, just under the armpits, and on a plate in the centre, in front, are two grips that form a groove to engage the shank of the umbrella, which should have a hook in it if it is not a curved handle in the first place, catches under a strap that is worn around the waist. In this way the rain protector is held quite as firmly as by hand and leaves the hands free for other duties.

KING GEORGE AND BIBLE

General Booth Anticipates Splendid Results From Royal Example

General Bramwell Booth, in an interview published in the "War Cry," refers to the King's promise to Queen Alexandra in 1881 that he would read a chapter of the Bible daily, and to the fact that he has ever since adhered to his promise.

Says the General: "I consider this bit of public testimony from our popular King-Emperor may turn out to be one of the important events of our time. The more courage of the thing in these Bible-despising days is splendid, and I praise God for it.

"Only think of the effect in the Army and Navy of England alone! Talk about armaments! Why, if the King's soldiers and sailors will only do what their King does, I believe that would give to England such an army and navy as the world has not had since the days of Cromwell and the Ironsides!"

"But among the people as a whole General?"

"Among the people as a whole! Why, if the King's example be followed, I believe the nation will presently have such mothers and sons as have not been seen, except here and there throughout the world."

"How will this affect the Salvation Army?"

"Well, for one thing, I hope it will touch all Salvationists so that they will pray for the King and the Royal family, and praise God for this outspoken testimony."

According to the "Church Family Newspaper" the King received a large number of letters from men in all stations of life thanking him for the confession he made with regard to his habit of Bible-reading.

MEN AND COURTING

Men from the beginning of time have liked to be the hunters; women are supposed to be the quarry. It is to the quarry's interest not to wish to do any hunting, not to care, till she is certain of the hunter, whether he pursues her or not. Such an attitude is not calculating; it is merely self-respecting and self-preservative. On such cautious advance towards love some of the happiest marriages are built. No romantic girl need fear that by crushing down a luscious emotion she will inhibit the real coming of love. If love is real, it makes a progress which is resistless, however slow. On the other hand, if the romantic girl yields without restraint to luscious emotions, she not only weakens her will-power, but she may injure her pride by showing herself too ready to receive love. A man is the happier for being sure he is well loved by his wife, but when love is just beginning its growth in his heart he values the girl the more if he is shown that her response is too rare and high a thing to be accorded without strong suing on his part.—Maude Radford Warren in Woman's World.

Do You Feel Moody Irritable, Depressed?

When That Languid, Logy, Easily-Tired Feeling Comes, Your Liver is Slow

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and these full feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to fail so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quickly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in clearing up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I now make take the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all other, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The new West Ward School opens to-day. Pupils who have been waiting for accommodation are urged to be present so that the organization of the classes may be completed. Beginners of six years of age or over should report at once, as they will not be admitted after the first week of school.

Tag Day.

The annual Tag Day of the Children's Aid Society has been set for Saturday, Oct. 18th. This is somewhat earlier than previous years, but having it sooner than usual the weather is likely to be more favorable than a month later.

At the DeLaval.

The Separator Department of the DeLaval Co's plant should be ready for service at the end of the present month. The workmen will be selected from among Peterborough men as far as is possible. The whole plant will, when completed, present a most finished appearance.

Barber Closing.

The journeymen barbers of the city have started a campaign for Saturday night closing at 10 o'clock. Their argument is that the barbers in other towns and cities close at the same hour, without any loss to the employer.

"Boiled Office."

There is a certain restaurant in this city whose menu cards are typed at the office of an evening contemporary. Among the vegetables on Saturday's menu, was "boiled office." Cannot Mr. D—— act as Examiner of these cards before they are issued. The daily blunders on them are a laughing stock.

Italian Missing.

It is feared that a young Italian may have been drowned, at the foot of the dam near London street, as he has been seen taking a boat from that vicinity several times. The last time he was seen was on Wednesday morning last and as he has not been seen since then, it is feared that he may have been drowned. The police were communicated with.

A Presentation.

Mr. Allan Flemingley, who has for the past two years held the position of manager of the local branch of the Kent store, was presented on the evening of his departure for Calgary, to which place he has been assigned, with a handsome gold mounted umbrella and cuff links, from the employees of the store. Mr. Gold of Galt will be his successor here.

Fellowship Tea.

Last evening at 5 o'clock, a men's fellowship tea was held in St. John's church school room. Tables were laid for 100 and this proved hardly sufficient. All men of the congregation were invited, this being a means of promoting greater social intercourse. The evening service followed, when Canon Davidson preached a sermon that was of special interest to men.

Entered an Appeal.

An appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Latchford in the case of Presnick vs. Cordova Mines has been entered and partly argued at Osgoode Hall in the Appellate Division of the high court. Messrs. H. E. Rose, K.C. and J. M. Pickup, of Toronto, are acting for the defendants and Mr. F. D. Kerr of Peterborough, is representing the plaintiff. At the trial judgment was awarded Mrs. Presnick for $1,750 and costs.

Musical Treat.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon has announced that on Friday next at the Conservatory of Music, the Hambourg Concert Company will give a concert here. The company which will consist of Boris Hambourg, the world's renowned 'cellist; Jan Hambourg, the eminent Russian violinist, and Edouard Hesselberg, a pianist of exceptional capabilities, is one of the greatest that has ever visited Peterborough.

If so, take advantage of the remarkably low one-way second-class Colonist Rates to Vancouver, Victoria, Nelson, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, etc., in effect daily until October 10; or if Western Canada is your destination, the low-rate Homeseekers' Excursions, in effect each Tuesday until October 28. The route is one of the most scenic in the world. Bear in mind that the Canadian Pacific Railway offers the finest possible equipment and fastest train service. It is the only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers also dining-cars, to Winnipeg and Vancouver. By travelling C.P.R. you avoid the necessity of changing depots. All equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R., affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C.P.R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Saturday's Market.

The farmers market on Saturday last, was the largest one that had been seen for months. The farmers have by this time, doubtless ceased from their labors in the fields, and are giving more time to marketing their goods. The square was simply packed with produce, while the inside was crowded more than has been the case for some time past.

Though perhaps the market was large, the prices were large also, and one citizen was heard to remark that he did not know what good the market was to Peterborough, as you had to pay as much, and in some instances more for the goods on the market, than you had to pay in the retail stores in the city.

This is, in a great measure true, and unless the farmers moderate their prices to a considerable extent, they will find their trade diminish greatly. It should be their object to co-operate with the citizens in this respect.

A number of fine cattle were brought in from the country, and there was also a good showing of hay.

Laying Tracks.

The street railway Co. have started to relay George street, in compliance with their promise to the Peterborough Council.

The work was commenced on Saturday morning, and a gang of Italians were set to work at the intersection of George and [illegible] streets.

The work presented some difficulties, as it was found necessary to tear up the street crossing, so as to remove the present rails.

The work should be completed in about a week at the rate it is progressing at present, and will be an improvement that has long been needed. Meanwhile the car service will be conducted as satisfactorily as is possible under the conditions.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

IF CONSTIPATED OR BILIOUS "CASCARETS"

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

MATRIMONIAL

Dyer—Palmer.

At St. John's church on Saturday afternoon, at 2.30 p.m., a very pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. Canon Davidson, when Miss Annie Palmer and Mr. Wm. Dyer, both late of Tiverton, Devon, England, were united in marriage.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Charles Hammacott, while Mr. John Dyer acted in the capacity of groomsman. Miss Winnie Hammacott and Irene Dyer were flower girls.

The newly married couple will reside for the time being with Mrs. Charles Hammacott, 413 Bethune street.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Russel Patterson leaves to-day for Queen's University where he will continue his studies in medicine.

Mr. Fisher, Government Inspector of slaughter houses, etc., was in the city on Saturday in an official capacity.

Captain R. T. Hounsell leaves to-day for the Royal School of Cavalry, Toronto, where he will take a course of instruction.

Rev. Charles Duncan and Mrs. Duncan, of Tara, announce the engagement of their daughter, Ada Esther, to Mr. Alvin J. Grigg, of Peterborough, the marriage to take place on Oct. 18th.—Mail and Empire.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall, of Peterborough, Ont., announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Isabel, to Mr. Archibald Davidson, of Peterborough. The marriage will take place during the month of October.—Toronto Globe.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Weddy, Master Shirley and Miss Evelyn, who have been visiting Mrs. Weddy's mother, Otonabee, have returned to their home in Olean, New York.

Mr. Cope Clementi, of the Toronto World staff, was in the city for the week-end, visiting his family on Water street. Mr. Clementi was formerly editor of The Times, and severed his connection with the paper to better his position. The Toronto air seems to have done him good, as he looks as robust as a chicken.

POLICE COURT NEWS

In Police Court on Saturday morning, Fred Johnston, and James Robinson, were each fined $2 for being found drunk in a public place.

J. M. Allan charged with driving north of George street in his automobile and not keeping as near to the curb on the right hand side of the street as was required by the by-law.

John Burns appeared on a charge of being found under the influence of liquor while on the prohibited list. The case was enlarged for one week.

Michael Murphy, an old timer at the court, on drunken charges, was again in court charged with being drunk. He was discharged, but at the same time was placed on the black list after he had been given a lecture by Magistrate Dumble.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

William Bruce Graham

The demise occurred on Saturday morning at 9.30 at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Graham, 165 Hunter street east, of William Bruce Graham, aged 26 years. The deceased had been in poor health for the past three months, and came home from Calgary about one month ago.

He was well known to the younger members of our community, and was always highly respected. He left Peterborough for Edmonton about 4 years ago, and has since then, been doing well in the west. He was a Presbyterian in religion. The late Mr. Graham leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing parents and one sister, Ada. He was born in the Township of Smith, but has lived for the greater part of his life in this city.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, to the Lakefield Cemetery. The general public will doubtless join with The Times in extending their sincere condolences to those who have been bereaved of a young citizen, with such a promising future before him.

The funeral of the late Mr. Robert McWhinnie took place yesterday afternoon at 2.30, to the Little Lake cemetery. That he was universally respected and highly esteemed was evidenced by the great concourse of people who attended to pay their last respects to him.

The procession to the cemetery, which was headed by 85 Masons, Foresters, Oddfellows, etc., was fully a quarter of a mile long. The pall bearers were six masons, and the Rev. Peever officiated. There were many floral tributes.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"ARIZONA."

An epoch in the career of motion photography has arrived in the presentation of Augustus Thomas' most powerful drama, "Arizona," which will be seen at the Grand next Monday, Oct. 6.

"Arizona" is a drama surcharged with Thomas' significant delineation of human emotions, and records the apex of success of the American playwright extraordinary.

At a western military post, Captain Hodgman, a black sheep, has brought shame and sorrow to Lena the daughter of Sergeant Kellar, a German, and Lena is found employed in the family of Henry Canby, owner of a big ranch. In the meantime Captain Hodgman makes violent love to Estrella, wife of the Colonel, and also the eldest daughter to Canby. The troop riding up the valley, make camp at the Canby ranch, and discover Hodgman in the act of making love to Bonita, younger sister of Estrella. Here the hero of the story, Lieutenant Denton, halts for the time being Hodgman's villainous work. Tony, a Mexican, in the employ of Canby, is in love with Lena. Tony, behind closed doors with Lena hears for the first time of Lena's sorrow and also the seducer, who is in the next room with Denton and Kellar.

A shot is fired. Hodgman falls to the ground with a bullet in his breast. Cavalrymen and cowboys rush in. Denton is accused of the killing. After the bullet is extracted from the body, Denton is freed and Lena ordered under arrest. Tony, to save her, confesses that he did the shooting and rushes through the gates and into his saddle, making good his escape.

Among the well-known artists in this remarkable picture are cast Cyril Scott as Lieutenant Denton; William Conklin as Captain Hodgman; Gertrude Shipman, as Estrella; Robert Broderick, as Canby; Charles Graham, as Sergeant Kellar, and twenty other in two hundred and ten motion scenes in six parts.

This is the first time in the history of motion photography that a picture has been sent out to the public in the same way as a theatrical production, calling for an acting staff, although these pictures cost the producers four times the usual amount expended on the original production with a large cast.

"BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS."

Graham Moffat, the author of "Bunty Pulls the Strings," which comes to The Grand Opera House on Saturday next, Oct. 11th, matinee and night, has been so frank about the characteristics of his own people that even American audiences appreciate the delineation on the stage; the types shown in "Bunty" and portrayed with distinctive Scotch humor by the different imported companies, could have been no more quickly recognized in Edinburgh or London, and not a point in the quaint comedy is missed by American playgoers.

One point is a question of relationship, and consequent inheritance of money. Even the lumbering "Weelum" finds it hard to propound when "Bunty" asks him: "Ha' ye no ither use for yer head but ti fill yer hat?" Weelum, in stating the problem, says: "Father's cousin, was Uncle Sam'l, who died an' left th' money in question."

APSLEY

A quiet wedding was celebrated at the Methodist Parsonage, Apsley, Monday evening, Sept. 29th, the contracting couples were Mr. H. Steele, of Anstruther, and Miss M. Peters, of Cardiff. Though the event was unexpected, two young ladies who were present rose to the occasion and quickly had the room nicely decorated, and they acted as flower girls.

Another wedding took place on Friday evening, Sept. 26th, when Andrew Young, and Miss Lena, eldest daughter of Mr. A. Dune, were united in the bonds of matrimony. A large number of friends assembled to witness the ceremony. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome presents. Supper was served during the evening and dancing indulged to a late, or rather early hour in the morning. Norman Reynolds assisted the groom, while Miss Maggie Dune acted as bridesmaid. The young couple have the sincere good wishes of all.

Miss Annie Coones has returned from Moose Jaw, Sask., after spending a few months visiting friends.

If The Times hears of any races coming off let us know, as we have two young ladies here who can certainly get over the ground when it comes to chasing refractory calves or spring chickens.

After a long delay Apsley has secured a teacher for S.S. No 1, Anstruther, who commenced her duties Monday, Sept. 29th.

The Ladies' Aid held a very successful fruit social in the Town Hall, Apsley, Wednesday evening, Oct. 1st.

Mr. H. Moore, inspector of colonization roads, has been through inspecting work done this summer.

TO KEEP TRACK OF ALL WHO ARE COMING INTO CANADA

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—Persons entering Canada by train are no longer to be subject to the vexations and confusing interrogation of Dominion Immigration Inspectors. A new system is being inaugurated by the Department at Ottawa which promises to meet with general favor. As the train nears the border, inspectors will pass through the coaches supplying with a blank information form every passenger who is entering the Dominion. The papers are to be filled out by the passengers and signed after which they will be collected and examined. Should the information given be incomplete or the answers unsatisfactory, the passenger may be personally interrogated by the inspector and obliged to undergo a personal examination at the international boundary.

Permanent Record.

The Immigration authorities will in this way secure a permanent record of every person entering Canada by train with the information over the signature of the person in question. The Government will thus be furnished with reasonably accurate statistics as to the immigration from the United States, tourist traffic, etc.

Canadian citizens returning to the Dominion are only to be obliged to sign a form declaring their citizenship, date of leaving Canada and last address in Canada.

A tourist must declare his birthplace citizenship, occupation and proposed length of visit. Particulars must be given where the family is accompanying.

Need Not Be Disturbed.

Passengers in sleeping coaches passing the border at night need not be disturbed. Before retiring they may fill out the information blank, sign it and turn it over to the sleeping car conductor. The latter is required to sign each form to the effect that the passenger described showing a berth and appears to be physically and mentally fit.

The forms set forth that the Immigration Act provides a penalty of arrest and a fine not exceeding $100 for misrepresentation or for giving false information.

ARMENIAN ROBBED OF NEARLY $1,000

Montreal, Oct. 4.—A strange story of robbery on a White Star liner was told to Mayor Lavallee by a young Armenian, N. Hochsdurian, to-day. As proof of his story, the Armenian produced the following letter from the Berlin, Ont., Branch of the Union Bank of Canada:

Berlin, Ont., September 18.

This is to certify that the bearer, N. Hochsdurian, had on deposit with us on the fourth of July, 1913, $951.45. He withdrew this sum on that date, stating that he was going to England. The money was all in $50 and $100 bills (The numbers of the bills follow.)

Mr. Hochsdurian was robbed of (every dollar on board the White Star liner S. S. Laurentic, between Montreal and Quebec, on July 7, 1913.

Since he lost his money his nerves are bad, and he now seeks employment. He worked in Mallette's trunk factory. His reputation was good, and he is an honest fellow, but he has no money."

MAN TELLS STORY.

Hochsdurian's story as he related it to a Star representative after his interview with Mayor Lavallee was a strange one.

"I put my money in a cash box," he said, "and kept it in my cabin. During the night some man got into the cabin and stole box and money, and I was left without a cent. I complained, but the captain told me he could do nothing. I went on to Liverpool and the emigration officers there helped me to get back to Ontario. I could find no work in Berlin, and came here."

When he had heard the details of the case, Mayor Lavallee informed Hochsdurian that all the city could do was to find him road work, so that he could earn money enough to proceed to Constantinople (as was his original intention) if he wished to do this.

"I want easy work," said the Armenian.

"We all want that," replied Mayor Lavallee, "but you won't find it in Canada."

STRONG EFFORT TO SAVE THE LIFE OF CHARLES GIBSON

Deputation Waited on Highest Authorities to Obtain a Commutation of the Dread Sentence

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—For over two hours Herbert Lennox, K.C., directed an impassioned appeal to Premier Borden, the Acting Minister of Justice and several other members of the Cabinet for the life of Charles Gibson. Claude Macdonell, Dr. Preston, M.P.P., and Rev. Mr. Laing will address the conference thereafter, and it is not expected that any decision will be reached until late this afternoon at least.

Mr. Lennox said the condemned man had had no proper defence and little funds for the procuring of witnesses.

Mr. Lennox further contended that the evidence of a certain material witness was not trustworthy as the man had no reputation for truthfulness among his own people.

NOT AT ALL CONFIDENT.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—At 11.30 this morning, Acting Minister of Justice Hon. W. T. White called a conference to consider the Gibson case. Herbert Lennox, K.C., Rev. Mr. Laing, Dr. Preston, of Carleton Place, Ont., Conservative Whip, and A. Claude Macdonell, M.P., for South Toronto, comprised the delegation. There were present from the Cabinet Hon. Messrs. White, Crothers, and Hazen. It is expected that they will be in conference for some time.

During the morning numerous petitions, lettergrams, telegrams, etc., have reached the Department of Justice appealing for the commutation of Charles Gibson's sentence. Among these are petitions from the [illegible] of Toronto, the [illegible] of [illegible] Collingwood, the municipality of Dundalk, and others.

40,000 SIGNATURES ON RECORD.

It is expected that the names will reach the 40,000 by noon to-day. This, however, is by no means a record.

EXPECT DECISION TO-MORROW.

"Our claims are backed up by a petition containing the names of 37,- [illegible] Toronto [illegible]," said Mr. Lennox this morning. [illegible] more to come. We intend to stay here until a final decision is reached, but we don't expect it until to-morrow at the earliest."

Mr. [illegible] Elliott and Rev. John [illegible] will arrive to-night and will add their voices to that of Mr. Lennox for commutation of sentence. The first delegation met Premier Borden and Hon. W. T. White, acting Minister of Justice, this morning, and presented their appeals. The question, however, must go before a full Cabinet Council and then before the Administrator before decision is reached. If commutation is granted it will be at the eleventh hour.

The Minister of Justice, Hon. C. J. Doherty, is still in the West, and won't return for some time. It is generally believed here, however, that the Minister's recommendation is fairly final; and that, after close consideration of evidence, old and new, he favors the carrying out of the sentence of death. The record of the Minister since he has been administering his department proves him to be [illegible] disposed, and numerous examples of the extension of clemency characterize his regime. It is, therefore, believed here that he is firmly convinced of the justice of the first trial and the verdict of the jury. The Administrator Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, is head of the Supreme Court, and he, too, concurred in the recent decision of the Cabinet to allow the law to take its course. It is generally admitted here that Mr. Lennox's task is an exceedingly difficult one.

In fact there are no precedents for the granting of clemency merely on petitions or appeals to mercy once it has been decided that the law shall take its course.

"Toronto will raise a riot if Charlie Gibson is hanged," said Herbert Lennox, K.C., when interviewed at the Chateau Laurier this morning.

The Public School

The Ottawa papers state that Roman Catholics in that city have been forbidden to become Public School supporters under threat of being placed under the ban of the church. This means that such as violate this order will be refused the sacraments. From this it would appear that the church proposes to send all Catholic supporters of the Public Schools to Hades. Fortunately, however, it is not in the power of priest, bishop or pope to send any man to perdition; if it were, there would be a poor chance for the editor of The Times.

3rd GERMAN SQUADRON GOES INTO COMMISSION

London, Oct. 6.—The third squadron of the German high seas fleet was brought into existence yesterday, and tentatively commissioned for a year, consisting of the dreadnought Kaiser, the pre-dreadnoughts Elsass, Braun, Braunschweig, and the new vessels Koenig Albert, Prinz Regent Luitpold and the Kaiserin. Other new vessels will be added occasionally until the fleet consists of eight first class ships.

Since 1904 the German fleet has been constantly expanding. In that year the British strength was twice that of the German in home waters, with 12 ships in the Mediterranean and five in the far east, a total of 33 vessels. At present the British battleships number 37. In 1904 in home waters there were 16 British capital ships as against eight German, and on foreign service 17 British and no German vessels. In 1913 there are in home waters 24 British ships and 24 German; on foreign service 10 British and one German.

Important developments are in progress with regard to the government's torpedo factory at Greenock. New buildings are being erected to employ 300 extra men per building. An improved method of propulsion on torpedoes has been discovered that excels anything previously produced. It is now being severely tested, and the secret is being scrupulously guarded, the contact of the workmen being restricted to a small portion of each torpedo.

READ HIS OWN OBITUARY MET HIS OWN MOURNERS

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Owing to the confusion of the names of two railway engineers, both in charge of different trains at Lindsay, Mr. Dave Murray, 58 McMurray street, West Toronto, a C.P.R. engineer, had the unusual experience of reading a notice of his own death.

It seems that while the message of the death of Engineer Murray, a Toronto man, while at duty in his engine cab at Lindsay was received, it was by a mistake sent to the McMurray street address instead of to the residence of Mr. David R. Murray, at Pearson avenue, was the Grand Trunk engineer who had succumbed to an attack of heart failure. To complicate matters Dave Murray had shortly before left on a run to Lindsay in charge of a C.P.R. train. Later the mistake was discovered and a telegram was sent to the relatives of Mr. David R. Murray, at Pearson avenue.

"The mistake caused a lot of trouble and annoyance," said Mrs. Metcalf, at the McMurray street address. "I was kept busy answering the door for would-be mourners. When the train arrived from Lindsay I sent my boy over to confirm the message, but the man who was reported dead stepped off very much alive. His sister could hardly believe that he was unhurt. Fortunately no arrangements had been made for the funeral."

DANGEROUS FIRE ON GEORGE STREET

A fire which might have destroyed a whole block, had it not been discovered when it was, called for the hard work of the Fire Department yesterday afternoon at 3.25 p.m.

Mr. Suckloff, the Jewish dealer on George street, just below Charlotte, is in the habit of leaving a great pile of waste paper and other light and combustible matter right at the back door of his store. It is presumed that children playing in the vicinity ignited this. The blaze was first seen by two young ladies in the store, and had by that time got a good hold. The alarm was immediately sent in from Box 21. The local brigade with their usual promptness were on the scene before the bell had scarce stopped pealing its warning, and two lines of hose were laid, one at the rear first, where the conflagration originated and one at the front, to combat any possible danger there might be of spreading. The steady stream of water played by experienced hands was soon effective.

The damage was somewhat great. Five hundred dollars will hardly cover the damage to the building itself, while Mr. Suckloff suffered a loss of $200 damage by fire and water to his store and stock. The billiard room adjoining was also a participant, a big plate glass broken and damage to a table being reported.

Not only were the bottom stores sufferers, but the set of apartments above suffered considerably. Smoke has damaged curtains, carpets, furniture, etc., there, while the inhabitants were not slightly frightened. The rear of the building was mostly burnt and thanks to our efficient brigade under its efficient leader, a very bad fire was prevented, for had any more time been given to the flames terrible consequences might have ensued.

PREMIER BORDEN CABLED GREETINGS TO AUSTRALIA

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Cordial Greetings have just passed between Premier Borden and the First Minister of the Australian Commonwealth, Hon. Joseph Cook, on the completion of the battleship Australia and the cruiser Sydney.

The Canadian Premier cabled as follows: "The Government on behalf of the people of Canada, tender their congratulations on the occasion of the official reception of the battleship Australia and the cruiser Sydney. Be assured that Canada stands shoulder to shoulder with Australia and the other overseas dominions in the firm resolve to safeguard our common heritage."

Premier Cook's reply contained the same strong note of Imperial unity. "Cordial thanks," it ran, "for kind congratulations. Heartily reciprocate their brotherly spirit. We are celebrating to-day the completion of an Australian unit of the Empire's peace-compelling navy, gladly sharing the obligations for the defence of the whole King's dominions. In this spirit we greet our Canadian brothers. May the cement of Empire set even more firmly as our navies grow."

GERMANY IS IN A FERMENT OVER ANCIENT FEUD REVIVAL

London, Oct 6.—Germany is plunged into a ferment, according to the Berlin correspondent of the Daily Express, by the sensational news published by a Frankfort newspaper that the old quarrel between the Hohenzollerns and the Guelphs over the claim of the latter to the throne of Hanover, far from being settled is more acute than ever and that the Kaiser and his son-in-law, Prince Ernst August of Cumberland, are sharply divided.

Prince Ernst, and his father, the Duke of Cumberland, the story runs, have refused to renounce their claim to the throne of Hanover, and as a consequence the Kaiser threatens to deprive Prince Ernst of the Dukedom of the Dukedom of Brunswick, which now is in Prussia's possession and was to have been made over to Prince Ernst after his marriage with the Kaiser's only daughter, the Princess Victoria Louise.

This situation, the report states, has been brought about by the failure of the Prussian officials to realize clearly before the betrothal of the young Prince and Princess the determination of Prince Ernst August and his father never formally to renounce their rights to the Hanoverian succession.

Prince Ernst August is said to have declared flatly to Prince August Wilhelm, the Emperor William's lawyer son, who was sent to confer with him at Karlsruhe before the betrothal in order to induce him to renounce his rights:—

"For me and my family honor comes first, the love."

The authorized publication of this statement is taken as indicating that he still occupies the same attitude.

The Duke of Cumberland, according to the same publication, declares the throne of Brunswick is not essential to him or to his son and that neither of them will renounce Hanover in any circumstances.

Princess Victoria Louise therefore may find herself the wife of a pretender, in the same position as King Manuel of Portugal.

SPORTS

The Peterborough Baseball Club received notice yesterday morning of the fact that Shortstop Harry Brant has been drafted by the Chattanooga, Tenn., club of the Southern Association, a class A League, two classes higher than the Canadian League, with a monthly salary limit of $3,600. Fans will be glad to learn of Brant's success, but will be sorry to lose the gingery little short stop who has been a prime favorite with the fans since joining the club in the middle of the 1912 campaign. Harry led the shortstops of the League in fielding, batted .270, and was the third best run getter in the league—a great all round performer. The Southern is a crack league, but Brant should be able to stick there if he shows the same form next year.

MRS. PANKHURST WILL NOT DIVIDE MONEY

London, Oct. 6.—When suffragettes heard yesterday that Mrs. Pankhurst will not divide her lecture receipts with any American organization and that at one meeting in England she raised as much as $70,000 there was consternation in the "votes for women" camps. Some of the leaders remained outwardly calm, but others showed their perturbation.

Miss Joan Wickham, who is Mrs. Pankhurst's representative in America, announced that the militant lecturer would speak under the auspices of the Women's Social and Political Union of England, and that the proceeds would be used entirely to further the movement there. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Carrie C. Catt, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw have been asked to sit on the platform at the Carnegie Hall meeting, October 21. It is rumored that Mrs. Catt will decline the invitation, although Miss Wickham feels sure of her acceptance. Mrs. Belmont will be there, as will probably the other leaders.

Speaking of Mrs. Pankhurst's trip to this country, Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, secretary of the National American Woman Suffrage, said:— "For a woman who has had her eye on the main issue in her own work for so many years as Mrs. Pankhurst has, it is astonishingly oblivious of her to have so little imagination and information about our situation as not to consult the American suffragists before arranging her trip to find out whether or not it would prejudice our work to have her here. There is a place in suffrage work for big co-operation. As for Mrs. Pankhurst's heroism, that we cannot deny, but her spirit of co-operation is open to question."

Dr. Shaw said she would be glad to see Mrs. Pankhurst take away a million dollars.

Correct.

"Now, Willie," said the teacher to a rather stupid pupil, "listen to me very carefully. If I had five eggs in this basket and laid three on the table, how many eggs would I have?"

"Eight," was the cheerful reply.

ALDERMEN'S SALARY NOT LARGE AND SHOULD NOT BE ABUSED

Replied Ald. Buller to An Angry Citizen Last Night--Council in Regular Session Last Night--Ald. Duncan Will Move That Peter Hamiltons' Siding be Not Granted

The City Council met in regular monthly session last night, Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. There were also present Aldermen Anderson, Wm. Langford, Jr., Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gillespie, Duncan and Buller.

Sanitary Inspector Spence wrote that the collection of garbage is not giving unqualified satisfaction, and asking that payments to the contractors be left in abeyance pending investigation.—Referred to the Property Committee.

Bruce Johnston, Clerk of the Township of North Monaghan, wrote that the powder magazine had been again stocked with dynamite and asking that the building be cleared of same. Ald. Duncan contended that this is not so. The matter will go to the Property Committee for decisive action.

Kathleen Gourley, of Keene, is claiming $200 damages for injury received by being thrown out of her rig on Hunter street, the vehicle striking an obstruction in the road. Referred to the legal committee.

The Canadian Chicle Co. wrote, proposing to purchase the city's lot to the south of their premises—This was sent to the Manufacturers' Committee.

Mr. C. E. Adams addressed Council and wanted to know what Council intends doing in regard to his claim of $500 for damages to his property by reason of the siding to the Vermont Marble Company's premises, being laid in front of his house on Maria street.

The Mayor replied that he was not prepared to say, but a report from the Legal Committee on his claim, which would be read later on in the meeting.

Mr. Adams retorted that he would wait and hear the report read, and if satisfaction to him is not therein provided for, he would see if there is any justice in the country to be obtained.

Ald. Langford wanted the paving of George street postponed until next spring to permit of thorough settling of road where excavations have been made. This would assure better pavement construction.

His Worship replied that the City Engineer had reported in favor of prosecuting the work as far as possible this fall. Again the contractors had advised him that good work can be done notwithstanding recent excavations, and they were under bond that the work will last for 10 years.

Ald. Duffus agreed with Ald. Langford and thought his point in regard to the road being given ample time to settle after excavations well taken. He contended that where paving is to be done next spring, all connections (gas, water, etc.) should be made this fall.

Ald. Buller waxed warm in the suggestion that any paving that can possibly be done this fall should be laid over till next spring. Street paving has, he said, been an open question for some months now, people have been warned to make all necessary connections in preparation therefor, and in spite of that some connections are only now being made and such work will be in [illegible] at the eleventh hour, either this fall or next spring. "We have started street paving," concluded the Board of Works Chairman, "and, for my part, as much as possible will be finished this year."

Mr. Adams' Claim.

At this juncture, the Legal Committee reported that no action be taken on Mr. Adams' claim of $500 for damages by reason of the siding to the Vermont Marble Co. running close to and in front of his house on Maria street.

Ald. Buller regretted the conditions in this respect, but the siding had been laid by authority of the Railway Board, and the C.P.R. could not seen their way clear to reconstruct it to advantage. "We can't have factories without providing sidings." He wished to assure Mr. Adams that the city would do anything possible to improve the conditions for him, but was afraid the siding would have to remain where it is. The Board of Works had endeavored to get the railway company to change the course of this siding somewhat to relieve Mr. Adams, but to no effect, as they claim the siding could not be laid in any other way.

Mr. Adams here indulged in a heated criticism of Council's action, and contended that the Board of Works had approved of the plans for the siding as it is as no attempt to relieve him had been made by the Board of Works until after the railway had secured the consent of the railway board to the siding. He then went on to say that his claim was not treated seriously because he is only a workingman, and did not count. Any City Official, however, wanting an increase of $200 gets it quite readily.

His Worship here strongly rebuked Mr. Adams for his [illegible] and replied that the city council endeavors to legislate for all citizens alike, and the [illegible] of the whole community.

Ald. Buller also took exception to Mr. Adams' remarks, and pointed out that this siding had been duly advertised and objections asked to [illegible], but Mr. Adams had made no complaint until after the work was finished. It was then found impossible to adjust matters to suit Mr. Adams. "I will defy Mr. Adams," said Ald. Buller, "or any other citizen to show where the workingman does not have fair play at the hands of this council. We always give the workingman a fair shake. We do not sit here to harm him, but to work in the interests of all citizens alike. And we do not want to be abused for doing it—the salary is not very large."

Ald. Langford sympathized with Mr. Adams, but contended that the establishment of the Vermont Marble Co. in Gaol City, had increased the value of his property. It is not detrimental to any man's property, and I venture to say Mr. Adams would not take the same price for his property now as he would have done a year ago.

Ald. Buller again assured Mr. Adams that anything the Board of Works could do for him would be cheerfully undertaken; but his claim for $500 was not entertained.

Peter Hamilton Siding.

Ald. Duncan here gave notice that at next meeting he would move a motion to quash the by-law permitting [illegible] street to the Peter Hamilton Co's [illegible] a mistake in the face of the proposition for a bridge at Dalhousie street. Then [illegible] Water street as an artery to and from the Market; they closed George street on account of the street railway.

Too Much Harmony.

Ald. Duncan said he had repeatedly requested Mr. Gliddon not to hold band practice on the nights Council meets, as the music interferes with the latter's business. His request, however, had been ignored, and to-night Council could not hear the Clerk read the minutes. He [illegible] City Trust Commissioners be requested to get the band to remove from the [illegible] hall to the Armouries.

While Council, as a whole, did not approve of the musical interpolations to their business, they did not approve of a motion asking for the band's ejection. It was decided to draw Mr. Gliddon's attention once more to this matter, in the hope that band practice hereafter will not be held on nights council meets.

On motion of Ald. Johnston the Power Committee was authorized to [illegible] Railway Board to compel the Street Railway Co. to carry their trolley wires on the Hydro-Electric poles.

CARSON SENDS A MESSAGE TO ORANGEMEN

London, Oct. 6.—The offer of assistance from the Winnipeg Orangemen to Ulster, which was prominently advertised here, was referred to by Sir Edward Carson in his final speech before leaving Ireland for London. "The Government," he said, "would soon find that a quarrel which looks to them in the distance to be a local one in a comparatively small part of their Majesties' Dominions will very soon grow until it permeates every village and hamlet of the whole united Kingdom and proceeds out into the Empire, from which yesterday from Winnipeg was received an offer of 500 men to come across. (cheers). In your name I send to the fellow-citizens across the sea in other parts of the United Kingdom this simple message: "We are preparing and are prepared to do our part. We call upon you to do yours. We are prepared, as we were always prepared never to betray you. We call upon you to see that we are not betrayed." (Loud cheers)

London Orangemen Prepare.

London, Oct. 6.—Nassau Lodge, which has a drill corps of 50 men, is anxious to fight against Home Rule in Ulster, and word to this effect will be sent at once to Sir Edward Carson, leader in the Old Land of the Irish Unionists. Many other London Orangemen have stated their willingness to form part of a corps to fight for Carson.

MORE INDUSTRIES FROM THE UNITED STATES FOR CANADA

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Since the defeat of reciprocity there has been a steady influx of American industries into Canada. Following the example of the implement corporation of Boston of which Governor Foss of Massachusetts is president, which is building a plant in Galt, the big American companies have been establishing branches in Canada. Governor Foss frankly stated that if it had not been for the defeat of reciprocity his company as well as the others would never have moved to Canada.

THERE ARE OTHERS

Amongst the recent firms which have decided to build branches in Canada is the Buffalo Forge Company, N.Y., which is establishing a plant at Berlin and has purchased five acres for the purpose. The Cleveland Foundry is erecting a plant at Sarnia to manufacture oil stoves, heaters and other oil devices. The Ford Motor Company has bought a 300,000 site at Toronto where it will erect a $250,000 plant.

OTHERS EXPANDING.

American firms already in Canada are expanding their plants. The Canadian Westinghouse Company of Hamilton is spending $150,000 on a new foundry and the Canadian Furnace Co., of Port Colborne is putting into operation this fall a two million dollar plant.

GOOD COTTON CROPS IN EGYPT ASSURED

Cairo, Oct. 6.—From official information I am enabled to state in regard to the cotton crop that the first pickings in general are likely to be excellent, although the pink boll worm has appeared practically throughout the whole cotton area.

This renders the second and third pickings doubtful, but the first pickings are so good there is every likelihood the total crop will exceed that of last year, which was a fair average.

Nothing can be done to frustrate the damage by the boll worm at the moment, as it is impossible to locate the worm owing to lack of the indications of the worm's destruction on the [illegible] of the boll. Matters must be allowed to take their course. A proposal is now before the Council of Ministers to compel the cultivators to pick off and destroy all old bolls at the third picking.

The province of Minieh has suffered a good deal from scarcity of water, and the cotton, both in quantity and quality, is affected. The staple is not up to normal standard.

The Blue Nile has commenced to fall, but the White Nile has been rising slowly. The level at [illegible] is about 1 metre 50 centimetres [illegible] below the normal, and the [illegible] is still rising.

THE NEW TARIFF AT WASHINGTON

How It Compares With the Old Tariff and the Reciprocity Schedules

The new United States tariff which is being put through its final stages in the Senate at Washington makes greater reductions on Canadian farm products than were expected. Not only this! In many respects the schedules will be more favorable to the Canadian farmer than was the reciprocity agreement of 1911. A long list of farm and other products which would have continued to pay duties under Reciprocity will now go into the States free, if the present bill is enacted. Many other articles and commodities will pay much lower duties than would have been charged upon them had the Washington agreement gone into force.

Cattle, swine, sheep and lambs, rye, potatoes, fresh milk, fresh cream, eggs, corn, grass seed, and buckwheat were all to enter the American market free under the Reciprocity arrangement and they are to have the same treatment under the latest draft of the Wilson-Underwood Tariff.

Our wheat will be free-listed by the States if we abolish our duty on American wheat. If we do not, the usual United States duty of 25 cents a bushel will be changed to a ten per cent. ad valorem duty which would be equivalent to 10 cents a bushel on dollar wheat. Remembering the large quantity of wheat which the United States is growing for export, and recalling the fact that during nearly all the past crop year Winnipeg prices have ruled from two to fifteen cents a bushel above the Minneapolis market, it may be questioned if many Western farmers would be benefitted by free trade in wheat yet awhile. Had the Canadian duty been off during the past few weeks, Eastern Canadian mills would have filled their bins with cheap and early harvested American wheat before the Western Canadian grain grower whose crop ripens later could have got his grain to market.

Fresh meat, lard, bacon, hams, preserved meats, tallow, bran, cornmeal, buckwheat flour, wool, wool waste, flax straw and condensed milk were all to pay varying duties under Reciprocity, and now they are to go on the free list. Flour is to be free if Canada will make it free; otherwise it will pay 45 cents per bbl. Under Reciprocity the duty was to be 50 cents per bbl. The new tariff makes marked reductions below existing duties, upon the following among other farm products: oats, barley, horses, poultry (dead and alive), cheese, hay, straw, beans, peas (dried) turnips, onions, cabbages, honey, dried apples, peaches, wild berries, fresh apples, pears and peaches.

Would Keep Money Here

Last year Canadians bought 7,000 motor cars in the United States, paying $9,200,000 for them. How much better for the country it would have been if all this money had stayed in the Dominion, and gone to Canadian manufacturers and operatives in Canadian automobile factories!

FUTURE OF WEST

Mixed Farming Will Greatly Increase Agricultural Prosperity

Mr. F. Maclure Sclanders, commissioner of Saskatoon recently said: "The farming crops in Central Saskatchewan are of the pioneering agricultural type, viz., wheat, oats, barley and flax. Every new district starts with such crops; in due course mixed farming is thereafter evolved. It is interesting here to remark that practically everything we have so far accomplished in this Great West has been done with such pioneering crops which, as all who are familiar with agriculture will know, are the least profitable that can be raised upon the land.

"Take wheat, for instance, and then remember that it involves the annual summer fallowing of one-third of our agricultural land. Think of about one-third of the cultivated land in this West doing and producing absolutely nothing each year! And then imagine if that is possible, what this West will be when even 50 per cent. of our arable land shall be producing not merely wheat but all the infinitely more profitable crops which may be grown anywhere in a similar latitude, and which we have conclusively demonstrated can be produced here to very remarkable advantage.

"It is very encouraging for those who have the best interests of our country at heart to contemplate the splendid increase in the growing of oats and barley. The increased production of such crops confirms the fact that our people have at last awakened to the wisdom of mixed farming, and to the necessity of working twelve months of the year on the farm, just as business men must do in their offices."

FORCIBLE FEEDING

The danger of forcible feeding is increased by the accidents liable to accompany the passage of tubes down the nose or throat. In several instances the esophageal tube was passed into the larynx. Even in cases who did not offer resistance great pain and suffocation was caused by the clumsy use of the nasal tube when it coiled up in the back of the throat or came out of the mouth, and then had to be reinserted several times. The severe choking and vomiting which sometimes accompanied the passage of the tube led to danger from the entrance of food into the larynx.

The injection of food into the lung actually occurred in the case of one unresisting prisoner in whom the operation immediately caused severe choking, and vomiting was followed by persistent coughing. All night the patient could not sleep or lie down on account of great pain in the side of the chest. She was hurriedly released next day, so ill that the authorities discharging her obliged her to sign a statement that she left the prison at her own risk. On her arrival at home she was found to be very ill, suffering from pneumonia and pleurisy due to the food passed into the lung. Being fortunately a young and strong woman, she escaped with her life.

GRAIN ON THE HOOF PAYS THE COUNTRY

A Striking Statement of the Toronto Globe Regarding Canada's Foreign Trade

The Toronto Globe says that one of the most suggestive features of Canada's foreign trade returns for the past year is to be found in the large exports of grain. The Globe continues:

"The advice to sell grain on the hoof is being disregarded, and the results must tend ultimately to lessen and exhaust productive capacity. Exports of breadstuffs increased from $91,666,230 in the previous year to $137,826,875 in the year under review. Wheat exports increased from $62,-743,557 to $88,426,166, which shows that the West is fulfilling predictions, and wheat flour increased from $16,267,353 to $20,164,753, which shows that our power development is promoting secondary industries. It is evident that immediate returns are sought more eagerly than perpetual fertility, and that the loss through the exhausting of farms is not being considered sufficiently. It is suggestive, in this connection, that exports of bacon and hams decreased from $7,232,652 to $5,602,597, and of butter from $2,974,-771 to $223,000. Cheese exports totaled $20,551,207, which is but a slight decrease from the previous year's record. These important items show the need of diverting effort toward stock-raising and lines of production which restore fertility."

CATTLE AND HOGS NEEDED FOR MARKET

Scarcity and High Price of Meats Point to Profitable Opening For Our Farmers

In the high price of meats and the scarcity of cattle, sheep and hogs the Canadian farmer has a strong incentive to go in for livestock where he has not done so before, and to go in on a larger scale where he already has made a beginning. The population is growing far faster than the meat supply both in Canada and the United States and the new American tariff will, it now appears, admit Canadian cattle to the States free of duty. It would look as though the Canadian farmer has a profitable source of pretty high profits right at hand.

That extensive sections of the West appreciate the situation is indicated by the statement that one man has brought 3,000 young steers from Mexico. It is said that Alberta alone will have 300,000 hogs ready for market this year and that the Lethbridge district will yield 1,000,000 pounds of wool. There is plenty of room for progress along this line.

Six or seven years ago Canada and the United States were both considerable suppliers of cattle and meat to European countries, particularly Britain. In 1906 Canada exported to Britain 146,718 live animals, and the United States 414,000. In 1912 Canada exported to Britain 6,000 cattle, and the United States 26,207. The North American countries have dropped out of the cattle and meat exporting business on account of their increasing home population and an ever diminishing quantity of stock.

Reprinted by Request.

An editor in the Blue Grass state had been trying for a long time to inject himself into politics and get elected to something. At last he was made a delegate to the state convention of his party. The day on which the convention opened was also the date of issue of his militant weekly newspaper; and in the excitement of the moment, he had forgotten to write his usual burning editorial. He was reminded of his dereliction just as he was leaving town for the convention.

"Oh," he said to the genial factotum of the [illegible] department, "just reproduce last week's editorial, and state that it is reprinted by request."

The intelligent foreman followed instructions, and the editorial was served up to the assured readers under the startling caption:

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Mrs. Pankhurst says equal suffrage is "the burning question of the hour.". This is an unfortunate expression, in the light of the incendiary efforts of her followers.

A fashion note in The Globe says that women's hats will be simply trimmed this year, and it is well to add that so will the men who pay the bills for them.

In a land lottery deal out west drawing prizes were won by Mr. Bassoon and Mr. Horn, which indicates that it must have been quite a musical affair.

The Liberals of Quebec are preparing to get together, but the suspicion that they have a knife up their sleeves is so strong that the Nationalists are standing off at a safe distance.

A man named Elcome claims to be the unluckiest man in the West. He says that if a slit skirt passed him he would always be on the wrong side. The luckiest man in Ontario lives in Peterborough. He fell out of a second story window without getting hurt and found a diamond pin where he lit.

LABOR AND THE MILITIA

To declare that a man who carries a union card shall not join his fellow citizens in the militia would be to discredit organized labor in the eyes of the whole community. It it significant that on the very day of the discussion in the Canadian Labor congress an announcement was issued from the headquarters of the Labor confederation in Paris that members should no longer take part in anti-militarist demonstrations. The explanation is that the leaders saw a strong light in the recent congress of the building trades, where it was learned that there had been a falling off of fifty per cent. in the membership of unskilled labor unions, and of twenty-five in those of skilled, due to the labor agitation against the three years' military service.

OUR GROWING POPULATION.

Immigration continues to flow Canadawards at an encouragingly increasing rate. For the first five months of the fiscal year there has been an increase of 17 per cent. As compared with the same period last year. The total numbers arriving within the period were 282,757. What this total means may better be understood when it is recalled that population enough to make up a good sized Canadian villagt came to our shores every day during the five months' period. These figures represent an addition of great wealth to the country. Immigration from Great Britain continues to show a gratifying increase, and figures showing a growth of 17 per cent. in this respect. The falling off in immigration from the United States is attributed largely to a "state of mind." In the earlier months of the year something of a note of pessimism was prevalent in the minds of the people. The state of mind was not unnaturally reflected in correspondence passing between American settlers already in Canada and their friends across the line. The obvious effect was to retard somewhat the inflow of immigration from that quarter. The harvesting of the bumper crop and the return of easier financial conditions has brought about a more hopeful outlook, and the effect has already begun to show itself in renewed activity in immigration from "across the line."

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

THAT PLAYED OUT FEELING WAS QUICKLY REMEDIED AND HEALTH RESTORED

"My life for years has been of a sedentary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family. I grew thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced — eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxative medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect."

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Wild Man of the Woods

Joseph William Coppis, aged thirty two, won for himself the name of the "wild man of the woods" before being sentenced to a month's imprisonment for vagrancy at Henbury Sessions. At Manmore Cover, on the outskirts of Bristol, Coppis built a hut for himself of brushwood and rushes. He wandered about the district, lit fires on the highway, and often was seen naked by the roadside.

HUNTING DEER WITH DOGS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Seeing your extract from the Bobcaygeon Independent about abolishing hunting with dogs let me ask the Bobcaygeon editor did he ever still hunt deer? or did he just hear about it? Did he ever see a hunter dolled up as he describes it in a khaki suit? While I agree with him that paddling after deer in a lake and killing it is easy for the hunter and it is slaughter, yet he must remember hunting deer with dogs doesn't mean that every hunter is on a lake or river. The best shooting I ever had was on a runway in the bush, when deer were hunted with dogs. Ninety per cent. would be cut off so he says if dogs were prohibited, and he also says 90 per cent. who hunt with dogs know no more about hunting a deer than a deer knows about chasing a street car. Why should he try to end the holidays of 90 per cent. of men who enjoy the outing, and look forward to it, year after year—men who are held up with business in a city 350 days out of 365?

Still hunting is a good clean sport to those who are familiar with the ground. It is also most dangerous to those who are not; a greenhorn nine cases out of ten will get lost. Greenhorn and the man of experience stand an A1 chance of getting shot. Dog hunting a man can be placed on a runway not necessarily a lake, and be taken off by a more experienced man. The majority of hunters are not beef men. They are out for the sport and will have only thirteen days this year of lawful hunting. Let the 90 per cent. enjoy this privilege. Our laws in Ontario are all right, and when they are wrong along those lines we have capable men representing us that will put them right.

THE TRUE CAUSE OF "DROWNED LANDS"

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see by the Review of the 19th, that it is claimed by the engineers that the channel of the river is at fault—that the river bed is not big enough to carry off the excessive supply of water in the spring. What is a dam built for? Is it not to hold up the water and to back it up on our land? The Hastings dam is the cause of our land being flooded. I can prove by the dam that it is the cause. The stoplogs are not taken out in time to let the surplus water escape. This is the true cause of my land being flooded to the depth of 4 feet 6 inches this season. No engineer of good standing would put his name to what is printed in the Review.

Let them giv? me power and authority to throw open the dam down to 8 feet—that is what the government claims on the sills of the locks for navigation on the Trent Canal. The government sent me a paper to sign, claiming 8 feet. I measured the water at Hastings and found 8 feet 4 inches on the sills.

When the Gilmour drive of logs went through the dam at Hastings in 1896 the water fell 28 inches in 4 days, as shown by Mr. R. B. Rogers' books. He was then superintendent of the canal. The same can be done any day. Take out the stoplogs and there will be no flooded land to complain of. Mr. Rodgers used to take them out on 17th of March, now they are kept in until the 30th of April in 1909.

Again, in 1910 on the 6th of April, Mr. S. Belcher, C. E., took levels for me at Hastings. He found 13 feet 5 inches on the sills of the locks on that date, the stoplogs all in and the water flowing 7 inches over the top stoplog; that would be 5 feet more than the government claims on the sills of the lock. No wonder that this dam floods our land by the neglect of the superintendent to take out the stop logs. Now, let me correct the engineer's statements made in 1908: I had 4 feet 10 inches on my land in the spring, and in 1904 I had 4 feet 6 inches. Mr. Thomas [illegible], C.E., took the levels in August of that year on my land and found 4 feet 6 inches at high water mark on south ½ of lot 3, con. 3, South Monaghan.

Ever since the dam was built at Hastings in 1840, we had this back water. The water had to rise and flow over the dam, which caused our land to be flooded. That is just what took place the last two years the water flowed over the dam and the stop logs were not taken out. This caused the high water for the last two years.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

REMARKABLE DEATH

The Peculiar Fatal Misadventure of a Youth

The tragic death by hanging of a schoolboy named Alfred Bollow (11), the son of an iron moulder, was investigated at the Victoria Courts, London. The boy's mother stated that deceased was in good health, and took part, as he generally did, with the other children of the household in games of skipping rope and blind man's buff. He was in the habit of lying on his bed later and reading boys' papers. Witness called to him shortly before one o'clock to assist her in the kitchen, and he replied, "I am coming soon." He was a good and willing boy. Between one o'clock and half-past he was found hanging from the rails of the attic stairs banister. The muffler, with which the children had been playing blind man's buff, was around his neck, and knotted to the muffler was a rope, which was fastened to the stair rails. The boy was on the best of terms with the family, and had not been punished for anything.

The Coroner: "Is it true that he went to picture houses?"

Witness: "Yes, he was very fond of going."

"Didn't you hear of him going to see pictures of a Chinaman being hanged?"

The Coroner, in summing up, said it was scarcely conceivable that a boy of eleven, who was in no trouble at home, should have tried to take his own life. It was not the first time, nor the second-time, that a boy had experimented with hanging. They would notice that the way in which the cord was disposed was not the way in which an intentional suicide did it. Probably it was some little fad of his own, which went further than was intended. The jury returned a verdict of "Death by misadventure."

MAGNETIC ORE STOVES

An Englishman's Strange Find in Nevada State

An English naturalist has lately given some interesting accounts of oddities found in the United States, and chief among them is the traveling stone, the size of a pea ordinarily, and yet sometimes reaching six inches in diameter. He came across it in Nevada, where it is most frequent. It is really the queerest little stone in the world, for when a number of them are placed on the floor or on any level surface and separated some distance from each other they begin to travel toward a common center and to lie huddled together like eggs in a nest. If a single stone is removed four or five feet from the rest it will immediately start with the greatest rapidity to join its fellows. These stones are found most frequently where the land is very level and little more than bare rock. Often scattered over these barren regions are little basins from a few feet to a rod in width and at the bottom of these basins the rolling stones are found. The cause for the strange conduct is to be found in the material of which the stones are composed, and which is a lodestone or a magnetic ore, which has the tendency to draw them together.

CIGARETTES IN GERMANY

Enormous Increase in the Consumption of the Weed

Statistics showing the growth of cigarette smoking in Germany are given by the American Consul-General at Frankfort-on-Maine, in his report issued from Washington. He states that in 1907 110,000,000 cigarettes were manufactured in Germany, while the present production is about nine times as large. Cigarette cartridges and papers used by smokers who make their own cigarettes, and which also pay a revenue tax in Germany, may be added to cigarettes in order to show total consumption. Between 1907 and 1912 the number of cigarettes manufactured has grown from 5,601,000,000 to 9,282,000,000. It is estimated that German smokers spend about $25,000,000 annually in cigarettes and that some 20,000,000 Germans smoke an average of 454 cigarettes a year.

Plucky Invalid

A plucky rescue was witnessed on the Tay at Perth, when the five-year-old daughter of John Morrison was saved from death by an invalid. While playing the little girl fell into the river. Alexander Gallacher, a gardener, who was just recovering from a serious operation, had his attention drawn to the drowning child, and, weak as he was, he threw off his jacket, and plunged into the flooded river. After a severe struggle Gallacher managed to bring the girl to the bank, both being in an exhausted condition.

The order arose from the number of serious accidents resulting in this way, and railways must see to it that the practice is discontinued.

NO NAVAL CONFERENCE PLAN

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The cable announcement of the abandonment of a proposed Imperial naval conference is not understood at Ottawa, for the Government was not aware that such gathering was proposed. It is quite true that newspaper reports have had it that such a conference, to be participated in by all the Dominions, was suggested to be held in London next year. Another idea was that a gathering of that charter might profitably be held at Vancouver.

The official idea here is that outside parties, believing that such a gathering would be productive of beneficial results, have had more to do with propagating the rumors than did the Imperial authorities, from whom the call would necessarily come.

The next regular imperial conference will meet in 1915. On that occasion naval or any other matters may be discussed. So far as Canada is concerned its naval policy has been arranged by direct conference with the Admiralty, and this is to be continued.

SUN-POWER PLANT

One of Unusual Interest is Produced in Egypt

At Meadi, a suburb of Cairo, is a sun-power plant of unusual interest. It consists of five reflectors, each 204 feet long, whose cross section is in the form of a parabola, with the generator units at the focus. The last-named are of zinc, built of rectangular sections 14 inches wide. To render them efficient, they are painted with a black paint of high heat-absorbing capacity. The water is introduced at the lower end and the generator at the upper end is provided with a steam connection four inches in diameter. The reflectors are lined with silvered glass mirrors. The plant works best at a pressure slightly below the atmosphere.

Sponge Farming in the Ocean

The cultivation of sponges upon the bottom of the ocean, says "Science Siftings," is accomplished by means of cement triangles or discs, to which the "seed" sponges are attached with a piece of lead-coated copper wire. After the seed sponges, which are obtained by cutting one large sponge into several pieces, have been fastened to the cement discs, these are let down with a strand of wire, or dropped down if the water is shallow, to rest on the bottom. Here they are permitted to remain for a year or two, until satisfactory growth has been attained, when they are hooked up from the bottom.

Girl Lassoed in the Street

At Greenock Leslie Morton Mitchell, an actor, was fined $7.50 for having assaulted a girl in Greenock by throwing a rope round her body and dragging her along. Mitchell is a member of a company which appeared in a Western drama, "The Cattle Thief." It is the custom of the company to walk dressed in their cowboy costumes and preceded by a cowboy band through the streets of the town in which they are playing. The accused was on horseback in the procession swinging a rope, by means of which he lassoed a girl and dragged her along the street. Members of the company said the whole affair was a joke.

FIGHTING A TRUST IN BINDER TWINE

Statement of the Grain Growers' Guide With a Logical Deduction Therefrom

In the Grain Growers' Guide appears an interesting article on binder twine. Dissatisfied with the high price of twine the Grain Growers' Association for a year past has been investigating the cause, and as a result has come to the conclusion that the American binder twine manufacturers have cornered a corner in the raw materials and established a monopoly. This, says The Guide, is a serious situation for the Western farmer, who has to have the twine at any cost, as there is nothing to take its place.

"The Secretary of the Grain Growers' Association," so we are told, "has had the problem under consideration for a long time, and last fall he took the matter up with some British capitalists and manufacturers with the object in view of starting a British binder twine industry in competition with the American trust. It was then that the investigation of the real conditions started, but the project had to be dropped, because it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the investigators that the United States binder twine trust had such an absolute monopoly on the necessary raw material that effective competition was out of the question."

The Guide adds: "There is reason to hope, however, that the Western farmer soon will be independent of the American binder twine trust. The investigation by the Grain Growers' Association and the British manufacturers resulted in an attempt now being made to introduce machinery using flax straw instead of the present material. If this experiment is successful it will mean the establishment of a new industry in the Western Canadian Provinces, a big saving for the farmer, and, besides, let him out of the twine trust's clutches." So far so good! But while struggling to free the farmer from one American combine, the Guide advocates a fiscal policy which would enable two or three score United States trusts to drive competing Canadian industries out of business and then advance the prices of many necessaries of life at their own will all over the Dominion.

HOME DRESS-MAKING

Care and Accuracy Necessary in Fitting a Waist

There are a few things which should be remembered in fitting oneself, especially if it be the difficult matter of waist-fitting. Do not put the waist on the wrong side to fit it. Always try a garment on and do the fitting of it the way you propose to wear it. This suggestion is important for the reason that few women are exactly the same in slope of shoulder and waist on both sides. When the waist is fitted to the figure on one side and is turned over on the other, you may find a defect which is due to this very thing.

When putting on a waist to be fitted slip the hands underneath it and turn the shoulder and underarm seams toward the front. If there are other seams turn these toward the back. This is necessary in order to make the waist lie flat. In pinning the front or back together, which is one of the first things to do, have at least two guide lines. The waist line at the bottom may be one. The other might be a line which dressmakers call the "chest line," a line parallel with the waist line, but only three inches down from the neck and running about six inches across the middle front.

In making alterations by pinning be sure to pin securely. Otherwise the alterations will be of little use, as by the time the waist has been removed some of the alteration marks may have been lost through falling pins.

Battle Song of Failure

We strain toward Heaven and lay hold on Hell,
With starward eyes we stumble in hard ways,
And to the moments when we see life well
Succeed the blindness of bewildered days.
But what of that? Into the sullen flesh
The soul drives home the spur with splendid sting.
Bleeding and soiled we gird ourselves afresh—
Forth, and make firm a highway for the King.

MIXED FARMING

Is the Need of the West Says Premier Sifton

Premier Sifton of Alberta who has been in the east lately, is reported as having told a Toronto newspaper man that mixed farming is the great need of the Canadian West. In part he said:

"The Western Provinces will be even more prosperous when the farmers go in for mixed farming. Our demonstration trains are fast bringing this view home to the minds of the farmers with conviction.

"There is an economic reason for impressing this truth on the minds of the farmers. It is this. All grain farming is speculative. If weather conditions, and all else, remained calculable from year to year, grain farming would have no evils. But one year the crops are all A No. 1; then comes a poor year; next, an average good year; again a big year; then a failure. Under such conditions a man may be rich one year and a pauper another. But if the farmers went in for mixed farming, other crops besides grain and cattle and horses, there would be a balance of fortunes, and Western farmers would always be in a well-to-do position, with nothing to worry about."

Premier Sifton admitted that some of the discontent in the West was caused by bad farming. "But," he said, "on the whole the farmers are satisfied with the land and with the climate. Those who grouch most are the speculative farmers who want to get rich quick and fail to do so."

HAMILTON FACTORIES

Hamilton, Ontario, known throughout the world as one of Canada's great industrial cities, has long celebrated its centennial. One by one, the city has magnetized new industries, until to-day, it has 354 factories and shops, representing capital invested of $85,000,000 and turning out products every year worth over $85,000,000.

A large number of United States companies have their Canadian branch plants in Hamilton, and several others have their commercial eyes turned that way. The citizens and the civic industrial officers have the knack of showing prospective manufacturers to the so-called Ambitious City, which now deserves a new nickname, having realized so many of its high ambitions.

A table gives statistics of the industries of Hamilton as compiled during the latest census. The figures show that over 21,000 people are employed in the factories of Hamilton, where they earn $8,594,978. The cost of the raw material used by the 354 industrial establishments in 1910 was $[illegible]. A SPIRITED DRIVER

Locomotive Engineer Who Considered and Loved an Engine as a Living Thing.

By WALTER JOSEPH DELANEY.

Doc Newton was out of a job, and that situation was becoming chronic. Never a brighter, brisker, more accommodating fellow than he, with friends everywhere; but the railroad company did not seem to want him, and the young fellow began to wonder if there was a black list, and why he had become its victim.

The roundhouse foreman could have explained the situation, but he thought too much of Doc to hurt his feelings. The boys on the dog watch could have enlightened him, but they prized his company, and sincerely hoped that things might take a turn for the better.

The truth of it was, that Doc got "wild" every time he touched a locomotive throttle—just as men go music mad when they hear the sextette from "Lucia." To him an engine was a living thing, a vital steam horse that loved to show its paces; and never was there a more spirited driver than Doc.

Once he had run No. 24 on the wrong track where the depot girders came low, and knocked off the smokestack. Later he had dumped locomotive and tender into the turntable pit. Finally, he had disregarded a signal, smashed up a grain car, and there was loose corn in the vicinity for all the chickens in the neighborhood for two months afterward.

Doc believed he was still on the "extra" list, but never got a call to go on duty for a whole month. He came down to the roundhouse every morning regularly. He was there the last thing at night. Then it began to dawn upon him that luck was against him.

"Tell you, Ruth," he said to the fair devoted girl who was the one star of hope and beauty in his firmament,

"I believe I'll try some other trade in some other town."

Ruth cried for a time. That ended Doc's determination. He went back to the roundhouse grimly. There was a gleam of light next day, but he refused to see it. He was offered a job as fireman.

"Once an engineer, always an engineer," claimed Doc proudly, but he was not sorry that some kind of a chance offered to remain with the road if things came to the worst.

Then, nobody was working one long-to-be-remembered February night. It had been a hard day for railway service. A heavy storm of snow and sleet had set in at daybreak. By night the great Southwestern system was tied up tighter than a drum. Trains were stalled all along the route. Nothing was sent out from Crofton, but at seven o'clock, on regular schedule, Doc walked into the doghouse with the business-like air of a man ready for work and expecting it.

"I can report for duty, can't I?" demanded Doc. "I seem to be the only one."

"Yes, the others are glad to snuggle down at home with no risk of a hurry call this glorious night," observed Evans.

Something did turn up—the biggest thing that had happened in the reckless, happy-go-lucky life of Mr. Doc Newton. It was the unexpected appearance of the president of the road. One line only to the west had been open. He had just arrived. The foreman recognized him and touched his cap.

"Evans," spoke the official sharply, "I find from the dispatcher that the old belt line, the coal cut-off running to Springfield, is partly out of the storm belt. Everywhere else the schedules are suspended and not a wheel running except on orders from this end. Wire that a special is coming and for me out. I must make the junction at Clay City in time to stop the night express on the Eastern. Give me your best locomotive, a clear low caboose and a hustler, and do it quick."

"I'm your man," spoke up Doc promptly, rising to his feet.

The foreman hesitated. There was no other operator in call, however. Five minutes later the outfit was ready. Facing the drifting wind and the pelting snow, No. 101 started out on its journey.

"I did it once—I guess I can qualify this time," replied the official.

They ran the first ten miles in fourteen minutes. Then a vital hour followed. Facing peril, grazing death, the two men accepted their mission stanchly. The snow came in great sheets, the wheels crunched and slid, the pilot threw up ice and slush in cascades.

They struck a trestle one-half a foot under water, and blocked with drifted wood. With a sickening sigh the locomotive swept a curve. The official piled on the coal, which burned like tinder. The light caboose swung after its groaning pilot like the tail of a kite. Then there was a whiplash away, and the engine cleared a bridge just as a break in a dam carried its center pier away.

"We've made it," panted Doc, as they rounded a hill and came in sight of Clay City, to see the Night Express on the rival road steaming down the rails a mile distant. "They've given her the right of way," he shouted, as they neared the interlocking tower.

"You must stop that train," cried the railroad magnate.

"I'm going to," said Doc grimly.

He never let up on his speed. Squarely across the tracks of the incoming train the giant engine, battered, ice coated, a brave wreck, crashed the gates to kindling wood and halted squarely, a barrier to the oncoming express.

The official jumped from 101, ran to the halted train, waved his hand to Doc, and the dripping engineer knew that he had won the day.

It was the talk of the road next morning. It was known that upon the Night Express was a railroad king, whom the president of the Southern had to intercept before he reached the city. A first interview with him blocked a ten million dollar deal with a rival railroad.

"Newton," called out the official advancing and extending his hand, "there's a check for a thousand dollars going through the mails for you from headquarters. You can go to work tomorrow on the regular list."

"What locomotive," asked Doc.

"Newton," replied the magnate, with a grim smile, "I wouldn't trust you with the oldest rattletrap on the road. After that dash three nights since, big as it was, I see that you would make the slowest accommodation a regular limited. No, you start in at $2,500 a year as division inspector."

"Ruth," observed Doc to his fiance, an hour later, "the president of the road won't trust me with a locomotive because I insist it show its paces. You will trust me with the nicest little wife in the world, though, won't you?"

"Meaning me?" smiled Ruth lovingly. "Do you think I'm not proud of the honor? You showed what real running was anyway, and you are the only man on the road that could do it."

Weight and Height

The ratio of weight to height is as follows: One should weigh from one pound and four-fifths to two pounds and two-thirds for every inch of height. Divide the number of pounds you weigh by your height in inches. If your weight exceeds two pounds and a half to every inch of height then reducing diet and exercise are to be considered.

Banana Sauce

If a banana is reduced to pulp and added to the milk or cream used as sauce over apple dumplings, a delightful flavor is imparted.

FAT IS NOT STRENGTH

Exercise and Moderate Eating Necessary for Health

Don't load the body down with fat. Eat according to your needs; not according to your likes. Outside of "bodies" which are sometimes in and sometimes out of fashion, obesity is a hindrance to the enjoyment and comfort of life.

When a person grows fat, each organ gets its portion. The consequence is often serious if these fatty deposits grow so large as to interfere with the normal action of the organs. Shortness of breath, palpitation, bronchitis and other unpleasant and unnecessary difficulties are occasioned. The two great causes of obesity are too much food and too little exercise. Strong, able-bodied persons with a moderate amount of time should make it a duty to take enough exercise in the open air to regulate their weight.

Persons who are obliged to sit or stand all day should endeavor to eat strengthening foods—but not fat-producing foods. It is particularly necessary that persons who are disabled should take great care in choosing their diet. Fat is not strength.

USED WOODEN BULLETS

Turkish Soldiers Too Stupid to Recognize Manoeuvre Cartridges

New light is thrown on the rout of the Turkish troops in Macedonia by the discovery that, besides being badly organized and badly led, they were in great part provided with dummy cartridges and dummy bullets. Mr. William Le Queux found such bullets on the battlefield, and Mr. Frank Magee, another war correspondent, brought back to England from the battlefield of Kumanovo cases of these cartridges thrown away by the Turks in their flight before the Servians. The cartridges were packed in clips of five, and had ordinary metal cases, while the wooden bullets were painted red.

It is stated that the cartridges were supplied to Turkey by German firms. They were intended solely for the use in manoeuvres of the Turkish Mauser rifles and are called "wooden manoeuvre cartridges." By what means they came to be served out to soldiers facing the Servian shells and bullets is unknown. Wooden bullets should be harmless at any distance over a few yards.

A remarkable yet simple enough explanation of these wooden bullets was supplied by Mr. Frederick A. Harrison, of the English firm of Maxims and Co.

"I don't know," he said, "whether there is some veiled suggestion in the report that these cartridges were 'made in Germany.' As a matter of fact, they were only put together in Germany. My firm supplied not hundreds, but millions of these wooden bullets to Germany, as well as most other countries in Europe, from our factory. They are made to be used at manoeuvres only and were certainly introduced for that purpose into the Turkish army by the German instructors. Owing to the confusion of the war and the ignorance of the Turkish army store officials, some of this manoeuvre ammunition evidently was served out for use in the field.

"The painting red of the bullets was intended, of course, to distinguish the 'wood' from the real bullets, though the weight should have been a sufficient indication to any but the newest recruit."

YET THEY WANT TO VOTE

They stood outside the busy shop,
And gazed at things displayed:
At hats and gowns and lingerie,
For widow, wife and maid.
"A pretty thing," he said at last,
And pointed at a hat.
"A pretty thing!" she quick returned
"Why no one's wearing that!"

He remained discreetly silent,
Till he saw a tailored suit.
"There!" he cried, "is a corker;
That's what I call a beaut."
She turned on him a glance of scorn
A glance that crushed him flat;
And the verdict that she uttered was:
"They all are wearing that!"

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself, and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of them have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar excretion as effectually as SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES. This preparation is successfully applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbo-hydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly [illegible] anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We can also send testimonials from some of the most prominent people in nearly any town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

LIN LEE, PATRIOT

How He Provided for His Wife's Safety When Called on to Fight.

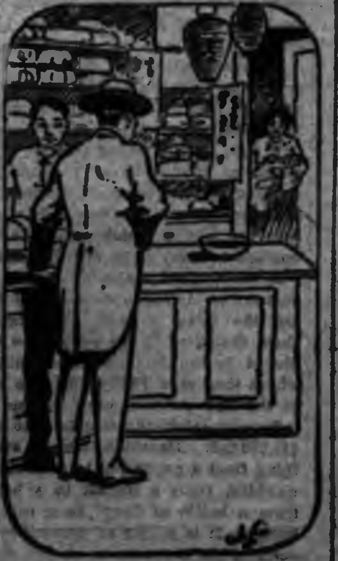
By GEORGE MUNSON.

Nobody ever suspected that there were two Chinamen in Lin Lee's laundry until we met Lin Lee. For the matter of that, nobody cared, or would have cared, if there had been half a dozen. Chinamen come and go and nobody takes any stock of them except the immigration officials, mainly because all Chinamen look alike, at first glance, to the untrained Caucasian eye. And the first glance is likely in most cases, to be the last, also.

In that part of Virginia where Lin Lee had his temporary residence Chinamen are not common. The slight prejudice against them in the north and the considerable antagonism of the west do not exist. If they were not pig-tailed heathen they might pass among us whites as equals—and I come of the Ramsay family. To say that is quite enough in our part of the country.

Everybody liked Lin Lee. He had cut off his pigtail and he attended the Episcopal church. When he brought home the laundry he was generally asked to come into the parlor and have a glass of wine. Yes, it sounds odd, I know, but Lee was a very intelligent man, a member of the Chinese Reform association, and had studied law in Canton, he told us, before the Manchus drove him from the country on account of his participation in a seditious movement. Like all Chinamen, he had a natural genius for the washtub.

So Lin Lee became a resident of our village and, as I said, everybody thought he occupied his shanty alone. We thought so until the evening when, having brought home the laundry in its usual highly starched condition, and having received the red paper with its mysterious hieroglyphics which he always left as security, he turned round and whistled and another Chinaman came out of the darkness.



It Was Lin Lee.

"My cousin, Lin Lee," he volunteered. "He washee well—as well as me. He take your laundry tonight."

"Where are you going, Lin?" asked my father.

Lin grinned. "Me going to China," he said. "Me fight in grand army of the republic."

That sounded a little like blasphemy to my father, who was a Grand Army man, and fought under Grant, though it cost him his estates to do so and he was boycotted by the neighbors until an indefinite time in the seventies. However, all that is forgotten now, thank God. We understood that Lin Lee had felt the breath of patriotism stirring in the dry, sapless [illegible] of his native land and wished to enroll himself under the Dragon flag to fight against the tyrant, and, as patriotic Americans, we could not but approve his choice.

Lin Lee disappeared just as mysteriously as Lin Lee had come, but that made no difference. Lin Lee was just as capable a laundryman as Lin Lee. The ladies of our family, in fact, maintained that Lin Lee had a special genius for interpreting the laundry needs of their own garments and, as a result, Lin Lee was to be seen ironing until far into the night in his little store on Main street. It is strange, by the way, isn't it, that one always sees Chinamen ironing and never washing.

Lin Lee was also an Episcopalian, we found, and when he made his first visit to our church everyone sat up and gasped. He was attired in quite the extreme of fashion, in a silk hat and frockcoat and patent leather shoes. He carried a silver-head cane, too, and was very devotional in the responses. The rector took a great fancy to him and invited him to his house to discuss theology. Mrs. Stubbs, his wife, was equally attached to him.

Yes, it was odd what a general favorite Lin Lee became. Of course ladies are apt to take a fancy to Chinamen, especially when they are converted. People say that they only pretend to believe, for the sake of advantages. I don't know much about that, but anyhow, the ladies all liked him and, what is stranger, the men too. Lin Lee was astonishingly well posted in western ways. But he wouldn't drink and wouldn't swear. None of us thought the less of him on that account.

"Any news of your cousin, Lee?" we would ask, as we stopped in to watch him bending over his iron and pressing with his scrawny arms. And Lee always looked up and smiled and shook his head.

Whether or not any news of the missing cousin filtered through to him, he always denied knowledge of his relative. Yet somehow he never seemed to doubt that Lee would return. And when a year had rolled by and Lin had become only a memory, he still maintained the same assurance. Imperturbable, suave, courteous, jolly, Lin Lee was a social asset in our town.

And then the missing cousin turned up just as unexpectedly as he had gone. One evening Lin Lee stepped into our parlor, his basket on his arm, as though he had only left us the night before, and received the red paper from my mother. Then he announced:

"Me going to leave tomorrow. No more wash. My cousin, Sam Hong, has bought my shop."

"And your other cousin—Lin Lee?" we asked.

"He go away," replied our visitor. "No see any more."

That was all. Sam Hong was a very "ornery" kind of Chinaman, with a thick pigtail, a surly expression, and an ugly cast in his eye. He was a rank heathen and was suspected of smoking opium in his little shack behind the store on Sunday afternoons. Our interest in the Celestial race rapidly evanesced.

It must have been nearly a year after our friends' departure that business called me to Richmond. I was strolling down one of the side streets when I caught sight of Lin Lee behind the glass window of a laundry, ironing as hard as ever. I walked in.

He greeted me with the same cheerful smile as ever. We shook hands and discussed old times.

"Why did you leave us so suddenly, Lin Lee?" I asked. "We all miss you in our town. What was the matter? Didn't we treat you well?"

"Sure—fine," answered Lin Lee with a broad grin. "I come to Richmond to open bigger place, more business. I get married."

Then I ventured upon a very bold experiment. I asked if he would present me to Mrs. Lin Lee. I knew it was not Chinese etiquette and I was not surprised when he told me that she was out.

But she wasn't out, because at that moment the door opened and a Chinese woman, with a little, black-haired, squint-eyed baby in her arms, peered out. I knew her too. It was Mrs. Lin Lee—once Mr. Lin Lee. She nodded and smiled and shut the door in my face and I said good-bye quickly and went out.

Now I hold no brief for or against Chinamen, but I will say I was confounded at this horrible deception at the time. But afterward I began thinking; could he have been assured of his wife's safety, living alone in our town, the only Celestial within twenty miles? I think he could; I know he could. But I can imagine what dangers he may have feared for her—the young husband, called back eight thousand miles to fight his country's battles, with all he loved dwelling alone among white-faced barbarians.

WHEN BIRDS MIGRATE

Humanitarian Invention to Prevent Devastation of Flocks

Every spring thousands of migrating birds are dashed to death on the lighthouses that surround the British coasts.

A Dutch naturalist has invented a contrivance to prevent this destruction, and experiments are being made with it at the lighthouses at St. Catherine's, on the coast of the Isle of Wight, and the Casquets, in the English Channel. Both of these are on the principal migration routes, and annually account for the loss of great numbers of birds.

The naturalist takes the view that the birds are not stunned or killed by the impact with the lantern, but are attracted to the light, and keep circling about it until they perish. He accordingly has devised a series of resting-places, which fit on the lantern itself.

Experiments already conducted show the value of this invention, in one instance reducing the mortality from thousands of birds nightly to a hundred during the whole migration period.

CARE OF THE TEETH

Absolute Cleanliness Necessary to Prevent Decay and Preserve Health

Good teeth are not accidental. They are our birthright. If by reason of lack of early training we failed to preserve our birthright, for the sake of our children let's not let the coming generation have poor teeth. Let's teach them habits of cleanliness as regards their teeth. They will thank us for it later.

Teeth kept perfectly clean cannot decay. Decay is caused by bacteria which find lodgment in protected places on tooth surfaces and by breaking down the sweets and starches of food remnants produce an acid that demolishes the tooth substance.

It is regarded as impossible to avoid all decay without constant attention for the purpose of keeping all tooth surface absolutely clean, but with such care as can be given by proper brushing and rinsing the teeth and mouth three times a day and the use of silk floss once a day, it is possible that 75 per cent. of the decay in children's teeth may be avoided.

It is highly important to protect the teeth of children, for with decayed teeth food cannot be properly chewed and improperly chewed food cannot be properly digested. As a consequence proper body development is impaired, progress in studies is retarded and resistance to disease is rendered below par. Constant swallowing of the foul products of decay, combined with the lack of proper assimilation of food, produces anaemia, tonsillar disease, rheumatism and a number of ailments classed as "school diseases." If "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" it is manifestly worth while to avoid these conditions by remedying the defects of teeth which so commonly cause them.

To properly brush the teeth and accomplish the most good, select a medium stiff brush with tufted bristles and in brushing place the brush with bristles up beside the upper teeth and rotate so that the bristles will cleanse both gums and teeth. Brush the opposite way when cleansing the lower teeth. To cleanse the inner surface of the teeth use the end of the brush. Also use the brush on the tongue and palate and finally rinse the mouth thoroughly, forcing the water between the teeth.

The most important tooth in the mouth and the one most frequently lost through decay is the first permanent molar. The "baby molars" should not be lost until the ninth year of life, but the first permanent molar, which comes in at six years of age, should not be lost at all.

WATCH THE NUMBERS

Novel Device Shows Plainly Speed of Motorist

Speed indicators for automobiles have been invented without number during the past few years, but the newest kind is a speedometer that not only shows the speed to the driver of the machine, but to the people on the street, as well. A portion of the windshield on the machine is ruled off into squares, and each square marked with a figure, indicating the number of miles per hour. Each square is a compartment and is equipped with an electric light. Under the hand-needle of an especially prepared speedometer, electrical contacts are placed, connecting with the various figures. As the car gathers speed, the needle moves around the face of the speedometer over the contacts which cause the lights to flash. The device has been patented and is said to give good service, as it settles all controversy as to speed, since the only figure that is visible is the figure showing the actual speed of the car. The device is not believed to be very useful for work in daylight, but it will work satisfactorily at night.

PROTECT THE HOME

The Advisability of Caring For Unfortunate Mothers and Children

J. O. McCarthy, Toronto, in addressing the Canadian Club, Kingston, said in part:

"No mother left with her little family to support should have to leave them uncared for while she goes out to earn bread for them. The neglected child on the street soon becomes a delinquent. Let the childless mansion help care for the state's fatherless children. It would be a wise policy for the government to spend some of the money spent in getting emigrants from the world over in caring for the orphans who are generally speaking born of the best and will make the best citizens in the days to come.

"Wife desertion is nine times out of ten child desertion also. I wish I could find some place hot enough for the despicable wretch that deserts wife and children, and yet in this country the State must share the blame. Under the present law the family must be in want, paupers, before the deserter can be punished. The law should be changed and desertion made a criminal offence. Let the women of Canada make the law for the deserter; we men haven't much to be proud of in this connection.

"A dollar and costs or thirty days is not the same or 20th century treatment for the inebriate. Protection and care rather than punishment should be the thought. The hospital is more needed than the cell. Every muscle, every tissue, every brain cell of the inebriate is sick. Instead of the cell put him on an industrial farm in the country where with work, food, sleep and God's fresh air and sunlight he will rebuild mentally and physically. You thus save dollars and you save a man to the community and to his family. Some glad day the State will stop creating inebriates and then treating them as criminals."

Packing Plants

Writing from Moose Jaw to his paper, Mr. Norman Lambert, Western representative of the Toronto Globe, says:

"Already plans are being made by public and private interests for the accommodation of the increased volume of mixed farming products which will be distributed in this Province in future. The Gordon-Ironsides-Fares Co. have arranged to build a large packing plant at Moose Jaw, and Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, is now talking of the establishment of a packing plant and abattoir on a co-operative basis, similar to that of the elevator and creamery companies in Saskatchewan."

No More Asthma A Cure Discovered That Really Does Cure

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific [illegible], a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once, say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drug store and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh."

The one-dollar package last two months, small size, 50c; sample size 25c; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

All the young people of the Ladies' Literary Society and the members of the Y.A.S. interested in elocution and dramatics, are requested to be present at the Alphonsus Lyceum to-night for the purpose of organizing for the season. This work will receive every encouragement, and it is expected that some good talent will be developed.

In Conference.

The Board of County Judges, of which Judge Huycke is a member, met at Osgoode Hall, Toronto to consider the rules of tariff of costs applicable to the Surrogate Court. The work of the Board in regard to County and Division Courts has been completed, but the work of the Surrogate Court will not be completed till the November sittings.

Hooked His Hand.

In landing a 'lunge at Rice Lake the other day a local fisherman met with a nasty accident. He had pulled the fish up to the boat and gave him a final whirl into the boat and in some manner the hooks were freed from its mouth and caught in the fisherman's hand, sinking rather deeply into the fleshy part. He was alone in a canoe and with no one to assist him, it is stated that he had to perform the operation on himself. Using his own jackknife he dug the hooks out, making an ugly wound.

30 DAYS CAMPAIGN.

The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal are making an urgent appeal to their present subscribers to send in renewal subscriptions during October and relieve the enormous rush at the close of the year. It is a reasonable request from a newspaper in such great demand, and subscribers have nothing to lose by complying. The Family Herald and Weekly Star is looking for a bigger season than ever before. It is indeed a big dollar's worth.

P. C. Brown Applied.

Thomas Graves for over twenty years a member of the Chatham police force, has been appointed Chief of Police of Chatham by the Board of Police Commissioners. Applications were received from more than a dozen persons, including J. T. B. Chilton, Chief of Police of Lindsay; A. W. Ackerman, Chief Constable of Port Hope, and John Brown, police constable attached to the Peterborough police department. Many of the applications were eliminated on account of lack of experience. A salary of $1,000 a year goes with the appointment. The new chief will succeed John Holmes, who sent in his resignation some time ago.

ARE YOU GOING WEST THIS FALL.

If so, take advantage of the remarkably low one-way second-class Colonist Rates to Vancouver, Victoria, Nelson, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, etc., in effect daily until October 10; or if Western Canada is your destination, the low-rate Homeseekers' Excursions, in effect each Tuesday until October 28. The route is one of the most scenic in the world. Bear in mind that the Canadian Pacific Railway offers the finest possible equipment and fastest train service. It is the only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers, also dining-cars, to Winnipeg and Vancouver. By travelling C.P.R. you avoid the necessity of changing depots. All equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R., affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C.P.R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

MATRIMONIAL

Robinson—Morris.

Very quietly at St. Stephens Church, Toronto, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Serena Morris, daughter of Mr. W. C. Morris, formerly of Peterborough, to Mr. Wm. Robinson, of Toronto. The bride was attired in a grey travelling dress, with hat to match. She was attended by her sister, and Mr. John Robinson was best man. After a honeymoon in Quebec, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson will reside at 664 Shaw street, Toronto.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, GAS OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3,000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

POLICE COURT NEWS

Jas. Corbett, who was arrested in company with Young and appeared on the same charge, failed to give a satisfactory account of himself, and was remanded for a week.

Corbett claims Toronto as his home. Young said he met him at Fort William.

Alex. Young, an Englishman late of Vancouver and at present on his way home to the old country, appeared in Police Court [illegible] morning on the charge of trespassing on the C.P.R. property. He pleaded guilty and explained to the Chief that he was on his way home. He was allowed to proceed.

Judgment was given at the Police Court yesterday morning by Magistrate Dumble in favor of the complainant, Gerald Dunsford, in the Dunsford vs. Pullinghorn case. Dunsford claimed $10 due him from Dr. Pullinghorn, who put in a counter claim of $7.50. Magistrate Dumble, on the evidence presented, reduced his counter claim to $8 and awarded $2 to Dunsford.

Yesterday morning Magistrate Dumble had to listen to another outburst from Elm street. The principals accused each other of perpetrating misdeeds of a most wrongful character. "It's just the next time" said His Worship in imposing a fine of $5 on the defendant.

ARRESTED ON A CHARGE OF BURGLARY

Lawrence Killingbeck and Herbert Landry, two youths well known to Peterborough citizens on account of their frequent dealings with the police department, have been apprehended in Lindsay in connection with a burglary that occurred there last Thursday. A minor charge of vagrancy has been registered against the two men and a hearing has been set down for Friday, Oct. 10th and during the time that is now elapsing some evidence may be found which will bring the burglarious home to them.

SERMON CAUSES GREAT SENSATION

London, Oct. 6.—The Bishop of London preached a sensational sermon at the opening of the Church of England congress at Southampton. The bishop dealt with the invocation of saints and pleaded for the restoration of the aspect of the doctrine of the communion of saints.

It is true that he guarded himself by saying that practice was one thing and doctrine another, but he contended that "we were pledged to the doctrine every time we recited the apostles' creed," and he knew of men to whom the invocation of saints meant everything in their lives next to their belief in the holy trinity.

DID CHILD WAKE UP CROSS OR FEVERISH?

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs" to clean the bowels.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeits are being sold here. Don't be fooled!

SERVIANS DRIVE BACK ALBANIANS

Belgrade, Oct. 6.—The Albanians are falling back all along the line, says the Daily Telegraph's Belgrade correspondent. "After desperate fighting the Servian troops have entered Struga, six miles from Ochrida, having cleared that territory and scattered the Albanians, who evidently are at a loss how to escape, their retreat over the river being cut. The damage done by the Albanians is enormous.

"Believing that the Servian squadron of Lyumkula heralded a general retreat, the Albanians attacked vigorously in front of Prisrend, only to be decimated by the Servian fire, which was reserved until the enemy was within 500 yards of their trenches. Panic stricken, the Albanians retreated to the four winds.

"Belgrade is confident that the rebellion is over, but the Albanians probably will follow the tactics they adopted under Turkish rule and attack again as soon as they recoup their forces in the mountains."

GIBSONS LIFE TO BE SPARED CABINET YIELDS TO PETITIONERS

But Official Announcement Cannot be Made Until the Papers Have Been to The Administrators at Quebec

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—If ever a man felt happy, it is John Gibson, when he learned last night shortly before 10 o'clock that his son Charles was not to suffer the dread penalty for a crime, the guilt of which, in public opinion does not rest upon his shoulders.

The decision from the Cabinet was greeted with an outburst of cheers from all quarters, when it was known the petitions had not been signed in vain. Herbert Lennox, K.C., Gibson's counsel, backed up by representative clergy and laymen of Toronto, and further fortified by a petition containing 50,000 signatures, made a last and desperate fight before a committee of the Cabinet, to stay the hands of death from passing over the condemned young man, while there hung even the shadow of a doubt as to his innocence. Their efforts have been successful. The opinion that now runs high, is that a new trial may be granted, whereby his entire innocence may be proclaimed.

Yes, Gibson's life is to be spared; but the official announcement must abide unuttered, until the papers have gone through the hands of the Administrators. The firm belief in Gibson's innocence has been established in the minds of not only of Toronto people, but citizens all over the Province and Dominion, and messages to the Cabinet have been frequent and earnestly and deeply touching in sincerity.

Gibson's father has maintained his son's innocence from the first, and the result of the petition was indeed a gratifying one to him. The convictions in tens of thousands of minds that if Gibson was hanged there would be a great and grave miscarriage of justice was indeed strong, and never before has such wide-spread influence been brought to bear to snatch a doomed man virtually from the jaws of death.

Rev. John McNeill and Rabbi Jacobs arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning with fresh names to the petition, making a total of 57,646. These were presented to the Cabinet and both addressed the Ministers, pleading for the life of Gibson.

DOUBT OF HIS GUILT.

In view of his youth and the doubt of his guilt, he thought he should not hang. He pointed out that the petitions were widely signed by prominent members of the Jewish community, including the Hebrew magistrates, many lawyers and business men.

"I saw Gibson just before he left," said Rev. Mr. McNeill. "He looked me straight in the face and protested again his innocence. He said 'I do not know who did it, but I know I did not.'"

"I am certain, myself, Gibson is innocent." Mr. McNeill made an eloquent plea to the Cabinet for mercy.

Mr. Lennox received a letter from Gibson's father yesterday morning making a last final plea for his son. "Now, Mr. Lennox," he wrote, "For God's sake make the fight of your life and save my boy. I am almost distracted, but something tells me you are going to win. Good night, and God be with you and all other kind friends who are fighting so hard for Charlie's life."

PRESBYTERIANS ACTIVE.

Rev. Mr. Lang received the following telegram to-day from the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, Rev. Murdock MacKenzie. "As Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, I would earnestly entreat the Dominion Cabinet to commute the sentence of Charles Gibson to life imprisonment." Mr. Lang presented this telegram to the Premier yesterday.

Mr. Lennox also yesterday morning received a deluge of letters and telegrams backing up his fight for Gibson. A typical letter was from Rev. George Barry, Methodist minister of Coaticook, Que. Mr. Barry wrote: "If the state hangs Charles Gibson and at some time the doomed man is proven innocent, who will hang the murderer? As part of the State and in view of the grave doubts of the young man's guilt, I plead with the State to be careful and commute sentence to life imprisonment."

THE PASSING OF EDWARD CLARKE

One of the pioneer residents of this city passed away yesterday morning. Mr. Edward Clarke, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Peterborough, breathed his last about 6 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Thomas Jobe, 51 Ware street, his daughter.

The late Mr. Clarke was born in 1826 at Blackheath Hill, Kent, England. He received his early education in the old land. He married May Noami Crump in 1845 at Woolwich and in 1857 came to Canada, settling first in Toronto. He was later engaged at Cobourg on the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway. Mr. Clarke first became a resident of Peterborough when the late King Edward made his initial visit to Peterborough, and had up to the time of his death been a resident of this city.

His faculties he retained to the last and was in fairly good health until about eight weeks ago. He was an attendant at St. John's Anglican church.

His wife predeceased him some 18 years ago, and there are now two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Jobe, of this city, Mrs. Wm. Johnston, of Rochester, and two sons, Mr. Charles Clarke of Indiana and Mr. Frank Clarke, the popular jeweller, left to mourn his death.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Jobe, to the Little Lake cemetery.

RUSSIAN PRINCE IS ACCUSER OF AN AMERICAN GIRL

Urussoff Says She Made Off With His Ring Worth $40,000.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 7.—The political police are aiding the Italian police in order to run down an adventuress, said to be an American girl whom Prince Urussoff accuses of having robbed him of a ring worth $40,000.

This ring was a present Czar Alexander gave to the prince's grandfather, and the emperor is determined to recover the jewel, if possible.

The young prince has given a glowing description of the fair bandit whom he met in Vienna at an English tea and whom he invited to accompany him to Venice. He took a little yellow bag of [illegible] along the trunk, and the prince hired a whole Wagner car for himself and lady. Soon after arriving in Venice he lost sight of the lady and at the same time missed the ring and his golden toilet set.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair, not much change in temperature.

BOARD OF EDUCATION MET IN REGULAR SESSION LAST NIGHT

The Board of Education met last night in regular monthly session, Chairman Dr. Morrison presiding. There were also present J. J. Turner, Jr., L. M. Hayes, W. H. Hill, John Crane, Dr. Middleton, R. F. Ackerman, Col. Miller.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. wrote suggesting that flag poles may be needed for the two new schools and offering same with all equipment for $60 each. Sent to the Building Committee with power to act.

Contractor W. J. Johnston wrote stating that he had completed the new East Ward school, which he now considered as taken off his hands by the Board of Education.—Received.

Mr. Peever, secretary of the P.C.I.A.A., wrote that the usual grant of $30 is badly needed to defray expenses connected with the annual field day of sports held on October 3rd.—Granted.

On recommendation of the Property Committee, a substantial board fence will be erected between the Queen Alexandra School and Grace church, to prevent school children from breaking windows in the latter building, as reported to have been the case for some time past.

Dr. Morrison reported that the Queen Mary school in East City opened last Monday with 48 pupils, which goes to show that the Board had not overestimated the need for the new schools.

Industrial Classes.

Inspector Mowat reported that upwards of 200 had registered for the industrial classes up to last night.

Mr. R. G. Patterson wrote suggesting that the old West City School building be retained, as an industrial school, to be conducted in the day time. This suggestion was thought a good one, and went to the Property Committee, to report.

Share of Insurance.

Mr. J. J. Turner contended that much criticism prevails re the insurance of schools. And it is freely offered that such business should be distributed as equally as possible. He would like to know if the Finance Committee had yet moved in regard to placing insurance on the two new schools.

Mr. L. M. Hayes replied that the above matter had not been dealt with yet by the Finance Committee. When the question is considered, the insurance will be distributed.

Need the Money.

On motion of Mr. J. J. Turner, the City Council will be asked that the money set aside for the purchase of the additional lot for the King Edward school be paid over to the School Board as soon as possible.

For The Choral Society.

The report of the Supervision Committee, recommending that the St. George's Choral Society be allowed the use of the P.C.I. Assembly Hall, at a fee of $25 for the season and $1 a night for the janitor, was adopted.

JAMES RAY STILL IN WEST ONTARIO

Woodstock, Oct. 7.—Chief Killing has received a post card containing a description of "James Ray," the cheque artist, who victimized several bank managers in Ontario, with an alleged accomplice. These men are supposed to be still in Western Ontario, and the police of all the towns and cities have been asked to be on the look out for them.

ORANGEMEN WILL DEFY THE POLICE IN ULSTER'S NAME

Dominion Government Receives Indignant and Vigorous Protests Against Repressive Attitued

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—The Government is receiving warm protests against its attitude towards Western Ulster sympathizers in Canada. It is pointed out that for many years supporters of Home Rule have been allowed a free hand in Canada, both in raising money and sending men to advance that cause. The application of the Criminal Code has never been threatened when leading Irish Nationalists toured Canada, holding public meetings at which large sums of money were raised for the purpose of influencing councils of his Majesty and his Houses of Parliament to bring about Home Rule.

Ray Duly Subscribes.

Now it is held that those who take the opposite view and are against Home Rule being forced on the north of Ireland should have a free hand.

A number of indignant communications have already been sent to the Government by Ulster sympathizers, who declare that they will not tolerate interference by Dominion detectives if they desire to send either men or money to aid the cause of Sir Edward Carson in Ulster.

Winnipeg Promises 500 Men.

Winnipeg, Oct. 7.—The Orangemen of this district have passed a resolution which they have conveyed to Sir Edward Carson and other Ulster leaders, to the effect that "if their services are required, a fully drilled regiment of 500 Orangemen from the Winnipeg Orange Lodges, under experienced and capable officers will be raised and sent to their aid."

According to the Winnipeg Telegram, "a bluff" is what John Baillie, secretary of the Orange Lodge in Winnipeg, calls the announcement that the Dominion Police would prevent Canadians from going to the threatened civil war in Ulster.

Await Carson's Orders.

He added that the official offer of the Winnipeg men had been sent to Sir Edward Carson by mail, and that the reply had not been received. The reply was expected to be such as would practically be an instruction to the Winnipeg Orangemen. They were ready to go to Ulster if needed. When a group of officers attending the meeting were informed of the proposed movement of the Dominion Police, they laughed and called it a bluff. Admitting that the action might be taken, it was said that the Dominion Police might be able to stop 500 men. If Orangemen bought tickets to Ireland as private individuals, it was also said, they could not be stopped. "At any rate," said one officer, "if the need arises, we will go some way."

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT SAILS ON THE 17TH

London, Oct., 7.—It is officially stated from Clarence House that the Duchess of Connaught will accompany the Duke to Canada when his Royal Highness returns on the 17th inst. Princess Patricia will also travel with the Duke. The Duchess has made remarkable progress during the past few weeks, and it is confidently hoped that in the near future effects of her recent illness will have disappeared. Yesterday the Duke and Duchess and Princess Patricia motored up from Bagshot to Clarence House, where they will be in residence until the date of their departure for Canada.

AUSTRALIA SORRY THAT NAVAL CONFERENCE WAS CALLED OFF

Sydney, Oct. 7.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that the announcement that the Imperial Government had decided not to call a naval conference has caused surprise, mingled with some resentment, here, especially as it synchronizes with the celebrations in honor of the arrival of the Australian warships. The Minister of Defence said last night that supposing the intelligence to be officially confirmed, it would require considerable justification, and would be received with deep regret. It is declared that the agreement of 1909 has not been carried out by the Mother Country, and that Australia ought to know what the intentions of the Imperial Aovernment are and what it thinks of the needs of defence in the Pacific generally, and what it will do to get those needs cared for. An inter-dominion conference is suggested if the Imperial Government persists in its refusal to call a conference, but it is hoped that this will not be necessary, on account of the harm it might do to the cause of Imperial unity. The political stability at present existing here is not regarded as justification for the Home Government's attitude in proposing a conference which was approved and strongly urged by the Fisher Government. The hope is expressed on all sides that the Imperial Government will reconsider its decision.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—The work of the Canadian Government in wireless telegraphy takes rank as the most progressive in the world.

With the completion of three new wireless stations on the Great Lakes this fall, Canada will have the largest stretch in the world covered by wireless. The complete chain of wireless will be from Port Arthur to the Atlantic Coast, so that navigation from Cape Race to Port Arthur over the whole St. Lawrence system, a distance of 2,000 miles, will be under wireless control. The three new stations are at Port Burwell, which will command Lake Erie at Toronto Island and at Kingston. The station at Port Burwell will be erected this winter and facilitate the car-ferry service there.

In Other Districts.

Its use in the outlying districts of the Dominion is also being recognized and advanced by the Government and commercial firms are being assisted. Many applications are being received from commercial firms in outlying parts of British Columbia for licenses to erect small wireless stations, which could be in communication with the Government chain and then have access to the outside world. Weather conditions there often cause complete breakdowns in the telegraphic systems.

On the Queen Charlotte Islands the two wireless stations are being connected with the interior by telephonic lines and thus secure an outlet. This shows the advantage of wireless as there is no cable service from the Queen Charlotte Island to the mainland.

SIR RICHARD MAC RETURNS TO TOWN

London, Oct., 7.—Sir Richard McBride returned to London to-day from the continent where he enjoyed complete rest, and City Carlton Club where Anglo-Canadian financiers and men of business foregather daily, entertains him at luncheon on Friday. Mrs. Sam Hughes and Miss Alice Hughes have arrived in Paris to spend the winter at Bellevue Montgomery. Hon Col. Sam Hughes will visit Paris before sailing for Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hembach are in Paris on their wedding trip.

MR. ASQUITH IS ANXIOUS TO AVOID AN ULSTER CONFERENCE

Result of Home Secretary McKenna's Speech of Yesterday is To-day Declared Diminish Chance of Parley

London, Oct. 7.—Prospects of a conference on the Ulster problem appear to be diminishing somewhat, judged by Home Secretary McKenna's speech last night.

What were they to confer about, he asked. A conference meant nothing but pointless procrastination. To-night's Westminster Gazette, the soundest Liberal newspaper, agrees with Mr. McKenna, adding, "What the Government cannot do without making itself ridiculous or undermining the whole cause of constitutional authority is to hoist the white feather to Carson's Provisional Government."

A well informed Parliamentary correspondent of The Yorkshire Post writes: "I do not find among the general body of Unionists, anything approaching the whole-hearted support for a conference. It is felt no common ground exists on which the Opposition and the Government could meet. Any conference in such circumstances would be doomed to failure."

The Globe advises Unionists to keep off the conference, declaring the Government is in a cleft stick and unless it can allure the Unionist leaders into a false position against the wishes of the party, dissolution is their only alternative." The Pall Mall Gazette while describing Mr. McKenna's speech as a declaration of war, says it is well known there are two forces in the Cabinet and public will await Mr. Churchill's speech at Dundee with added interest.

SPORTS

The first game of the world's series, saw its start and finish yesterday, when the New York Giants went down to the Philadelphia Athletics to a score of 6—4. The interest in the game was manifest in the city, and it was to the satisfaction of a great many when the final score was made known. The hitting seemed to have been all with the Athletics, for Schang, catcher, and Collins, 1b, both tripled in the fourth, while Baker, the popular 3rd base, and hitter of merit, drove a homer in the fifth and brought Collins home.

Marquard was driven from the mound in the fifth and was substituted by Crandall in the 6th. Crandall lasted but two innings, for in the eighth Collins and Baker singled and McInnis doubled to left and that was all—three hits and one run in two innings being quite sufficient. Tesreau then came to the rescue and kept the Athletics down to three hits without any runs.

Athletics . .	000320010—6	11	1
Giants . . .	001000030—4	11	0

The line-up was:

New York.
Schafer, centre field.
Doyle, second base.
Fletcher, shortstop.
Herzog, third base.
Murray, right field.
McLean, catcher.
Merkle, first base.
Marquard, pitcher.
Crandall, pitcher.
Tesreau, pitcher.

Philadelphia.
E. Murphy, right field.
Collins, second base.
Baker, third base.
McInnis, first base.
Strunk, centre field.
Barry, shortstop.
Schang, catcher.
Bender, pitcher.

WEDS IN SHROUD MADE FOR DEATH

Baltimore, Oct. 7.—After being pronounced incurably ill with an abdominal trouble by a score or more of physicians and operated on nine times, each time with supposedly fewer chances of recovery, Miss Sophie M. Koerth of this city was married to Jeremiah J. Rollsbach in the dress which was made four years ago with her own hands for her shroud.

Four months ago, after the ninth and most hazardous operation, Miss Koerth felt for the first time that a cure had been effected. Since then she has been strong enough to carry a market basket half a mile or more, and has not felt a trace of her former pain.

RUILING IN SULZER CASE IS REVERSED

Testimony at Impeachment Trial Will Not be Stricken Out

Albany, N. Y. Oct. 7.—Judge Cullen's ruling striking out of the record of the Sulzer impeachment trial the testimony of Allan A. Ryan regarding Sulzer appeal for aid to the Republican Senators, was overruled by the Impeachment Court to-day. This permits the court to consider this evidence when it deliberates on its verdict. Ryan was then recalled as a witness.

Allan A. Ryan at the Sulzer impeachment trial to-day swore that Gov. Sulzer appealed to him to have Delancey Nicol Chas. F. Murphy, of Tammany Hall, and persuade him to call off the impeachment trial. Yesterday Ryan testified that he had given Sulzer $10,000 towards the candidates.

BAD COMPLEXIONS ARE NOW EASILY DISCARDED

(From the Beauty Seeker)

Every woman has it in her own hands to possess a beautiful and youthful complexion. No matter how soiled, faded or coarse the cuticle, ordinary mercolized wax will actually remove it, and Nature will substitute a skin as soft, clear and lovely as a child's. Action of the wax is not drastic, but gentle and agreeable. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, yet no evidence of the treatment is discernible, other than the gradual complexional improvement. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, suffices for most cases. It is put on at bedtime like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water. It is a certain method of discarding freckles, liver spots, moth patches, blackheads and pimples.

Wrinkles can be treated with benefit by bathing the face in a lotion prepared by dissolving 1 ounce [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

UNCROWNED RULERS

Who rules Russia? Not the Czar, some people say, but the Czar's mother. At any rate, he has often been known to change his views very suddenly after an interview with the Dowager Empress. From these interviews he is said to come out looking very subdued. Besides his mother, various princely advisers are said to have had at different times a great deal to say to Russia's policy.

A man of weight—in both senses—in Russia is Prince Vladimir Orloff, who weighs over three hundred pounds, and who is said to have had a great deal to do with urging the Czar into war with Japan. And Russian politics depend largely on which particular high official has the Czar's ear at the moment.

The Emperor of Austria is getting very old, and his place is largely taken by his nephew, the Archduke Ferdinand. The Archduke himself is said to be considerably influenced by one of his private secretaries.

Taking it all round, in fact, Europe has far more kings than countries, and the uncrowned are not always the least powerful. In Africa, too, Egypt is a country whose nominal ruler, the Khedive, is a mere puppet in the hands of Britain's representative, all the strings of Egypt being pulled by the Sirdar.

ALFRED NOYES
a successful English poet. He maintains that there is money in the writing of verse, and proves it by keeping up a considerable establishment entirely from the sale of his published works.

YOUR OLD SKIRT

How to Renew the Life of a Favorite Article of Dress

We all know that it is to possess a skirt to which we have become attached, but which, in spite of our care, is beginning to look old and shabby. To any woman desirous of rendering such a skirt almost new again, the following hints will be both useful and practicable, as they have been tried and proved.

The first thing to do is to have the skirt cleaned or washed. It is quite easy to wash a serge skirt at home. Get a tub of warm soapy water, put the skirt in it, and "dolly" it. If you have not a regular "dolly," a very good plan is to turn the wash board upside down, and, holding the legs firmly, thoroughly pummel the skirt with the top end of the board.

Rub soap on the dirtiest parts, and give them special attention. Two washes will be sufficient, and two good rinses in warm water. Shake thoroughly, and hang to dry the right way up. On no account hang by the hem. When dry—by-the-by, it should be dried in the open air—you may set about the work of renovation with needle and thread.

First darn any holes there may be in the body of the skirt. Do not attempt to mend the band, as this will receive attention later. When you have done this, you can start on the bottom of the skirt. This should be bound with narrow binding, put on much in the manner of a false hem.

Now you must see what can be done to the top of the skirt. First you must carefully unpick, not cut off, the old waistbelt. If you find, when you have done this, that the pins which pin up your skirt have torn holes in the stuff below the waistbelt, get some material and lightly sew patches underneath the holes, then neatly darn down on the outside.

Fit the skirt on, and if, as sometimes happens, the stuff has stretched, pin darts towards the back of the skirt; run up and cut open, damp the seams, and iron flat with a hot iron. Next, cut your webbing for the waistband, and tack on, inside and out. If you have a machine, it will be stronger if you stitch on the band by machine, but it will do quite well if done by hand.

Lastly, tack and iron down any pleats that are in the skirt. It is not necessary to iron the skirt itself, as, if well shaken before being dried, there will be no creases.

Take out any tacking threads you have put in, and the task is finished. You will be surprised to find how fresh your skirt looks, well repaying you for the trouble you have taken. As will be seen, the cost is trivial, and, if followed carefully, these directions will prove very useful to the girl who has only a very modest dress allowance.

No Decrees for Drink

Judge Wakely, at Athlone Quarter Sessions, said he never gave decrees for drink supplied over the counter. There was a man in Sligo who, on finding this out, entered such transactions in his books as "nails." This recollection of his honor evoked laughter, which was renewed when Mr. Kelly observed that there was a case on record of people being supplied with "bacon" in a bottle.

Eddy's Matches

Sixty-two years ago your Grandmother kindled the fire with the "Eight-day" sulphur—the first EDDY product. To-day most of the nine million Canadians favor the new silent "Ses-qui" non-poisonous matches, or one of the many other brands made by EDDY. Ask your dealer.

FOOD FOR RATS

The Rodents Cause an Enormous General Impoverishment

It has recently been estimated by a French statistician that $1,000,000 worth of food a day is wasted on rats in Great Britain alone. In other countries the expense runs equally high, and even higher. Every rat in France costs 2 cents a day for his keep. In England a rat costs from ½ a cent to 5 cents a day to the person upon whose property it preys, and there are 40,000,000 rats in the British isles. In our country there are more rats than men, women and children, and doubtless their appetite is just as expensive here. In India, however, a country least able to bear the burden of supporting these pests, they are four times as numerous as the population, and each rat consumes on an average 3 cents' worth of food a day.

Not long ago an international union was organized in France to rid the world of these unwelcome creatures. The rat commits another sin besides impoverishing the country. He carries disease, and it is probable, because he is dangerous to health rather than because he is a thief, that he finally will be exterminated. There is a race war going on between rats themselves which will help solve the problem. The black rat is being driven out by the gray rat. The black rat is a much greater nuisance than the gray. All along the Atlantic coast he has been driven out, and only the gray rat now is found. Perhaps if the war between the fair race and the dark is kept up they may exterminate each other.

HUGE IMPORTS FROM THE STATES

We Should Keep at Home More of the $415,000,000 That Goes Across the Line Annually

According to a Washington government report the United States during the fiscal year 1912-13 exported $415,000,000 worth of goods to Canada, an increase of $86,000,000 over the previous year, and of nearly $200,000,000 over the year before that. That is to say, in three years our imports from the republic have practically doubled. In that period our purchases of American freight and passenger cars have jumped from $500,000 to $5,222,000; our imports of automobiles from $2,222,000 to $9,200,000; copper pigs, bars, etc., from less than $1,000,000 to over $2,500,000; steel rails, from less than $1,000,000 to nearly $4,000,000; cotton cloths, from $750,000 to $2,500,000; locomotives, from $250,000 to over $1,000,000; structural iron and steel, from less than $3,000,000 to over $9,000,000; metal-working machinery, from $333,000 to $2,222,000; agricultural implements, from $2,222,000 to practically $7,000,000; pipes and fittings, from $1,500,000 to over $4,000,000; leather boots and shoes, from $1,250,000 to over $6,000,000; and illuminating oil, from about $500,000 in 1910 to over $1,000,000 in 1912.

In raw materials and foodstuffs the increase is less pronounced. Raw cotton, of which the exports to Canada amounted to nearly $9,000,000 in 1913, shows practically no increase in value during the three years in question, though a slight increase in quantity. Corn, which amounted to $4,000,000 in 1910, was $4,750,000 in 1913; unmanufactured tobacco, $1,750,000 in 1910, $2,750,000 in 1913; lard, $1,250,000 in 1910, $1,250,000 in 1913; wheat, $1,333,000 in 1910, $750,000 in 1913; coal shows a marked increase from $31,000,000 in 1910 to $53,250,000 in 1913, the value being about equally divided between anthracite and bituminous.

Now that the United States has overtaken its internal demand for manufactures, its industrial concerns are entering more decisively into the competition for foreign markets. But for a protective tariff Canada would have been the first to feel and suffer from that policy. Even as it is, the course of trade shows that the contiguity of the Dominion has to a considerable extent counterbalanced the effect of import duties. No patriotic citizen wants to see the Dominion exchanging raw materials for manufactured products. His desire is to have those raw materials utilized in Canadian industries.

It will be a great thing for Canada when we can produce and manufacture a greater proportion of this $415,000,000 worth of goods here at home. The proved policy of moderate protection is our chief guarantee that we shall be able to do so. It is inducing American capitalists to invest millions of dollars in industries all over Canada.

Our Point of View

Next time the great powers of Europe talk about stopping a war in the Ba,kans, a loud and merry chuckle will be heard around the world.

They are talking of Adam Beck as minister of labor to replace Mr. Crothers. But would it be possible for Adam to desert his Eve, his first love, otherwise the Hydro-Electric system?

The Examiner says the new American tariff bill is another nail in the coffin of high tariffs all over the world. But better still, it is a whole bunch of nails in the coffin of the doomed Liberal-Reciprocity party.

A New York paper says the case of Schmidt, the murderous priest, is doing much to restore confidence in the police. Well, it ought to, for it goes far to establish the fact that some of the worst criminals in New York are not, as many persons believed, members of the force.

In the case of Harry Thaw, a learned New Hampshire judge says: "An insane man can not conspire against the law. You must prove that he is sane before we can honor your requisition papers." But if he is sane, he can not be returned to the Mattewan asylum, and if he is insane he cannot be a conspirator. All things considered, it is a "nut" for the lawyers to crack.

THE DEADLY MEASLES.

Dr. H. W. Hill, head of the Institute of Public Health, London, Ont., said in a public address at the Canadian Club in Edmonton that if persons suffering from cancer were treated with ordinary care during the early stages of the disease, the death rate would be reduced fully [illegible] per cent. He declared also that measles, usually treated as a joke, is one of the most deadly diseases in its results. "Not less than 90 per cent of the population of the North American continent," he added, "have suffered from an attack of measles at one time or other and in most cases some trace is left in the body. The time has come to educate the public and to treat measles as one of the deadliest diseases. We can no longer treat this malady as a joke, as we have in the past, and it is in the interest of public health to begin the movement without delay."

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headaches. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

GIL, THE TOREADOR.

(Published by Request.)

The Queen sat in her balcony,
The lovliest of Spain;
Beneath rode all the chivalry,
And roses fell like rain
To crown the gallant gentlemen
The gonfalon who bore:
A woman's favor fell for one—
Gil, the Toreador.

Beneath the royal canopy,
To see the red bull slain,
They sat, like loyal lovers,
The King and Queen of Spain.
Came marshal, noble knight and squire,
Chulo and picador;
Of all a woman saw but one—
Gil, the Toreador.

The trumpets clanged, the sport was on,
The royal sport of Spain;
Maddened by shouts and thrust of lance
The bull now charged the amain;
Down to their death went chulos then,
And many a matador;
A woman only knew there fell
Gil, the Toreador.

When through the streets of proud Madrid
Swept next the courtly train,
Sat not upon her balcony
The lovliest of Spain.
Long live the King and his fair Queen
Still loyal thousands roar;
None knew what woman died when fell
Gil, the Toreador.

FOUR TO SPEAK IN ONE NIGHT

This is an Answer to Liberals Who Denied it Would Happen

Montreal, Oct., 7.—To-day Conservative papers are particularly emphasizing a meeting to be held in Ormstown on Thursday, in the interest of James Morris, the Government candidate in Chateauguay, at which Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture; Hon. Bruno Nantel, Minister of Inland Revenue; Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General and Hon. Louis Coderre, Secretary of State are to speak.

One newspaper claims that the presence of four ministers of the crown at Ormstown on Thursday evening, is a direct answer to the claim of the opposition speakers both at St. John's and in the county of Chateauguay that the Borden Government are afraid to send any of its members into the constituency.

The Liberals will attempt to head off the influence of the Federal ministers in the constituency with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who speaks to-morrow afternoon at Ormstown, supported by Hon. [illegible] Graham, Hon. Charles Marcil and Hon. Sydney Fisher.

Sir Wilfrid speaks at St. Martine on Thursday afternoon.

IN LONG PAST DAYS OF BODY-SNATCHERS

Relics in Scotland Showing How the Dead Was Protected From the Resurrectionists

In the days of the Resurrectionists in Scotland various means were devised to prevent the nefarious practice of body-snatching. Recumbent stones of huge dimensions were frequently placed over tombs in lonely churchyards, while burying-places were often made unapproachable by the erection of lofty, massive railings. The services of the local blacksmith were also requisitioned to fasten strong bars of iron over the coffins, to prevent the possibility of the body being uplifted from its resting-place. In many churchyards watch-towers were erected, at the door of which, after an interment, careful watch and ward was kept, and not a few tales were told of mysterious beings being surprised in the midst of their ghostly depredations.

In a few places Mort Safes or Dead-Houses were constructed, in which the dead bodies were allowed to remain for several weeks, or until such length of time as they were no longer serviceable for dissecting purposes. An interesting specimen of Mort Safe is to be seen in the quaint Kirkyaird at the ruined Church of Cowie, near Stonehaven—a favorite haunt of the Resurrectionists from Aberdeen. The corpses were conveyed in dogcarts to the Granite City, and, with a view to escape detection, the lifeless figures were clad once more in the garb of th living and placed on the conveyance in a sitting posture.

On one occasion it is related that a party of Resurrectionists stopped at a wayside inn for refreshments, when all partook of the same at the door of the inn. The innkeeper, noticing the silent figure left alone in the conveyance, remarked: "Will yer freend no' tak' a dram?" Without saying a word, the party instantly mounted and drove off, leaving mine host, who was not without suspicions, to draw his own conclusions as to the identity of his visitors.

The Mort Safe or Dead-House in the Stonehaven district is of a particularly rare type. It is a subterraneum chamber 18 feet by 13½ feet and about 8 feet high in the centre of the arch. It is constructed of stout masonry, and is a splendid piece of work, the arch giving evidence of sound craftsmanship. In this apartment, guarded by two massive iron doors fitted with enormous bolts and bars, the coffined dead were kept for six weeks and a day before interment in their last resting-place. There are no records of this place having ever been rifled. Seventy years have elapsed since the last body was deposited there.

BEGINNING OF HATS

BEGINNING OF HATS

Charles II. is Said to Have Originated the Custom

Hats did not become a well established custom until some 500 years ago. In the year 1449, when Charles II. entered Rouen after its recapture by the French from the English, the people there had never before set eyes on a hat. Their amazement, therefore, can be pictured as they gazed upon their king riding past them in pomp and on his head a gorgeous hat lined with varicolored silk and gayly bedecked with huge plumes. Of course every one followed his example. Hats began to make their appearance in shop windows and women and men alike labored over the constructing of elaborate headpieces, each one attempting to surpass his neighbor if possible. But they were expensive and it was a long time before they could be worn except by the prosperous classes. In the course of time, however, they became a more commonplace thing and people of all classes were able to afford them.

WHAT LIVINGSTONE DID FOR AFRICA

His Call to the Civilized World Not Answered Until After His Death

Nyasaland is the Cinderella of British Protectorates, yet no other is so full of romantic charm and beauty, says Rev. Donald Fraser. When Livingstone first found her and fell in love with her he was recalled by the Government before he had time to find his way to the northern reaches of the Lake, because Lord Russell felt that his expedition was costing more than was expected. He had even to bear the cost of his little steamer out of the profits of his own book. The land was saved from anarchy, and the Arab slaving empire that was forming was broken by the Scots pioneers, who had to buy their own cannon and engage their own native soldiers. The Protectorate was forced upon the Empire by the clamor of Scots missionaries and traders, and afterwards it was saved from bankruptcy and dissolution, not by subsidies from Britain but by the generosity and foresight of Cecil Rhodes.

Livingstone and the Lake

It was in 1859 that Livingstone discovered Lake Nyasa. His first journey up and down the Zambesi had revealed the wealth of vegetation and the great population that lay unsuspected by Europe within interior Africa. But what he saw on the Shiré Highlands and along the Lake shore amazed him. Here was a teeming population and a land that fired his imagination with possibilities of colonization and of plantations of cotton, sugar, and other products that would enrich the barbarous people, and by creating legitimate commerce annihilate the slave trade. He was prepared to lay out $10,000 or $15,000 of his own money to assist the emigration of deserving poor from Scotland. But his letters home proposing a scheme which would have been as disastrous as the Darien expedition, happily received a cold response.

Meanwhile Livingstone himself was following his favorite method of travel, revisiting the lands which he had first traversed, and pushing quietly a little further on as the people gained confidence in him. Then his eyes were opened to the awful anarchy of these ungoverned lands. War had swept over the country that he had first seen with its smiling villages, and had turned it into a blackened desert. Villages were burning. The paths were strewn with the victims of slave raids. The paddle wheels of his steamer had to be cleared in the morning of corpses that had floated down the river, and had not been eaten by the surfeited crocodiles. For three days he and his companions were lost in the woods of a deserted country, unable to find food that they could eat. Frequently he was left without guides, traversing broken land whose gullies presented almost impassable obstacles. And before his journeys were over his optimism had been greatly modified by the sense of the unsettledness of the land.

His Plans

In his latter days when he mused over the civilization of these lands, which he never ceased to love, his plans were to open the country by sending out industrial missionaries, who with their wives would quietly live and work until they had opened the way for others to follow. The slave trade was then at the height of its activity. Nineteen thousand slaves from Nyasaland were annually sold at Zanzibar, and Livingstone reckoned nine times as many had perished by war and famine and the hardships of the way before these arrived at the coast. He recommended the placing of a gunboat on the Lake to stop the traffic at its source, and urged the establishment of commerce as the best demonstration of the utter unprofitableness of the traffic in human beings. But he did not live to see any of his plans carried into action. When he died at Bangweolo his spirit was darkened with an awful sense of the horror of the slave trade and of inter-tribal war, while Europe was apathetic, and made no answer to his appeals. Yet his death was the call to the civilized world to take up the service for which he died.

MANY CHANGES IN WORDS

Meanings For Many Have Altered in Passage of Years

In Ben Johnson's time mutton, which we use exclusively to-day to designate the flesh of sheep prepared fo food, was commonly used as a synonym for sheep.

The word wife, now used almost universally to designate "spouse"—that is, in the feminine sense, a wedded woman—was formerly and is still, but only in compound words and a few dialects, as that of central Yorkshire, merely a synonym for "woman."

But some words which are now exclusively in the feminine gender were not formerly so restricted in their application. For example, the word girl at one time designated an infant of either sex.

Militia, used at one time to designate the entire military forces of a nation, lost its original significance, perhaps, during the Civil War in England, when the citizen soldiers of the Commonwealth replaced the trained bands.

Nephew and niece, restricted in their applications to-day to the children of a brother or sister, formerly designated the children of sons and daughters, that is, grand-children. Another restriction characteristic of more modern times is that of the use of the word buxom, by which we mean "comely," "well-developed," or "plump," meant, formerly, "yielding" or "tractable." Ignorance of the true meaning of the word led to this mutation, and at one time the people spoke of buxom, rather than of good, health. Shrewd, from denoting one who had a malignant temper took unto itself the meanings "accursed," "vicious," and "dangerous," but soon cast them off for "characterized by keen insight; discerning; sagacious; astute."

In "Pen Pictures of Great Victorians," Mr. Stephen Coleridge begins with a story of Shelley, with whom both his grandfathers were at Eton. One of them once found the poet, who had been out duck-spearing, but had somehow speared his own leg, lying helpless by the river. Mr. Coleridge's maternal grandfather, who was more sympathetic with the eccentric genius than most of his school-fellows, carried the boy on his back all the way to the college. Mr. Coleridge's own early experience of school was very unhappy, and implanted in him a detestation of cruelty, which and always remained a powerful impulse in his nature. "I went," he says, "to a horrible school at Honiton, conducted by a monster of cruelty." He once saw a boy's ear cut in two by a blow from a cane, and he himself was lamed for a fortnight through being struck behind the knee. Some years later a movement was started to present a testimonial to the "monster," and Mr. Coleridge was asked for a subscription. "It gave me," he said, "a peculiar pleasure to reply that I could only contribute on the specific condition that the testimonial should take the form of a rope to hang himself." After leaving Cambridge Mr. Coleridge and a cousin started a trading venture with Peru. Unfortunately war broke out between that country and Chili, and ruined the enterprise. Twenty upright grand pianos which the partners had consigned to Lima were dragged into the streets of that city to form barricades. The two young traders abandoned commerce.

A SILENT CLUB

Features of the National Deaf Club of London

London boasts possession of the most silent club in the world. It is called the National Deaf club, and the moving spirit and president is A. J. Wilson, who, despite the handicap of being deaf and dumb, conducts a most successful business in the city. Of course, the National Deaf club is a unique institution. There are no talkative waiters, no electric bells, no large print notices calling upon members to be silent in this or that room. Nearly two hundred members use the premises, in which they can dine and wine or play cards and billiards whenever they like. Women are admitted, and at present form more than a third of the roll. Bells being unnecessary, signs are resorted to. Thus, when some one presses the bell of the hall door, a red light appears over the doorway and brings the attendant at once. A similar arrangement notifies the waiter when his services are required.

Those fortunate persons who can speak and hear and who have been privileged to watch a game of billiards declare that it is more than a relief to see a contest where neither party voices his grievances as he goes along. There are no criticisms of the table, the balls or the cue. Everything is peaceful and quiet. There are some remarkable men belonging to the National Deaf club. One, for example, is head of an important railway firm in Smyrna and has under his control hundreds of men of all nationalities. Another member has traveled over the world a record number of times, always unaccompanied and although he has been in many individual lands, has always been able to look after himself. Then there are the members who earn their own living in various professions. One actually teaches music; another is a [illegible]. WHY DO WE EAT AND DRINK?

(second part; Continuation of Dr. H. Lindlahr's special series on dietetics)—Some one may say: "If the life force is independent of the physical body and of food and drink, why do we have to eat and drink to keep alive?"

The answer to this is: Food and organism in the right condition, so that vital force can manifest and operate through it to the best advantage. To this end food is needed to build up and to repair the tissues of the body. It also serves to a certain extent as fuel material, which is transmuted into animal heat and vital energy.

It is true that during the processes of digestion, which involve the breaking down of the food materials, a certain amount of animal heat and vital energy is liberated; but, as we pointed out in the foregoing paragraphs, this does not account for all the animal heat and vital energy expended.

Furthermore, just as coal has to come in touch with fire before it can be transmuted into heat, so the life force is needed to "burn up" the fuel materials. When "life" has departed, even large amounts of sugars, fats, proteins, tonics and stimulants are not able to produce one spark of vital energy in the body.

On the contrary, digestion, assimilation and elimination of food and drink require the expenditure of considerable amount of vital energy. Therefore all food taken in excess of the actual needs of the body wastes vital force instead of giving it.

If these facts were more generally known and appreciated, people would not habitually overeat, under the mistaken idea that their "strength" increases in proportion to the amount of food they consume. They would not be so much afraid of fasting. They would understand better the necessity of fasting in acute diseases and "healing crises," and avail themselves more frequently of this most effective means of purification. They would no longer believe themselves in danger of dying if they were to miss a few meals.

The principal function of food and drink are:

1.—To furnish the necessary amount of water in order to hold in solution the substances of the body and to make possible the circulation of the vital fluids and the elimination of waste and morbid matter.

2.—To furnish materials for the building and repair of the cells and tissues of the body.

3.—To provide fuel materials.

4.—To supply the positive mineral salts which are important as building materials, neutralizers, and eliminators of waste and morbid matter and which are essential to the production and distribution (conductors) of the electro-magnetic energies in the system.

5.—To furnish the necessary bulk and "scouring materials" in the form of cellulose and wood fibre.

We shall now consider separately these various functions of food materials in the body.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5030 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor:—I have read your lectures for some time and have received benefit. The lecture on buttermilk for rheumatism I lent to some one who did not return it. When we use a buttermilk diet can we eat any kind of fruit, or is it best not to eat any kind of food? What is your opinion of having boys and girls circumcised? Thanking you in advance for any advice you will send me, I am—Mrs. H. W.

Life depends very much upon the individual nature of the case, whether fruits, alone, or other foods should be used in connection with the buttermilk. In cases of obesity, buttermilk and zwieback alone are all that is needed in order to not only sustain life, but good effects in cases where it is indicated are always secured, if it is used in sufficient quantities and systematically. As a rule the best results are not obtained if all kinds of food are used in connection with it. In many cases of rheumatism, for instance, some fruits can be taken with buttermilk treatment to advantage, but the medicinal value of buttermilk would be reduced if any other kind of food is allowed. I have frequently given my opinion regarding circumcision, and I am a strong believer in having it done, especially in cases where it is indicated. Many nervous ailments, both physical and mental, have been avoided by such simple means, and it is a fact which cannot be disputed that those who have had it done will not be as easily subject to certain disorders, which otherwise would be more likely to [illegible].

FACING A CRISIS

How Bank Was Saved in Face of Frantic Mob of Depositors.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

Randal Webster, the young and handsome president of the Bank of Greenville, opened the door of his private office. He glanced into the counting room, and beyond it at the jostling crowd in the street outside. Then with a groan he sank into a chair, the picture of despairing misery.

"It has come," he told himself in a harsh, rasping whisper—"the worst, the end!"

There came a tap at the door. The young financier sprang to his feet. A brief, vague hope gave him momentary energy. Then his soul seemed to die within him, as his cashier entered the room with a face blanched and fear-stricken as his own.

"Any word?" projected Webster, hoarsely.

"None. Mr. Webster, we must face the crisis, the worst of rumors as to the solvency of the institution have got abroad. A mob of depositors from the mills is in front of the bank. They are wrought up and dangerous. They threaten to smash every window and blow up the bank with dynamite, if their money is not paid them promptly at ten o'clock."

"Impossible!" gasped Webster.

"No one knows that better than myself," responded the cashier in a hollow tone. "There is no promise whatever that your messenger to the city will arrive before night. Then it is too late. The train is just in, and neither man nor money has appeared."

"How much is there in the bank in ready cash?"

"Less than $10,000."

"Pay it out to the last dollar as slowly as you can. If we can tide over for a few hours the expected help may come."

"And if it does not—and when the money gives out?" questioned the cashier, hoarsely.

"Put up a sign and close the bank."

Left to himself, the young banker reviewed the situation. Energetic, impetuous, ambitious, he had gone beyond his depth in an investment sure to turn out profitable in the end. A temporary complication, however, had tied it up. He could not realize in ready cash under a week. A heavy draft came upon the surplus funds, depleting the bank reserve to a dangerously low figure. Somehow a public rumor of all this got out. The report was current that the bank was going to fail. Result: The frantic, desperate mob of frightened depositors now clamoring at the great locked doors.

Webster had sent a trusted employe of the bank to a rich relative in the city. He carried an urgent appeal for succor. The messenger had not reported.

A graver shade of feeling covered the features of the young financier as he thought of the one dearest to him in all the world—Ethel Morris. They were to have been wedded in a month, but if the bank broke—then Webster well knew her proud, exclusive family would scarcely favor a discredited bankrupt. It was a forlorn fight for business preservation and love.

Webster hurried into the counting room as a great outcry arose. He hoped it was his messenger arrived; he feared it was new riot. It lacked just five minutes of ten. A remarkable scene greeted his sight.

A whiskered, farmer-looking man was talking to the excited crowd. He was waving a great bundle of bank notes in one hand. There was a cheer. In his other hand the stranger carried an old battered satchel. With it he now pounded on the door.

"Let me in. I must get in!" the astonished Webster heard him shout out, and then to the people: "Don't get scared. Randal Webster is an honest man, and the Bank of Greenville is solid as a rock!"

Something in the determined manner of the visitor caused the watchman to open the door for him. The stranger helped him reclose it against the eager, crushing crowd.

"Where is Mr. Webster?" he demanded. "Ah, there he is," and he approached the counter and nodded to the wondering banker. "Remember me, Mr. Webster?"

"Why, I can't say that I do," was the hesitating reply.

"Never mind. I've changed. Had to, wanted to," rattled on the stranger. "See here," and he began to bring from his pockets bundle after bundle of bank notes. "There's $20,000. Use it."

"But, my dear sir—" began the bewildered cashier.

"Use it, I said, didn't I?" interrupted the stranger, unceremoniously.

"But we have no right; the condition the bank is in—to receive deposits," stammered the cashier.

"Call it a loan, then," said the stranger. "I know all about your worry here. It won't last. Keep the crowd goodnatured. Pay them off smiling. I'll guarantee the run will soon stop."

Then he lifted the satchel and opened, the startled cashier, used as he was to the sight of money, uttered a great cry. The man piled up bundle after bundle of crisp green bank notes.

"Shove them up against the glass where they will show," ordered the stranger. "Only, don't pay out any of this heap. You won't need to. That pile, the real cash paid out right along will soon tame that unruly mob."

"Ten o'clock," announced the dumbfounded cashier. "Open up."

The stranger drew to one side, as if enjoying the scene. The astounded Webster was soon too busy to notice him. The eager crowd filed in; everybody was paid promptly. The sight of the great bundles of bills began to have an effect. Some, shamed, redeposited their money. Others, catching the infection of restored confidence, did not ask for their money at all. Within an hour the news went all over town that the bank was safe.

With a great sigh of relief Randal Webster beckoned the stranger into his private room.

"Now, then," he said, "what does this all mean?"

The stranger laughed. Then he seized the banker's hand in a friendly grip.

"You don't know me, eh?" he said. "Well, I'm bringing you back some of the bread you cast upon the waters five years ago."

"I don't understand you," murmured the puzzled banker.

"You was a lawyer then, and you defended in the city a member of a gang of counterfeiters. Now do you remember?"

"Why, yes," answered Webster, slowly.

"My name was Dallas—not now; I've changed it. You got me free, you gave me a great lecture. It was my life chance, and I improved it. I went to my folks fifty miles from here. A relative left me a fortune. I have kept track of you. I heard of your trouble."

"And you have saved the bank!" cried the grateful Webster.

"The gang believed a large amount of their counterfeits destroyed. I saved the satchel containing them," went on the man. "I buried it. That show money I took from the satchel is counterfeit. The real money I drew from my bank early today to loan to you. We will burn the counterfeits, now they have served their purpose."

An hour later the bank messenger came rushing up in an automobile, with plenty of money to safely tide the bank over.

Webster paid back his grateful friend in need. He did not tell even Ethel the story. Down deep in his heart, however, he fervently cherished the gratitude of the reformed criminal who had saved the bank at a critical juncture.

How the Canadian Policy of Moderate Protection Brings Industries

If the American manufacturer establishes a branch, let us say in France or Germany, he may do so because he has to meet the peculiar tastes and demands of a people who want the article made their way or at least in a different way from what appeals to the tastes and meets the conditions of the American customer. He may also be influenced by the inconvenience in distributing to a country on the other side of the world from his factory.

But he is not compelled to establish a branch factory in Canada by the above reasons, either of which might be effective in the case of operating upon another continent. He has an identical constituency in Canada and the United States. What he comes to Canada he does not manufacture differently to meet any peculiar taste or demand. So far as pleasing his trade is concerned he has no difficulty in selling in Canada what he manufactures in the United States.

Neither have we observed any oceans three thousand miles wide between the United States manufacturer and the Canadian consumer. The manufacturer can distribute to Canadian customers just as conveniently from Boston or Minneapolis as he can from Halifax or Winnipeg.

It is moderate protection which preserves the Canadian home market. The American manufacturers say that they build factories here because they cannot manufacture in the United States, pay the duty and compete in the Canadian market with the Canadian manufacturer. They probably know what they are talking about.

TRANSIT TO THE MOON

A Scientist Thinks It May Yet Become Practicable

Garrett P. Serviss, who has written a number of works on popular astronomy, believes that the problem of aerial navigation is so far solved that we may now indulge ourselves in speculations about possible voyages beyond the atmosphere of this globe.

"I have begun to think that now that we have achieved the navigation of the air [illegible] providing [illegible] sufficient food and [illegible] the only difficulties which remain to be overcome before man fly to the moon. To be sure a new motor [illegible] must be obtained, but electrical propulsion hints at what it may be.

"There are only two forces known which [illegible] gravity—namely, pressure [illegible] and electricity. So I say that the first flying to the moon will be done on the principle of the pithball which flies away from the conductor of an electric machine.

"When this has been accomplished it only remains to do what modern chemistry certainly can do—that is, to fill tanks with enough compressed air and compressed food for so long a journey. The idea is really not so ridiculous as it may appear."

A BULL-ROARER

Roaring During the Performance of Sacred Ceremonies

Describing the initiation ceremonies of an Australian, a writer in "Customs of the World" says the boys now see for the first time in their lives a bull-roarer. This is a piece of wood of a pointed oval shape, to one end of which is attached a string. When the instrument is swung round it produces a humming noise. No women or children are ever allowed to see a bull-roarer; they hear the noise made by it, and are told that this is the voice of a supernatural being. The bull-roarer is swung during the performance of sacred ceremonies, and is to be heard continually while the Bora is in progress. When it is shown to the boys and explained to them, they are warned never to mention it to a woman, nor ever to let her see one. If a woman should inadvertently see one of these sacred objects she would be killed.

Finger-print Identification

It is proposed to extend the advantages of the Bertillon system of identification to the whole population of Paris. In other words, it is suggested that in the case of accidents, deaths without trace of identification, etc., as in criminal investigations, the work of the police in identifying the individual would be greatly facilitated if everyone were in possession of an anthropometrical record of himself.

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself, and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of them have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar secretions so effectually as SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES. This preparation is successfully applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbohydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects, whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly request anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We can also send testimonials from some of the most prominent people in pretty any town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

RING OF PROMISE

How Girl Kept Secret an Engagement That Was Not an Engagement.

By HORATIO DENTON GERHARDT

"What kind of a ring can I buy for five dollars?"

"Not a very good one," he returned, then as her pretty brown eyes filled he added, "but you might give me that much as a deposit, and pay the rest later."

"I didn't know you ever sold goods that way," Daisy said softly, and for the first time Bart, smarting from a hurt given him by a heartless city girl who had flirted with him during the past couple of months, noticed how lovely the girlish face was.

"I never have," he said smiling, "but it is never too late to change my methods. Don't tell anyone about it will you?"

"Oh no, no," she cried in alarm, "and you won't tell that I have bought it?" and the tears started in her sweet eyes.

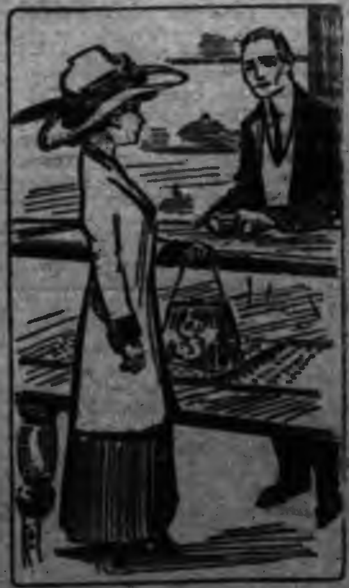
"Why, surely not," he returned, wondering at her emotion, and briskly turning matters into a thoroughly business channel, he pulled out a tray of rings, and asked:

"How high do you want to go?"

The girl's eyes lingered upon a dainty little pearl cluster ring, and Bart finally let her have it at cost, twelve dollars, telling her to pay him the other seven as she saw fit. He laughed at himself a little scornfully the rest of the day when the transaction recurred to him, but by the next forgot it, for his heart was still heavy with the sorrow the city girl had made for him.

Daisy came in a week later with a dollar, and he was somewhat surprised to see the ring on her finger, for he had thought she was buying it for someone else. Again he was impressed with the beauty of the young face, and took pleasure in exchanging a few words with the shy little thing who scarcely numbered eighteen summers.

While the two lived near each other, they moved in different circles, Bart being in one of the older sets, so he did not meet her socially until the charity entertainment at Christmas in which all the young people of the town participated. There was a program made up of local talent, and afterwards a dancing party. Bart who was very popular, danced with the various belles of the place, but began to notice that Daisy did not seem to be asked, and so he inquired of his partner why so pretty a girl as she seemed to be neglected.



"How High Do You Want to Go?"

"Oh, I don't know. She just doesn't seem to take, I suppose, and the [illegible] people think they [illegible] just who she is going with before they are seen with her."

"What talk?" Bart gasped, still guiding his partner into a recess the music ended, so she could tinue her conversation.

"Why, she has a ring that she was given her by someone who a great deal for her, and who her better than anyone else. won't tell who that someone is, people are talking," and the threw up her head.

Bart looked serious, but said ing, and excusing himself started cross the floor, intending to ask Daisy to dance with him. He saw of the older girls go up to the figure and evidently say something her that was not kind in its nature for Daisy sprang to her feet, her blazing. Then her head drooped she seemed to wilt as she resumed her seat dejectedly.

In a moment the young man was her side, asking gently:

"What is it, Daisy?"

The girl turned, her sweet face changing from white to crimson and then paling again, but she nothing.

He turned to the tormentors. haps you will tell me the trouble."

"A mysterious person has her a ring, and she won't tell is," said the elder of the young on. "We're just curious, that's all."

"Suppose she doesn't tell her crets," Bart said coldly, "what of We all have affairs that we do tell to the public."

"She can have all she wants but she must keep away from rest of us if she wears things ashamed to talk about," said the or young woman, and Bart wondered to himself that a human countenance could be so disagreeable. He looked at the little shrinking figure, knew that it was a crisis in the life. Innocent of any wrong, would be branded by those two, ous of her beauty, in a way might spoil her whole future. this realization came the knowledge that into his own wounded heart gentle, clinging child-woman crept, and he felt a fierce determination to protect her, even though afterwards she disclaim his statement. Calmly, he took Daisy's little hand on which appeared the offending ring, and drawing it through his arm coldly:

"My dear, while I thank you keeping our engagement a secret, I think you have gone a little far. As you have respected wishes not to have it known after the first of the year, I'll the mystery of this ring, and tell the ladies, and they can spread the all over town, that you obtained ring from me," and with these he swept the astounded girl from room.

"Get on your wraps," he told "and I will take you home," and waited in the hall, fully conscious the buzzing tongues inside news spread like wildfire.

Daisy kept him waiting but a ute, and he felt a thrill of joy as saw the light in her brown eyes, idly raised to his, but he said nothing until they were well clear of hall, and then asked gently:

"What made you buy the ring, Daisy, dear?"

Choked with sobs, the girl fessed that she had envied the other girls their admirers, and was tired being teased because she had of her own.

"The girls say I'm too quiet for boys to like me, and I thought had a pretty ring they would someone out of town cared for me."

"You poor little thing," he cried, realizing that the very reserve shyness that had repelled others made him grow to love her. "I dear, darling," he whispered, bending his head over hers, and pressing hand close to his side, "if you willing to make what I said strictly true?"

Daisy raised her eyes to his. needed no further words to tell that she was truly loved, and with soft cry of joy she replied with swift glance of her pretty brown eyes. Everyone was in the hall, so Bart not delay, but gathered her into arms and covered her soft lips with his own.

Daisy now has a half a dozen valuable rings, but prizes that pearl cluster more than any, and and Bart already have measured other one on her little finger, a broad band, that he is to put on day she is eighteen, which will be her bridal day.

While on a visit to two of his sisters who were attending college at Montreal, Senor Ignacio Muriel, a wealthy young Mexican land owner and farmer, told of incidents connected with the daily life of the country of revolutions. "If a small army comes along," he said, "we know better than to offer resistance. Very politely we offer grain or bullocks, perhaps, and with a flourish the rebel captain will write a note promising to pay in the name of his leader, but the rancher very well knows these will never be redeemed." Senor Muriel speaks good English but uses shoulder, chin, hands and body to give his words better expression.

Hunting by Aeroplane

Hunting game from an aeroplane will likely be one of the recognized field sports. In France an aeronaut was invited to take part in such an event, and while flying about the field he was struck in the eye by a bullet from one of the guns and painfully though not seriously, wounded. He managed to bring the machine safely to the ground, and then had his wound dressed by some surgeons who happened to be among the spectators.

THE LONG SLEEVE

Some Hints to Amateurs to Secure a Good Fit

The long sleeve is being built into all the new dresses. And strangely enough the sleeve is always the knotty problem in the amateur's work. As every woman knows, a sleeve can make or mar an entire dress. Long sleeves have been out of fashion so long that the younger dressmaker may have forgotten how to make them. Probably the sleeve will be made from a pattern. At the outset then it is wise to remember the necessity of following the pattern very closely and observing the directions minutely. Notches must match if any pattern is to prove a success.

After accurately cutting the sleeves, basting is of the utmost importance. Firm basting may be more trouble to take out, but it ensures better fitting. Take short stitches always. Gather the fulness where the marks indicate, and when both seams are basted lay the sleeve flat on the table. If cut and basted correctly, the inner seam will turn to the under part of the sleeve from elbow to wrist, while the seam from shoulder to elbow will be exactly on the edge. Now, if this line runs the entire length of the sleeve, the seam will look crooked when worn. Some persons don't know of this and think the seam should be seen the whole length when the sleeve is laid flat upon the table.

In stitching the seams on the machine, do not stitch through the basting threads as it will make the latter difficult to draw out. Stitch just inside or just outside. To finish neatly at the wrist, take a strip of crinoline and slip into the sleeve. Baste it in position, leaving a margin of sleeve to turn over the crinoline. Do this while the sleeve is on the outside. Now turn inside out and face with a bias strip of the material or silk. The result will be a smooth fit. If the sleeve had been turned to put in the stiffening the sleeve will probably draw.

Sewing in the sleeve is important. To sew it in correctly draw on the arm, getting the elbow at the right point. Pin the top of the sleeve to the shoulder. The pattern usually indicates the location of the inner seam. But the sleeve does not always set right when this is followed. It should then be moved either above or below the notch on the pattern until the fit is correct.

Amateurs often cut the armhole out too much. Don't be in a hurry to do this. The armhole should be neither tight nor loose, but remember that when the sleeve is sewn in it will measure an inch or more than at first.

GRINDSTONE ON MACHINE

With Aid of Which Any Woman Can Sharpen a Pair of Scissors

Among the new things which have been recently brought out to lighten the burdens of women is a little device by which any ordinary job of cutlery sharpening may be done on the sewing machine. The device consists of a small emery wheel of the right composition for sharpening knives, scissors and similar household utensils, and this is mounted with a pulley wheel on a small metal table. This is placed on the top of the sewing machine table and slid along until the pulley wheel is in contact with the belt as it passes through the table top. There is a small shelf in the proximity of the wheel which is set at just the right angle for scissors sharpening and with this any woman is enabled to sharpen a pair of scissors, which, under ordinary circumstances, this is a rather difficult task. It is also possible to sharpen any other small piece of cutlery.

ROYAL MUSIC LOVERS

Queen Alexandra Loves the Opera and Queen Mary Sings

Queen Mary has a sweet singing voice, and loves tender and sentimental ballads, but is seldom heard beyond her own circle. Queen Alexandra loves music, is (when not in mourning) a constant opera-goer, and often plays the piano in her own boudoir. Princess Christian sings well, and in old days has sung at charity concerts in Windsor.

Princess Henry of Battenberg composes music, is a brilliant pianist, and a clever accompanist. Prince Leopold of Battenberg plays the violin, and Prince Alexander sings comic songs with much effect. Count Gleichen has a fine singing voice, and his sister, Lady Valda Machell, is a finished musician.

Princess Pless and the Duchess of Westminster have good voices, and the Duchess of Marlborough sings coon songs with verve and success.

Stomach Always Balked, Had Dominant Indigestion

Smell of Cooking Made Him Sick—Bilious Two Days a Week.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Chapman's experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Chapman, of Rowbridge, P.Q. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a nauseous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were relieved of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The Canadian Northern Railway have just placed with the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, an order for the complete electrification of its tunnel under Mount Royal and of its terminals on Dorchester street, in Montreal. The contract amounts to about $500,000.

Have Records.

Chief Thompson is working in conjunction with Chief Chilton of Lindsay, in connection with the Lindsay robberies. He has to-day forwarded to that town the records of Killingbeck and Landry. Killingbeck has been convicted six times previously, mostly for theft, while Landry has a record not quite so black.

Barnardo Girls.

A party of 115 girls arrived from England yesterday morning at the Margaret Cox home for girls. They were the feminine section of Barnardo Home wards who arrived on Monday at Quebec under the care of Mr. Alf. B. Owen. The girls reached Peterborough yesterday via the G.T.R. and the train carried them almost to the Margaret Cox Home adjacent to the Lakefield line.

ARE YOU GOING WEST THIS FALL.

If so, take advantage of the remarkably low one-way second-class Colonist Rates to Vancouver, Victoria, Nelson, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, etc., in effect daily until October 10; or if Western Canada is your destination, the low-rate Homeseekers' Excursions, in effect each Tuesday until October 28. The route is one of the most scenic in the world. Bear in mind that the Canadian Pacific Railway offers the finest possible equipment and fastest train service. It is the only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers, also dining-cars, to Winnipeg and Vancouver. By travelling C.P.R. you avoid the necessity of changing depots. All equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R., affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C.P.R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Normal School.

The students of the Normal school, Collegiate Institute and Business College, were entertained last evening by the Epworth League of the George street church, in the Sunday school rooms of the church. A talented musical program was presented by the musical students present, and a most enjoyable social evening was spent. The attendance was about three hundred.

Paving George Street

A start has at last been made to pave the main thoroughfare of our city. Yesterday, the top surface was torn up and rolled. It is expected that the new street railway rails will be laid before the week is out, and the paving will then go right ahead. Peterborough will look something more like a city when the streets are paved and the Hydro installed. It is expected that the Hydro will be in commission by November 1st.

Buried Here.

The mystery as to the identification of the man who was killed in the auto accident near Lakefield, has at last been cleared away. Messrs. Leonard J. Singleton, of Cobalt, and Richmond Robinson, of St. Catharines, are in the city arranging for the interment of the remains, which arrived in the city last evening from Kingston. The father of Vincent Esk, in London, England, cabled Mr. Robinson yesterday requesting him to claim the body and arrange for obsequies. Interment will take place in St. Peter's cemetery this morning.

Drop in Charcoal.

It is evident that there is a drop in the price of charcoal. Yesterday afternoon a waggon of coal on the top of which were about 60 bags of charcoal, was being taken round the back of the Oriental Hotel. By some mishap, probably the straight edge curb, which the cart had to climb, caused a swaying motion and about 40 bags of charcoal swayed into the roadway. The bags burst and it took nearly twenty minutes to gather up the fragments, and there then remained 12 baskets full.

Mr. Palmer's Potato.

Mr. John Palmer of Omemee, brother of Mr. Thos. Palmer of Queen street, city, has on exhibition at the National Hotel a potato raised on the former's property, that is a corker. It measures 8 x 4½ inches and weighs 22 ounces. A peculiar feature about the potato is that the "eyes" at its north end form a perfect resemblance to a human face, possibly and chiefly resembling the face of the man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo.

Auto Accident.

The Lindsay Post publishes the following: An automobile accident, which might have been attended with fatal results, occurred on Sunday near Cesco, a little hamlet near Garden Hill and on the C. N. Railway. Two automobiles, said to have belonged to Peterborough parties, were [illegible] for Bowmanville Sunday morning. One of the cars crossed a bridge over a creek near [illegible] safely, but the other [illegible] four occupants, two ladies and two gentlemen, mounted the railing of the bridge and took a plunge into the stream. "CASCARETS" RELIEVE SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Get a 10-cent box now.

That awful soreness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing too.

POLICE COURT NEWS

The information against Mr. Isaac Eastwood, for erecting a building within the fire limits of the city, the walls not being of the required thickness, was withdrawn by Mr. Hayes, building inspector. Magistrate Dumble was willing not to have the charge further pressed as this was a case of exceptional circumstances. Any further violations of the by-law would not be allowed under any conditions.

Mrs. A. [illegible] Campbell was fined [illegible] and costs, amounting in all to [illegible] for a breach of the automobile act.

Thomas Frost and Frank Nelson, two local young men, were each assessed $5.75 for being drunk and disorderly.

Two young boys were charged with trespass on the C.P.R. Arrangement between counsels invited an enlargement until Saturday.

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap Dries the Scalp, Causing Dandruff, Then Hair Falls Out—Try This Next Time.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Ladies! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

HOME RULE PROBLEM ONLY CONCERNS HALF OF ULSTER

So Says Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel in His Speech at Canadian Club

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—In his address to the Canadian Club, Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel, Postmaster-General in the Asquith Cabinet, said that the first thing to know about the Ulster problem was that it was not an Ulster problem; it was a problem relating to one half of Ulster. The problem in effect lay in the north-east of Ulster, where there was a large prosperous homogeneous population violently opposed to Home Rule, and sending seventeen members to the Imperial Parliament. There would be no problem of the kind if all Ireland were Protestant. It was the religious difficulty essentially which has made the political difficulty.

Unionist Opposition.

The Unionist leaders in Great Britain had declared that they would not oppose Home Rule if a general election resulted in a ajority in its favor, but Sir Edward Carson and his colleagues said that they would never consent to Home Rule, whatever the result of a general election.

The Imperial Government would eagerly welcome a settlement by consent. Mr. Asquith had often said so, and Mr. Redmond had signified he would only consent to a settleable agreement, but the Ulster Unionment which involved the abandonment of the Government policy.

Outlook is Dark.

Unhappily the prospects of a settlement by consent did not as things were now, seem favorable. Yet for thirty years Ireland, apart from the Ulster Unionists, had unwaveringly declared for Home Rule, and apart from the Irish members there was a majority in the Imperial Parliament of sixty for Home Rule.

Ready to Fight.

Saskatoon, Oct. 8.—C. W. Armstrong the Worshipful Master of the Duke of Cumberland Lodge, stated that Orangemen in the Dominion owed it to Ireland to do all in their power to resist the Home Rule Bill in the present form. He concluded by stating that many Orangemen would leave their homes and fight for Ulster should civil war result, and that the only expenses the Ulster forces will be put to on their account will be to supply ammunition.

Difficult to Explain

Hon. Sydney Fisher during the last campaign promised that the Laurier Government was returned to power it would introduce the closure. What will he say about it now? His friends fought the closure though they themselves had drafted a much more drastic one. What will they say about it in Chateauguay. This is surely a difficult matter to explain.

Ottawa Opinion.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—"Ulster has enough men of her own to face any trouble that may arise," says District Master W. McEwen of the Orangemen of the Ottawa District.

F. W. Forde, Grand Master of the Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario East said: "In the Orange order as it is in other organizations, there are a number of hotheads who are always too willing to lead such an agitation. The troubled time in Ulster has not reached a climax, and we have not thought of lending either physical or financial aid so far."

GENERAL STAFF AND 125 MEN SHOT

Laredo, Tex., Oct. 8.—Federal General Alvarez and his staff of 125 federal soldiers were executed yesterday in Torreon, Mex., under orders of General Francisco Villa of the Constitutionalist forces, according to information of reliable sources brought here to-day. With the city of Torreon, the rebels captured practically all of the federal's arms and artillery. The battle lasted four days with heavy losses to both sides.

NEWSPAPERMEN MAY MEET IN CANADA

Toronto, Oct. 8.—The question of holding an Imperial press conference in Canada in 1914 or 1915 will be discussed at a meeting to be held this afternoon at which representatives from the leading papers in Montreal and Toronto are expected to be present. The meeting was called by Sir John Willison, chairman of the Canadian section of the Empire Press Union.

An Imperial Conference was held in London three or four years ago, composed of delegates from Great Britain, Canada, New Zealand, Australia and South Africa, and at the time it was planned to hold the second conference in Canada.

MORE TROUBLE RE BI-LINGUAL

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The bi-lingual fight is on again. The walking out of pupils from their classes on the arrival of Protestant School Inspectors, which was almost a regular occurrence in Ontario school districts last year, has recommenced, according to French school authorities here. At Clarence Creek, not far from Ottawa all the pupils left their seats on the occasion of a visit from the inspector there. In several places in New Ontario the same thing is said to have occurred, one occasion being when Inspector White visited a school near Haileybury, quite a small sized row developed, it is understood.

PLAN TO ENCOURAGE AUSTRALIAN TRADE

The Australian exchanges just to hand announce the appointment of the Interstate Commission, of three members, Hon. A. B. Piddington, chairman, George Swinburne, M.L.A., and Comptroller of Customs Lockyer, a tariff authority. The appointments are to be for a period of seven years, and the commissioners will, on the expiration of that term, be eligible for reappointment. In the case of illness, suspension, or absence of a commissioner, the governor-general will be required to nominate a person to act as deputy commissioner in the interim, and the officer temporarily appointed will possess all the powers of the permanent commissioner whose place he takes. His Excellency also possesses the right of designating the chief commissioner, and similarly in the case of illness or other emergency, he must appoint one of the other commissioners to take the place of the chief.

The Salaries.

In addition to the salaries of £2,500 and £2,000 per annum laid down under the act, special travelling allowances are to be granted to each of the commissioners. Two will form a quorum, and they will have all the powers of a full commission. The decision of the majority in all cases will prevail, but if only two commissioners are present, and they cannot agree upon any matter, the final decision must be postponed until the full commission has assembled. None of the commissioners is to be interested in any business having relation to what is known as a "common carrier," and they are not to be allowed to participate in profit, benefit, or emolument arising from anything of the kind.

DUBLIN ON THE VERGE OF RUIN LOOKS TO CANADA FOR HELP

Hundred Face Starvation, Trade is Paralyzed, Ships are Idle, Wharf Piled With Merchandise, Doles of Soup and Food Dispensed Daily

London, Oct. 8.—Dublin's labor war is rapidly acquiring a wider significance. Peace negotiations having failed, each side is drawing on its final resources. English labor leaders, while objecting in some respects to Larkinism, believe that, in the face of the direct attack of the Dublin employers upon the principle of trades unionism, and the demand that the workers before reinstatement shall repudiate the Irish transport workers' union, organized labor must support Larkin.

This is the reason for a generous British contribution to aid the strikers. The Miners' Federation made a vote of $5,000 a week to the strike fund, $45,000 to the compositors' society, and $1,250 to the Dublin strike.

Labor now hopes for wider Imperial support, especially from Canada. The situation in the city is tragic. One hundred thousand persons face starvation. Trade is paralized ships lie idle at the wharves, quays are piled with dumped merchandise, shop keepers loiter idly, their customers having no money; great crowds of thinly clad, hunger marked men and women, stand outside Liberty Hall awaiting their doles of soup and food. Dublin is being ruined.

SILENT PROBING IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Oct. 8.—According to a Regina despatch to the Free Press, an investigation into the administration of the natural resources under the Laurier Government is being conducted in Regina by a Federal Government Commission. It is in progress at the present time but there is little information to be had as to what is actually being done.

Room 210 of the Westman Chambers is the scene of the inquiry which is being conducted by E. R. Ferguson of Winnipeg. The only witness so far being called has been J. G. Turriff, M.P., for Assiniboia, former Lands Commissioner of the Dominion Government. Mr. Turriff was on the stand all day yesterday, and will continue his evidence this morning.

Yesterday morning M. W. Martin, M.P. for Regina, went to Room 210 Westman Chambers, wishing to be present at the proceedings. Mr. Ferguson informed him that he could not allow him to be present and Mr. Martin was obliged to leave. Newspaper men are also barred.

WHO WILL WIN AT CHATEAUGUAY?

In a response to a request by The Times for his opinion as to the result of the election at Chateauguay, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., said:—"It is generally conceded that the French will stick to Sir Wilfrid, and therefore, the chances are that Chateauguay will remain Liberal."

SHORE FISHERIES OF CANADA GET MUCH-NEEDED PROTECTION

Hon. J. D. Hazen Takes Steps to Improve the Lot of the Canadian Fishermen

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The rights of the Canadian fishermen in both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts are being jealously guarded by Hon J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Reports show that on the Atlantic coast two deep sea trawlers are being accompanied by the Dominion Government protective cruiser so that they cannot interfere with the legitimate areas of the coast fishermen as trawling can take place without the vigilant eyes of the government officials being fastened upon the trawler. The work is being appreciated by the fishermen, who earn a living on the Atlantic coast.

More Cruisers.

During the Laurier regime little effort was made in obtaining first class boats to protect Canadian fishermen but the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries is changing that state of affairs.

Two new fisheries protective vessels will be placed on the British Columbia coast. The Malaspina, built in Dublin dockyard, with a speed of 15 knots is now on her way across and is expected at Victoria, B.C., at the beginning of December. A second vessel is being built on the lines of those used by the Irish Fisheries Board. The vessels now in use are out of date and until the completion of the two new boats the naval service Department was obliged to hire boats. These protective measures result in greater profits for Canadian labor. The fishing industry is too large and substantial to allow of its being menaced by the poacher and foreign competition.

THE PACKING OF CANADIAN FRUIT

Canadian fruits, than which there are none better, are now regarded in the markets of the world at their true worth. Through the operation of the Inspection and Sale Act the packing of Canadian fruit has been greatly improved and the development of the trade accelerated. From time to time since its enactment, as experience has indicated, the Act has been improved in order to more completely encourage and protect the industry. The latest amendment to the Act, which was passed during the past session of Parliament, extends inspection to imported fruit thereby placing it on an equal footing with that grown in Canada. The amendment provides that the Governor-in-Council by regulation may prescribe the kinds of imported fruit the packages containing which must be branded or marked; the brands or marks to be used thereon, as well as the methods and places where such branding shall be done. Other minor changes were effected in the Act.

CHANGE GIVING LIFE TO GIBSON IS MADE OFFICIAL

His Excellency the Administrator Gives Reasons in Official Statement

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—At 1.30 this afternoon Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, upon the advice of the Cabinet, signed the papers commuting the sentence of death passed upon Charles Gibson to imprisonment for life in the Penitentiary.

Sir Charles arrived on the noon train from Montreal and was met by Hon. W. T. White, driving at once to his office. After the council meeting he held a long conference with the Premier and it was 1.30 before the papers were signed.

It was then officially announced that the sentence had been commuted and the following official statement was issued :-

"After the application for a new trial had been refused, application was made on behalf of the prisoner for commutation of sentence, which unless the Governor-in-Council intervened would be carried out on the 9th inst. His Excellency, the Administrator, was informed that the application had been made and that it was strongly supported by numerous petitions addressed to him asking that the prerogative of mercy should be exercised in this instance.

"His Excellency considered that under the circumstances the case should be reconsidered and that an opportunity should be afforded to the prisoner's counsel to be heard in the support of the application for clemency. Accordingly the case was further considered by Council and Hon. W. T. White, acting Minister of Justice, had the assistance of the Prime Minister who made himself thoroughly familiar with the case, and of the members of the Government. There were special features in the evidence and in the circumstances disclosed, which justified the commutation of the sentence. In this conclusion His Excellency the Administrator has concurred and the sentence has accordingly been commuted to imprisonment for life."

CANADA'S HARVEST REASSURES BACKING OF ENGLISH MONEY

Montreal, Oct. 8.—"We go back to Britain full of wonder and admiration at this country of vast areas and illimitable resources," said the Earl of Clarendon at the Ritz-Carlton last night.

The Earl has, in company with Lady Clarendon, been through to the West, stopping by the way at Toronto, near which their son, Lord Hyde is engaged in farming with a brother-in-law, Lord Somers.

Passing through the prairie provinces, the Earl was able to size up the agricultural situation, for he has 5,000 acres in Herts, and Warwickshire, and has for fifty years been associated with the soil. It strikes the Earl as odd that Canada should be importing butter and eggs from New Zealand. Accustomed to see close clean mixed farming, the Earl looks in vain, and not without a sigh, at the grain-raising in the West, with never an ounce of dressing put in to restore fertility to the soil. But it must come, says Earl Clarendon, though the day may be delayed for years.

CANADA LOYAL TO THE CORE.

This is his Lordship's first trip to Canada. He wanted to look into the prospects of the country and its possibilities. He is much impressed at both the public and private evidences of loyalty, asserting the Union Jack is seen on public buildings more frequently even than in Britain.

"Canada," he says, "is loyal to the core."

The harvest here, he thinks, has saved the situation, with its net profits of 170 millions to the farmer. This shows a vast increase and will do much to restore the confidence of the British investor. British capital, says his Lordship, is much wanted in the West, far more than in the East. The $5 a day earned by harvestmen in the West rather staggered the Earl, since it is more than his own countrymen at home get in a week.

He thinks that in some shape or form Canada, with its long coastline, will have to face the naval situation and he is content to believe that the country will somehow fall into line and agree upon a satisfactory policy.

EXPECTS BROADENING LIFE.

Side by side with the great increase of wealth, and the striving for more and more money, Earl Clarendon is looking for a keener pursuit of the fine arts and a desire to cultivate the higher intellectual and social pursuits which wealth and leisure make possible.

Earl Clarendon was A. D. C. to the King, is Lord Lieutenant of Hertfordshire, is Honorable Colonel of the Herts Yeomanry, president and chairman of the Herts Territorial Association, and was a Lord Chamberlain to Queen Victoria and King Edward. He is a Liberal-Unionist in politics, and in 1869-70 represented Brecon in the House of Commons.

On leaving the Ritz Carlton last night to board the Virginian, Lord Clarendon said: "We go back home with a very favorable report of Canada, and have immensely enjoyed our stay here."

SPORTS

Yesterday, those New York Giants, that it would be more than detrimental to succumb to another 6—4, which meant that they would have to face an unsurmountable lead. The Athletics were keen and expectant, but,—. The Giants' fans felt a severe loss when it was known that Merkle, the popular first baseman, was out of the game, thus weakening the line-up considerably.

Suffice to say of the game is that Matthewson and Plank, two veteran pitchers held each other to a score of nil, until the tenth.

Baker up, two men gone, and two strikes called on him, struck at the third, and missed by a foot, and the Giants had got three runs too.

The score presented itself as follows:

Giants . . . . [illegible]—3 [illegible] 1
Athletics . . . . [illegible]—0 [illegible] 1

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR SWING BRIDGE

Mayor Bradburn and J. H. Burnham, M.P., returned from Ottawa yesterday, where they had been on business in connection with the swing bridge over the Otonabee. They saw the Minister and the General Road Manager of the C.P.R. and it is understood that the prospects for a swing bridge look brighter. It is generally known that the Minister of Public Works ordered the C.P.R. to install a swing, instead of a stationary bridge over the Otonabee river.

PRINCE ERNEST REJOINS HIS WIFE

Disagreement Over Duchy of Brunswick Blamed on Bethmann-Hollweg.

Berlin Oct. 8.—Prince Earnest August of Cumberland, returned here to-day and rejoined his wife, the Princess Victoria Luise, who has been staying with the Empress her mother while recovering from her recent indisposition. The re-union of the Prince and Princess is regarded here as a definite sign that the recent trouble over the succession to the throne of the Duchy of Brunswick, was rather a controversy between the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-ollweg, and his advisers, than between the Hohenzollern and the Guelph families.

Question of Sex.

A New England school teacher recited "The Landing of the Pilgrims" to her pupils, then asked each of them to draw from their imagination a picture of Plymouth Rock. One little fellow hesitated and then raised his hand. "Well, Willie, what is it?" asked the teacher.

"Please, teacher, do you want us to draw a hen or a rooster.

ROYAL HANDYMAN

The Popularity of the Duke of Connaught's Son

No member of the Royal family is more widely known or more popular than is Prince Arthur of Connaught. Therefore, it is no matter for surprise that, when he celebrated his birthday he is the recipient of congratulatory messages from all parts of the world. His Royal Highness has had an eventful career. He is one of the personal aides-de-camp to the King, and is captain in the 2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys). He saw service in South Africa, has opened exhibitions and bridges, visited agricultural shows, shot big game, and presided over conferences and other gatherings of various descriptions. But it is in connection with his diplomatic missions in many of which he represented the King, that he has come most prominently before the public. Thus, he attended the christening of the heir to the Italian throne and the baptism of the Prince of Asturias in Madrid; he visited Germany to be present at the wedding of the Crown Prince, and later still, represented the King at the funeral of King Oscar of Sweden.

His mission to Japan, when he invested the late Emperor with the Order of the Garter and Admiral Togo and Marshal Yamagata with the Order of Merit, was a magnificent success. So popular was he that he brought back with him on his return to London more than seventy cases of presents.

On account of his many activities Prince Arthur has been styled "the handyman of the family." It is related of him that when young he ardently desired to be a clockmaker and to this day manifests an intense interest in mechanism of every kind.

JOHNSTON IS MODEST

He is Merely a Hired Man and Works on That Theory

Walter Johnson, Washington phenomenal pitcher is one of the most popular players in the game. The Johnson of to-day is not the Johnson who broke into the American league from Idaho. Then he was an awkward over-grown boy, with terrific speed and little else. To-day he is the finished article. Tall, well-built, graceful, he is tremendously powerful and pitches with a frictionless ease which impels the query, "Where does his speed come from?"

WALTER JOHNSON

He pitches to win and wastes no time. He gets his signals from the catcher while returning to his place and is ready to deliver the ball when he steps upon the slab. His games are notably short.

Walter Johnson prefers to submerge himself rather than seek the limelight so pleasant to many players. He regards himself as a workman, employed to win ball games and he sees nothing strange in the fact that he wins them. That is what he is paid for.

Critics unite in declaring him the greatest pitcher of all time, and surely no one could wear high honors with less self-consciousness than this bishop.

DO YOU KNOW?

That if light colored or white kid gloves are rubbed gently with bread crumbs after each wearing they will keep clean a long time.

That a most effectual trap for roaches is a basin with a little molasses in it. They easily fall into the pan, but can not get out.

That old-fashioned mutton tallow, which can be perfumed with a few drops of essence of rose, is very healing for chapped hands or lips or rough skin.

That the cover of a lard-pail is very convenient to place over the burner of a gas stove when heating something in a small dish or a cup.

That when you clean spiral bedsprings it may be easily accomplished if you use a dish-mop, and keep one just for that purpose. Get the rust out of the springs first with the dry mop, then dampen the mop and go over the metal a second time.

That threads and hairs on a carpet may be swept up, if the broom is brushed lightly round and round, instead of straight along for the threads will be formed in a ball and may easily be picked off the broom.

That the window in the bathroom should always be open at top and bottom, so that a free current of fresh air may be continually coursing through the room.

RACE OF PYGMIES INTERESTS

In People Recently Discovered in Papua, Scientists See a Connection With the Stone Age.

In a race of pygmies recently discovered in Papua, scientists see another connecting link between the average savage races of today and primitive man of the stone age. Tapiro is the name given to this pygmy race. The men are extremely small but well molded, strong and active. In contrast to the Papuans, they have stocky, well-made calves instead of the thin, straight legs of their neighbors.

Unlike most savages, they do not practice tattooing or cicatrization. Their needs for comfort are few. Each man may carry all his portable property in a sort of haversack, which is slung over his shoulder. This contains his sleeping mat, fire stick, rattan for kindling a flame, tobacco and other odds and ends.

They are remarkably skilful in hewing rough but absolutely balanced canoes from the heavy trunks of trees. The craft are beautifully carved and are propelled by paddles with long shafts and wide blades. Skilled as they are in the making of canoes, their only implements are stone axes and bone knives.

In disposing of their dead they wrap the body in mats and place it in a rude coffin usually constructed of broken canoes. The coffin is raised on a sort of trestle and left until decomposition is complete. The skulls of the dead are kept by their relatives and friends and in a short time become worn smooth from handling.

COUNT YAMAMOTO
Premier of Japan. He is an admiral and a leading naval authority in his country.

WHEN BUYING MEAT

Some Points to Remember About the Healthy Article

When buying meat it is important to remember that the meat inspector is likely to have a rather lower standard than that set by the fastidious housewife. Also that animals may have been out of condition or actually diseased. In such cases the meat has a dark, dry appearance and is flabby; the fat has a reddish and oily look, and frequently a disagreeable foetid odor.

Red meat should look bright, have a clear, cherry-red hue, be firm yet elastic, moist but not wet, and have a fresh not disagreeable odor. In well-fed cattle the muscles are slightly interspersed with fat, so that the meat has a marbled appearance. The fat, which may vary in color, from an almost pure white to a nice yellow, should be firm and dry, be slightly greasy to the touch, and have a fresh nutty flavor. In well-fed, healthy cattle the kidneys, heart, etc., are covered with firm fat. In young cattle the fat is light in color; it darkens with age, and is also of a richer red in stall-fed cattle.

In white meat the flesh is firm and close knit, fresh looking but not wet. It is pale in color, not marbled (though certain cuts of pork may be streaked with fat), and the fat firm and white or light yellow.

Pigs are liable to pass on many serious disease germs, notably the germs of consumption. For these reasons pork should always be very thoroughly cooked.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View.

The Minister of Finance has arranged a new loan in England on terms more advantageous than have been obtained by any other of the great British Dominions. This speaks well for Canada.

Details of the new parcel post system are nearing co pletion and the system will be in operation by the end of the year. The Post Office Department under Hon. L. P. Pelletier has shown commendable industry in the working out of this complicated question in so short a time,

Hon. Sydney Fisher told the nomination meeting in Chateauguay that he wanted a clean election. Surely he didn't imagine for a moment that the Libplated any other kind. Still, Mr. Fisher used to have charge of the Liberal campaigns in that part of Quebec. ...

The London Daily News says that the new United States tariff puts the United States into the class of free trade nations. Inasmuch as the average American rate of duty is still higher than the average Canadian rate, our free-trade friends will be delighted to know that Canada basks in the sunshine of free trade.

Doubtless two two San Francisco clergymen who resigned their charges to become undertakers discovered that it was more profitable to work in a churchyard than a church.

OUR LUCKY ESCAPE.

The new United States tariff after its final revision is even lower than when first introduced. These are the reductions for which Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked the people of Canada to make such an enormous sacrifice. The members of the late government stand convicted of a stupendous blunder, and Canada may be congratulated on its escape from a very serious and embarrassing situation.

AUSTRALIA COMES FIRST.

If any Canadian is content with the naval situation which enables the Governor-General of Australia to declare that that Commonwealth "now takes the foremost place among the Dominions of the Empire in regard to naval defence"—though we would put New Zealand in that proud position—we cannot congratulate him upon his pride of country, says the Montreal Star. That proud position might have been ours if the Senate had not blocked the way. It might, indeed, have been ours if the Senate's masters—the Liberal headquarters' staff—had not fiddled away the time on "Niobe" nonsense, and rejected the first advice of the Admiralty given four years ago. But, as it is, we rank last. The Empire's overseas roll of honor in naval matters runs something like this—

New Zealand.
Australia.
South Africa.
Newfoundland.
India.
The Malay States.
Canada not placed.

And we are in this position, although the Government, fresh from the people, and the House of Commons, the constitutional representatives of the people, have willed otherwise. So far as the Canadian people can constitutionally declare their desire, they have pronounced for a progressive naval policy. They elected a Prime Minister, pledged to consult the Admiralty. He consulted the Admiralty and took its expert advice. The House of Commons, not yet two years old, accepted his proposals. By all political rules, they ought to have gone promptly into effect. But a number of partizans, put in the Senate by a Government which has been beaten since at the polls, blocked the way.

Meanwhile, the British taxpayer is carrying our responsibilities for us; and Germany is challenging the overseas Dominions with an overseas squadron.

Any Headache Cured Tired Systems Re-Toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong With the Stomach.

A Prominent Publishing Man Says The Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callander, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resisted everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as a tonic to the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headache, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease, all druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Cigarettes on H.M.S. Vanguard

George Henry Hiscutt, canteen manager of H.M.S. Vanguard, of the First Battle Squadron, was fined $50 and costs at Sheerness for being concerned in knowingly concealing 34,750 cigarettes in the store-room of the Vanguard with intent to evade payment of duty. Defendant pleaded that he was under the impression that he had informed the Customs authorities of the existence of the cigarettes, as well as of the 55,000 he had declared before the officers started rummaging.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by inflamed condition of the mucous surlining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

WHAT HOME RULE MEANS WOULD WRECK THE EMPIRE

Dublin Professor Explains What the Profered Really is Few Understand it

Dublin, Oct. 8.— Even the man in the street here, the city that will, if the Asquith plans do not fail, be the capital of a politically-created new nation, does not know what Home Rule means. In this Nationalist stronghold, naturally they all say they want it, and that they will get it in spite of Ulster's threats; but they do not know what it is they want, or what they will get. After asking many I went to one of the professors at the university. He was a young man and I had been told he was a keen political student.

"What is Home Rule?" I asked. It took him an hour or so to explain, and as I came away with voluminous notes I really thought the man in the streets could be excused for not knowing the plain details. There has been so much controversy that the hard facts have been lost.

Here is briefly, and without party bias, the result of the professor's explanation :—

The Home Rule question is concentrated into two parts — wide as the poles asunder,—the one the dry, uninteresting, but necessary section that deals with executive and financial powers the bill will transfer from the Imperial to the Dublin parliament. Some writers have compared it to the relations between the provinces and Ottawa. The other part may be focussed in the now historical, sentimental phrase, "Ireland a Nation." It is the hot, flaming, fractional section that has caused the sensational stand, really seriously sincere in Ulster. It has caused the great argument of the minority rights against the majority. It has furnished the oratorical driving force that keeps the agitation going and draws dollars by the pailful from Canada and the United States to be used both for and against.

WHAT IS HOME RULE.

The Home Rule bill is a measure to set up an Irish parliament in Dublin, with an executive that is practically responsible only to itself. Ireland at the present time has the same amount of Home Rule that England—as England alone — Scotland and Wales have. By this I mean Dublin sends popularly elected members to Westminster as does Edinburgh, Llanfairfechan or Chelmsford. Under the bill this would be altered so that in addition to sending members to the "Ireland-a-Nation" Parliament in Dublin, she would still send a reduced number to the Imperial parliament. This admittedly is what the Canadian constituencies do, providing you substitute federal for Imperial parliament. Edinburgh or Llanfairfechan would only have a "pull" at Westminster; many Irish constituencies would be represented at Dublin and at Westminster.

If the Dublin parliament is ever formed it will be mainly Nationalist in politics and Roman Catholic—one has to be on the spot to realize the alliance of religion and politics — in religious complexion. Under the bill the executive would be responsible to the Irish parliament! John Redmond would be premier and Joseph Devlin his right hand man. They would be at the head of the government, and therefore in control, ruling the whole country along their ideas, dangerous to the ministry.

When Lord Loreburn's letter was published, suggesting compromise, Mr. Devlin was its antagonist, insisting on Irish nationhood — one could almost write Nationalism.

Then for the sentimental side. In my short wanderings around Ireland I have heard orators with quavering voices, declaiming to listening, yet perhaps far from understanding, audiences: "When we shake off the English shackles; when we get back to the old Parliament house on College Green."

HAVE ENORMOUS POWER.

The executive of the Irish parliament would have enormous power, but there are several clauses in the bill which name things over which it must have no control. The Imperial parliament at Westminster is to be "predominant" over the Irish parliament; Unionists argue that in practice this predominance will be nothing but a myth. The bill gives power to Dublin to make laws for the "peace, order and good government of Ireland," but hold from the Irish house the power of control over: "The crown, the succession, the making of peace or war, the navy, the army, foreign affairs, extradition of criminals, titles of honor, treason, nationalization of aliens, foreign trade, lighthouses, coinage, weights and measures and patient rights." The Irish Parliament cannot pass laws affecting these things.

The bill also lays down the following matters as "reserved"—that is, kept in the hands of the Imperial parliament as far as altering them or passing new laws which would conflict—for some years at least: the Land Purchase acts, Old Age Pensions and National Insurance and Labor Exchange acts. In addition, the Imperial parliament will continue to control the collection of taxes, the Royal Irish constabulary, the Post Office Savings bank (not the post office itself), and a few other minor financial items. The new parliament would not be allowed to establish or endow any sect, penalize any person on account of his religion, or prohibit the free exercise of any religion. Of these clauses the Unionists say they are put in as false clauses to comfort Protestants, and that they are but paper safeguards, easily broken and sure to be abolished.

Of the "reserve" clauses mentioned above the bill says that the Irish parliament, after six years, is to control the Irish constabulary; can take over the post office savings banks; control the Insurance act, old age pensions and Friendly society funds.

CAN VETO BILLS.

Those who claim the bill has been shorn of its objectionable features point out that the lord lieutenant appointed by England will have a veto over bills passed by the Irish parliament; just as in Canada the governor-general can, but does not, veto legislation of the government. Unionists declare this veto cannot be really used without causing immense conflict, and as a parallel case ask you to imagine the uproar in Canada if the governor-general refused to accede to a measure duly passed by the majority in the House of Commons.

Another menace would be the 40 Irish members at Westminster, who again might hold the balance of power between rival parties at Westminster and demand certain enlarged powers for the Dublin parliament.

Critics of the financial parts of the bill say these alone will prevent the measure being put into operation. Out of the long and intricate financial scheme of the bill there is the feature that even with an Irish exchequer and an Irish consolidated fund there will have to be paid out of the English treasury about £2,000,000 annually; paid out and put under the control of the Irish minister of finance. And again, in spite of this, after a certain period the bill gives the Irish parliament power to vary, increase or discontinue in Ireland taxes levied by the Imperial government. Independent taxes can also be levied, and this will strike at Northern Ireland, the parts which are the richest and the strongest industrially.

The professor did not have to tell me why Ulster and her neighbors detest and resist the Home Rule bill. There are two vulnerable places in which a man resents being attacked, his religion and his pocket. Ulster, with causes, sees what will happen if there is a Nationalist parliament given to Ireland.

DEATH'S HAND OFTEN STAYED

Toronto, Oct. 8.—There is a definite policy in the Department of Justice at Ottawa to commute sentences where a man has been reprieved on on the eve of his execution was a statment by A. R. Hassard this morning. Mr. Hassard had just received an acknowledgement of a communication in connection with the Gibson case he had addressed tiH on. W. T. White, acting Minister of Justice in which he called attention to statements that had been made to him by the chief secretary of the Department some years ago, when Mr. Hassard was in Ottawa on the Martin case.

"He told me said Mr. Hassard, referring to the statement by the chief secretary, "that the Government regarded it as a matter of inhumanity to compel a man to go through preparation for violent death a second time where he had been deprived on the eve of his execution. He stated that this policy had been adopted at the instance of Lord Aberdeen, after a reprive in a Montreal case in which the Cabinet had finally determined it could not interfere."

SOME COMMUNICATIONS

Mr. Hassard recalled some of the communications of the capital sentence in recent years.

William Walter McWherrell, sentenced to death for the murder of the William's couple in 1894.

Capelli, an Italian for whom the lows were twice built. He was found guilty of killing William Dowd, t Parry Sound following a Christmas celebration in 1907.

Blythe, who his wife to death with a poker at Agincourt in 1900. He was reprived on the eve of his execution, and the court of appeal directing a second trial, he was sentenced to eighteen years imprisonment.

McNulty, tried with Mary Dolan.

FREEZE-OUT FOR MRS. PANKHURST

Pennsylvania Sufragists to Ignore the Presence of British Militant

Pittsburgh, Oct. 8.—No recognition of any sort, cordial or otherwise, awaits Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst from Pennsylvania suffragists upon her visit to this country, according to the dictum voiced at the headquarters of the Equal Franchise Federation here today. Mrs. F. M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania branch of the association, said that Mrs. Pankhurst had not been invited to the United States by the suffragists, neither would the militant's presence be acceptable.

Mrs. J. C. Miller, local president, said Mrs. Pankhurst "will find only slight opportunity in this city of discoursing on the aeonies of forcible feeding, since members of the Woman's Suffrage party intend to ignore the presence of the English woman and do all in their power to prevent her speakin here."

This public statement was set out from suffrage headquarters here today.

Pittsburgh suffragists have pledged themselves to join with the Equal Franchise Federation of Pennsylvania in fighting against the influence of the militants, and Mrs. Pankhurst will find the doors of the local suffrage [illegible] closed to her, no matter how loudly she may shout "Votes for women."

In connection with the Pennsylvania suffragists' convention, set for Oct. 26 to 30 in this city, Mrs. Miller said today that Mrs. Pankhurst's name had not been considered as a speaker, and that "positively no invitation would be extended to the leader of London women."

O, PROMISE ME.

(Published by Request.)

O, promise me that some day you and I
Will take our love together to some sky,
Where we can be alone and faith renew,
And find the hollows where those flowers grew,
Those first, sweet violets of early spring,
Which come in whispers, thrill us both, and sing
Of love unspeakable which is to be.
O, promise me, O, promise me!

O, promise me that you will take my hand,
The most unworthy in this lonely land,
And let me sit beside you, in your eyes
Seeing the vision of our paradise;
Hearing God's message while the organ rolls
Its mighty music to our very souls;
No love less perfect than a life with thee—
O, promise me, O, promise me!

O, promise me that when with bated breath
I wait the presence of the angel death,
You will be near me, guide my falt'ring feet,
And softly breathe those words in accents sweet,
Come sometime to me from that distant shore,
Caress and comfort as in days of yore;
Triumphant over death our love shall be,
O, promise me, O, promise me!

CANADA IS EASILY IN THE LEAD IN WHEAT CONSUMPTION

The consumption of wheat has been estimated for various countries, with results as given in the accompanying tabulation. The estimates are based upon the average production for 10 years, exports or imports of wheat, including wheat flour reduced to wheat equivalent and exclusive of that used for seed. Canada is easily in the lead, an average Canadian using nineteen times as much wheat as a Japanese in his native country. The figures are:

	Bushels
Canada	9.5
Belgium	8.3
France	7.9
Spain	6.1
United Kingdom	6.0
Switzerland	6.0
Australia	5.5
Italy	5.4
United States	5.4
Uruguay	5.3
Argentine	5.3
Bulgaria	5.0
Austria-Hungary	4.3
Netherlands	4.3
Roumania	4.0
Denmark	3.5
Chile	3.4
Germany	3.3
Russia	2.7
Servia	2.5
Sweden	2.5
Egypt	2.5
Portugal	1.3
British India	.8
Mexico	.8
Japan	.5

Various conditions affect the accuracy of such estimates; the amount to be deducted for seed can be only roughly approximated, for, while data of wheat acreage are regularly published, the amount of seed used per acre in the different countries is not definitely ascertainable. The degree of accuracy varies considerably for the different countries; for instance, the estimate for such countries as England, France, and most countries of Western Europe, are probably within 3 per cent. of the truth, whereas for Mexico and Egypt the estimate may be as much as 25 per cent. wide of the mark. The figure given for the United States may be an underestimate of 2 to 4 per cent. Generally however, it is believed that most of the figures are less than 10 per cent. in error.

AN ELECTRIC SOLDERER

Melts and Solders Metals When Circuit is Completed

Here is an electrical apparatus for melting and soldering metals, the principle being that by completing a circuit the necessary heat is contributed. A lamp has four insulating uprights on it and a plate with a central opening in it is mounted on the uprights. A carbon stick is mounted on the base and moves up and down, toward and away from the opening in the plate. A conducting supporting member for the article to be melted or soldered is set on the plate above the central opening to be met by the carbon stick. A pair of conductors are also connected with the base and one of these conductors—the pencil shown in the illustration —is the part of the apparatus that establishes the circuit and does the most important work, having the soldering iron in it.

PENCIL DOES THE WORK.

Aged Woman's Tragic Death

Mrs. Hamilton the eighty-year-old wife of a Crimean veteran, at Portland, died as the result of burns. In her fright she turned round rapidly, and the hem of the nightdress also caught fire. She was instantly enveloped in flames.

Time Limit for Marriage

In connection with an order made by the Clones Rural District Council that a laborer should leave his cottage if he did not marry within a month, an amusing letter was read at the last meeting protesting that it was not possible to find a suitable partner within the time limit, and asking how many of the Board, "young or antique," made up their minds to marry in a month.

"Dismissed Policeman

William Barrett claimed exemption from the jury service at the Belfast Assizes on the ground that he was a dismissed policeman. Lord Justice Cherry said that was no disqualification but Mr. Barrett said that a late Attorney-General for Ireland had stated that the word of a dismissed policeman could not be relied on. The Crown ordered him to "stand by."

Parade of Female Strikers

A curious scene was witnessed in Londonderry when a large crowd of factory girls on strike marched to a "penny bazaar"—where they bought penny trumpets, bicycle bugles, and motor horns. At the dinner hour they formed in procession and marched from the Labor Rooms to the factory, blowing the trumpets and hooters, and altogether making a deafening noise.

Smart Dodge That Failed

An ingenious device to evade the law was related by Sergeant Duggan at Swinford Petty Sessions. A man charged under the Lights on Vehicles Act, espying the police in the distance, took his donkey from the cart, and getting between the shafts, pulled it along himself. He protested that he had committed no offence, as a man with a wheelbarrow was not obliged to carry a light. The Bench imposed a fine, thereby showing that they held a different view of the case.

"Save the Language"

The Gaelic League issued its annual appeal for aid in the work of supporting the Irish language to which it has set itself, and for which it has already done so much. The census, it is pointed out, reveals that while Irish shows a uniform advance in prosperous parts of the country, Ulster and Leinster having converted a former loss of 2,000 speakers a year into a new continuous gain of 1,400 a year, yet these gains are not enough to compensate the continuing drain from the more Irish-speaking districts. "To save the language," the appeal says, the efforts of the League "must be redoubled—probably quadrupled.

Wife and a Job Wanted

An amusing letter was read at Roscommon Guardians' meeting, in which a laborer asked to be supplied with "a partner for life," stating that he had "suffered thirty-five winters single." "I could do with any of the girls in the 'House,'" continued the missive, "a wardsmaid, cook, nurse, or anything, and if you grant my request I will save the ratepayers hundreds of pounds. I will go in and live in the 'House' and make myself generally useful by keeping the bottles empty and well washed. You will want no more contracts for potatoes, as I will till the master's flower garden. I could also act in the capacity of schoolmaster, and give the guardians that come in at eleven o'clock instruction in etymology, prosody, syntax, and verbosity, so as to help the reporters."

True Type of Great Soldier.

One of the war correspondents in the Balkans writes of General Putnik, Commander-in-chief of the Servian forces, a military genius: "I was struck by the extraordinary likeness which he bore to General Grant, both in features and build. Perhaps, however, if the reader of these lines will recall what Andrew Carnegie is like, then he will have an excellent idea of the appearance of the Servian generalissimo who has conducted the marvelously successful campaign against the Turk. Placid and gentle eyed, one of the kindest of men, I should think, he is adored by his staff and by all ranks."

SENSE OF DIGNITY

Something Finer Than One's Normal Self, and More Elevating Than Passion.

By H. M. EGBERT.

"A marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Miss Estelle Lambert, only daughter of Rear Admiral Charles Lambert (retired) and Mr. John Hewlett, the well-known senior partner of Hewlett & Mason, 80 Wall street. The news of the engagement has occasioned considerable speculation among the friends of the bride, who—"

John Hewlett, seated at his desk in his capacious office, smiled very grimly as he read the insinuating paragraph in the society paper which had been sent to him, marked, by some one who preferred to remain anonymous. It was well that he had done so, for John Hewlett was not a very pleasant enemy, and he had been known to repay insults with good measure on more than one occasion.

But he only thrust the sheet contemptuously into his waste-paper basket, and then, having sorted the correspondence upon his desk, he closed it with a slam. He had arranged his affairs; he had settled his obligations to the last penny; now he was to settle a moral obligation which weighed on him more than the loss of his entire fortune, wiped out in a day by the sensational slump in Hardware Preferred.

John Hewlett was forty-three. From the age of eighteen to thirty he had worked in a foundry, stripped to the waist, the bully and overlord of a motley crew of hard fighters and hard workers. Then an education, painfully and laboriously acquired by the aid of a few books studied when he should have been sleeping, enabled him to break free from his enslavement. In five years more he was a man of average education and moderately rich; at forty he had entered Wall street, where, during three years, he had become known as the most audacious free-lance in the financial district. He had made millions, had been flattered and courted; then, at forty-three he had fallen in love, for the first time in his life. He had met Estelle's father at his country club, and the old admiral, captivated by the bluff sincerity of the man, had invited him to visit him at his house on Fifty-fifth street. There he had met Estelle, just back from school in France, to take her dead mother's place in the household; and by sheer force of personality he had swept her off her feet with his impassioned pleading.

Admiral Lambert Came Forward and Clasped the Other by the Hand.

And now he was ruined and his duty lay clear before him. John Hewlett had never flinched from duty when he was boss of the foundry gang. Hard-hitting, inflexible, he had gone straight to the point and always carried it. Now his course was clearly defined. He could not give her anything to compensate for what he was taking from her. He must release her from the engagement.

Three-quarters of an hour later he was being ushered into the drawing room of the Lamberts' house. It was a soft summer evening, agreeably cool; the lights were not yet turned on, and the house was almost dark. Miss Estelle was out, the man said, but would return at any moment. Would he wait for her?

John Hewlett paced the room quietly, thinking out the speech that he had prepared. He passed into the hall. Adjacent to the drawing room was a smaller one, the entrance hidden by a Japanese screen. Behind this he heard the murmur of voices. One of them was Estelle's. The other was the softly modulated one of Theodore Faning. Hewlett was about to break in on them when something said aroused his attention, and, though he would have scorned to play the spy, he stood as though rooted there, awaiting the opportunity to slip away without arousing detection.

"Yes, Estelle, he's a beggar," he heard Faning say, with a self-satisfied laugh. "Every penny wiped out in the Hardware slump. It's all over the street. Poor beggar!"

"Why 'poor' beggar?" asked Estelle.

"Because he's losing you, Estelle," Faning answered, "and that makes him doubly poor. I tell you, when I heard the news my heart got into my throat and stayed there. He's so devilishly pertinacious, that Hewlett fellow, I was half of a mind that he would hurry round and pour some lying story into the old man's ears and somehow contrive to keep his strangle-hold on you. But I guess he didn't have the nerve. Take it from me, you won't see him again, Estelle. He's probably miles away by now, with all the money that his dupes trusted him with."

In the old days in the foundry Hewlett had been famous for striking before speaking. "It's a word and a blow with John Hewlett," was said of him. Now, hearing this, he felt his temples suffused with blood; involuntarily he put out his hands and the Japanese screen toppled over. Next moment he was standing in front of Estelle and his traducer. All the decorum acquired through years of painful self-mastery had vanished, and he was elemental in his fury. His fists were clenched, his face was purple, and he rocked slightly, like an infuriated beast.

"I heard you," he bellowed. "I heard you! I—I won't hurt you in Miss Lambert's presence. But I'm going to speak to her alone. Get out!"

"Mr. Hewlett!" cried Estelle, springing to her feet, pale with anger. "please remember that you are both my guests."

Hewlett's hands fell to his sides. He felt himself trembling. At that moment Admiral Lambert entered the room quietly, stepped up, and took his place between the men.

"Come, Hewlett, my dear fellow," he began. "What's the matter between you and Mr. Faning?"

"May I be allowed to speak?" inquired Faning ironically. He stood up, cool enough, although his hands were shaking. "It amounts to this: That man is a pauper. His house has failed. And I think," he continued, with a little bow, "that he has come here to tell you so."

"Yes, you're right," cried Hewlett, and all his rage came back. Never before had he been balked by circumstances; now he saw everything red; he wanted to use his mighty fists, and, not being able to, felt humiliated and impotent. "Yes, I've lost all my money," he shouted. "And I came to tell Miss Lambert so—not you, admiral, but Miss Lambert, because it's her right to know."

"And I think Mr. Hewlett is angry that Mr. Faning should have told me first," put in Estelle indignantly.

Hewlett looked round at the calm, collected witnesses of his helpless rage. He was very like a bear being baited by hounds. But in that moment a sense of dignity came to him, something finer than his normal self, which lifted him above his passion and left him cooler than all.

"Let's come to the point," he said. "I have asked Mr. Faning to withdraw. Now I can proceed. I have lost every penny I have, but I've paid my debts and I'm going to start life over again—and win. I've always won. But I've lost one thing. I came to say that. I wish to release Miss Lambert from our engagement. It wouldn't be fair."

He stopped and looked from one to another. There was something almost pitiful in his gaze. Faning shifted uneasily.

"With your permission, I will be going, sir," he said to the admiral, and, bowing to Estelle, he went out of the room. Outside he paused and grinned. Success was his now; he had heard enough; Hewlett had hopelessly lost—why, the coarseness of the man had shown through the polish like raw wood under a coat of varnish. He chuckled all the way home.

Inside there was a dead silence. Then the admiral spoke.

"Why wouldn't it be fair?" he asked.

"Why?" stammered Hewlett. "Why—why—"

Admiral Lambert came forward and clasped the other by the hand.

"I can't speak for Estelle, John," he said, "but I think you are doing us both a wrong. I hope you are. I believe, John, that this misfortune has swept away a barrier—a barrier which was once almost invisible, but has been growing higher and stronger—the barrier that you yourself have opposed to your own happiness. I mean your pride, John, and your self-depreciation. But I can't answer for Estelle. Perhaps she can answer."

He passed out of the room, and Hewlett, not understanding, stood staring after him beside the door. He stood as if in a dream till the rustle of a soft garment at his side caused him to start violently. Estelle stood by him.

"John," she said—and there were tears in her eyes—"John, won't you ever understand? Well, then, I'll have to tell you. I loved you for yourself, my dear, not for your money, not in spite of your roughness, but because of the heart of a man beneath it. There! I've told you and I never dared to hope the time would come."

And the tears that fell on his face washed away all bitter memories of the past.

VESTRY MEETING ST. JOHNS CHURCH

As announced in St. John's Anglican church on Sunday evening last, a very important vestry meeting was held in St. John's school house on Monday evening last. The chair was taken by the rector at 8 o'clock and there were present Churchwardens H. Morphet and Hazen Ritchie, Major Mills, Dr. Burnham, Messrs. Frank Linton, Hopwood, Frank Russell, Peckham, Bacon, Hatcher, Kingdon, Herridge and Walkey (vestry clerk).

The object of the meeting was to take into consideration the question of the two mortgages on the church, originally amounting to $6,000, but now reduced by paid off instalments to $3,000. The mortgagees had given notice to call in the existing mortgages which were on a basis of 4½ per cent per annum interest, on Nov. 1, or to execute a new mortgage deed at 6½ per cent per annum.

Mr. H. Morphet stated that he had made efforts to secure a new loan at 6 per cent interest, but had been so far unsuccessful until Mr. W. F. Johnston (ex-churchwarden) had stepped into the breach and had found a client willing to advance the necessary funds at 5½ per cent per annum.

It was proposed by Mr. Morphet, seconded by Mr. Ritchie that a new mortgage be arranged by Mr. Johnston on the terms offered. This resolution was unanimously carried.

There is an instalment of $500 maturing on the original mortgages. Steps are now being taken to raise the funds necessary to meet this.

It was then proposed, seconded Major Mills, seconded by Mr. Kingdon that the Vestry Clerk be authorized to convey to Mr. W. F. Johnston a hearty vote of thanks for the trouble he had taken in the matter. Mr. Johnston had generously undertaken to carry out all the legal business in connection with the transfer of mortgage free of charge.

This resolution, needless to say, was carried unanimously.

Mr. H. Morphet was also heartily thanked for the trouble he had taken in the matter.

The vestry meeting then adjourned.

Following the Vestry Meeting should have been a meeting of the Advisory Board of the Church. The duties of this body are to advise the rector and churchwardens in matters of financial and general church policy but inasmuch as only some six, out of the 24 members constituting the Board were present. Some general discussion arose as to ways and means of raising the $500 now falling due.

Canon Davidson, in effect, wished the Church to be a democratic institution and expressed his desire that the congregation generally should be consulted in all its matters as well as the Advisory Board, and suggested that meetings of the congregation be called from time to time to consider matters regarding the general welfare of the Church. He also mooted the idea of a Working Committee of active church people should have a place.

Major Mills remarked that if members of the Advisory Board could not or would not attend the meetings, that their places should be filled by others who could devote the time and attention necessary.

It was then proposed, seconded and carried that the meeting of the Advisory Board be adjourned until Tuesday the 14th of Oct.

After a few desultory observations the meeting was concluded.

FAMOUS SONG WRITERS

Author of "In Old Madrid"—Wrote 2,000 Ballads

One of the most prolific writers of songs who ever lived died in England in the person of Mr. Clifton Bingham. More than 2,000 lyrics and ballads flowed from his facile pen, and among them were some of the last thirty years. He once said that he wrote on an average seventy to eighty ballads a year. Mr. Bingham scored his first success as a young man with "Love's Old Sweet Song," which was set to music by T. L. Molloy. Then came "Dear Heart," to music by Tito Mattei, and "In Old Madrid," with music by Trotere. In the case of the last-named the music was composed first and the verses written to it. The score lay in Mr. Bingham's desk for months, and repeatedly the author received postcards from the composer asking, "What about my music?" At last the inspiration came, and the words were written.

Mr. Bingham was a born ballad-writer. "Songs must come from the heart," he said, "and go to the heart." "Back to the Old Love" was written on a visiting card, and another song on the top of an omnibus at Brighton. More than one song was written in an underground train, but most of them were composed at a little desk which his father gave him. Mr. Bingham was a dark-skinned, active, genial little man, with a heavy black moustache, a slight lisp (which he vainly struggled to overcome), a pair of the merriest brown-grey eyes, and a winning manner that made him a universal favorite.

At the time when Mr. Bingham was at the height of his popularity the popular song was, as a rule, limited in its subjects to "angels and dying children." Commenting on this characteristic he used to tell a good story.

"I had sold many dying child lyrics, and I determined to go to London to see my publisher. This was my first professional visit to him, and when I presented myself he stared at me in amazement. 'Good gracious!' he cried, 'judging from your songs I thought you were an old man with one foot in the grave!'"

BLOWS ITSELF ALONG

Frenchman's Auto Uses Wind as Motive Power

Bertram De Lesseps, a brother of the famous airman, has his brother's liking for flying. Only he wanted to do his "flying" safely on terra firma, and so he rigged up an aerial auto to do it in.

Except for the general outline, the machine resembles the automobile very little. Instead of gasoline as a motive power, it uses the wind. A "bulgy wing" aerial propeller, the shape and curve of which are based upon those of a bird's wing, drives the machine along at a fairly good speed. The propeller is placed a little to one side of the machine's rear so it can be turned towards the wind. The [illegible] [illegible] protected at the sides by [illegible] [illegible].

MAN AFTER DEATH

Extraordinary Scientific Researc into Disembodied Spirits

News has reached Paris of the traordinary researches into the ma of disembodied spirits, made by Dutch doctors who have conduc the investigation. They construc an apparatus whereby they claim are able to measure the density volume of the weight of a man af death, which they term "man-forc The instrument, the details of wh were revealed to them in the cou of a series of seances, is calle "dynamistograph," or force regis but is more popularly known am the public here as a spirit trap.

It consists of a large upright c board cylinder, impervious to air closed at each end, with a tin d the whole being attached to an tremely sensitive weighing appara The spirits declare they can enter cylinder sidewise through the c board walls, but are prevented fr rising or sinking through the m disks, and are thus confined for time being. After a long series experiments the two doctors anno that the "man-force," or disembod spirit, has a density equal to tha air, a volume of fifty-two litres, an average weight of sixty-se grams. They also declare that "man-force" is charged with electri and is composed of a hitherto u tected gas. It is not eternal, state, but lasts usually about an dred years after death, ultimately composing gradually. Acting u the close supervision of a disembod person, one of the investigators modeled in clay a figure of a "m force" as it would appear if visi The figure is a very uncanny app ance and consists merely of a h shoulders, and breast, terminatin a point like a balloon. The hea hairless and has no ears, while other features have the vague appe ance presented by a snow-man du a sharp thaw.

JAPANESE SUPERSTITION THE ANCESTRAL GHOSTS

Each Home Has Its Godshelf Where Are Enshrined the Tablets of the Dead

In an article by Dr. J. Ingram Bryan in the "Japan Magazine," there is an interesting glimpse of Japanese superstition. He says the happiness of the dead depends on the respectful and loving service of the living; and the happiness of the living depends on the due fulfilment of pious duty to the dead. That the dead need affection, and that to neglect them is cruelty, are among the most sacred instincts of Japanese life. Accordingly, each home has its family altar, its god-shelf, where are enshrined the ancestral tablets, before which, every morning and evening, the sacred lamp is lighted, the family prayers said, and food offered to the spirits of the departed ones. The ancestral ghosts are made happy by these amenities and bless those who render them. Hovering unseen in the glow of the shrine-lamp, the stirring of whose flame is but the motion of them, they guard the home and watch over the welfare of the old domestic circle. Their chief dwelling-place, however, is in the lettered tablets which at times they can animate as a human body in order to succor and observe all that happens in the house, share the family joys and sorrows, and delight in the familiar voices and in the geniality of life about them. They chiefly delight in the daily greetings of the family, and for nourishment vapor of food contents them. To forget them, or in any way to treat them with rude indifference, is the most undoubted proof of an evil heart. They stand for the moral experience of the family and nation, and to deny them is to deny that, and to violate that is to offend them, and to offend them is the supreme crime. Each Japanese believes himself to be under the constant supervision of the ancestral ghosts. Spirit eyes are watching his every act; spirit ears are listening to every word, to approve or blame. The whole of life, its thoughts, words, deeds, must be under constant control, as in the presence of the unseen. If while in the flesh a Japanese fails, he can succeed by joining the ranks of the gods. This voluntary death for a great principle meets the approval of Japanese ethics, and the spirit of the person so offering himself attains to godhood, becomes the object of veneration, and is not only made eternally happy by the perpetual homage of all future generations, but is enabled to bless posterity by answering the petitions of those engaged in the cause for which he died. Even a person of no importance may, through death, come into the possession of superhuman power, and become capable of conferring benefit or inflicting injury by supernatural means. Thousands of prayers go up daily in Japan to the spirits of those who have thus offered themselves in sacrifice to the gods. Since the death of General and Countess Nogi thousands have likewise flocked to worship at their tombs.

WHAT IS A LADY?

Anglo-Indian Novelist Propounds a Interesting Question in England

Unless one has visited England one will find it difficult to understand the interest created there by a question raised by Mrs. Perrin, the Anglo-Indian novelist.

Mrs. Perrin spoke at the Savage Club ladies' dinner, and, in the course of her speech, tried to answer the old conundrum "What is a lady." Now, nearly every woman in England would like to be a lady, though quite a number of British men do not yearn to be gentlemen; and yet nobody really seems to know what a lady is. Definitions there are in plenty, but none of them are satisfactory. Here, for instance, are a few:

A lady is a woman who keeps two servants and a toy dog.

A lady is a woman who can faint when required.

And this last is, after all, the definition most generally accepted to-day on this side of the Atlantic.

Lessons for Widow Who Daily Absorbs Sensational News

"It's never too late to learn," is a variation of a maxim that Mme. Ortimans has apparently made her own. Mme. Ortimans lives in Liége, she is a widow seventy-one years old, and she has just begun to go to—school.

Madame wanted to learn to read newspapers with the particular object, she says, of reading reports of crimes and accidents.

Her daughter used to read the news to her, but the daughter got married. So, on the advice of a neighbor, she went to the Adults' Commercial School that the world's news—and the police court news—might not be a closed book to her.

The result was surprising. In a few weeks madame made such good progress that she can now read newspapers almost with ease, and, further, she was invited to attend the annual prize distribution because she had made such good progress that she had won a prize.

"I much prefer reading about a murder or an accident in the newspapers to a book of fiction," she said. "I also find the advertisements in the streets very interesting. Before I went to school I often wondered what they were all about, now I read them all."

NO DRINK AT MEALS

Doctor Winslow on Danger of Becoming Fat

Never drink at meals and your figure will remain slim and supple.

This roughly was the advice given at the British Medical Association meeting by Dr. H. F. Winslow, of London.

He emphasized the error of drinking at meals, and said bluntly that nobody—but the pig and the cow—ever took liquid with meals. The result, he said, of taking such drinks was that the body ran to fat.

Too much haircutting was suggested as a cause of baldness by Dr. F. H. Barendt, a Liverpool skin specialist.

"Why is it there are so many bald men and so few bald women," he asked. "I believe it is because men will not let their hair grow to a proper length. The average man wears his hair about an inch long, whereas it should be at least thirteen or fifteen inches."

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment.

"SUFFERERS, FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years [illegible], with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 50c., sample size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Fined Him.

There was no meeting of the Board of Works last night on account of the chairman, Ald. Buller not putting in an appearance. Mayor Bradburn and one or two other Aldermen walked into the Board Room and seeing two reporters there, said "No, we won't do it now, the reporters are here." It is conjectured that the private business to be transacted was to draw up a motion, fining Ald. Buller $55, for not being present.

Lindsay In Films.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Film and Supply Co., of Cleveland, has notified the council that Jos. W. Lakefield Drill Hall

It will be remembered some time ago, that an appropriation was made by the Department of Militia and Defence, for a public building for Lakefield village. The building was intended to serve both as Post Office and drill hall, combined with headquarters for the caretaker. The plans were found however, to be too expensive, and it is understood that new plans are being arranged by the Department. It is altogether likely that Lakefield will become headquarters for a company of militia, and as such will require a suitable drill hall.

Goat Raising.

The Burleigh Ranching Co., of which Mr. R. C. Strickland is manager, has started to raise Angora goats. The first assignments of these passed through Peterborough this week. This company of ranchers, owns and controls a ranch, some 13,000 acres in extent, and speaks well for the enterprise of the individuals, who form the company. The whole of the 13,000 acres are adapted to ranching purposes, and the land is situated in the township of Burleigh. It intends to ship another load of cattle to Toronto during the next few days.

Theft Charge.

Charged with breaking into the summer cottage of Mr. R. J. Kidd, two young men residing near Lakefield, Roland Edwards and Aaron Edwards will appear before Magistrate Edmison on Saturday morning next. The hearing was adjourned a few days ago for the purpose of securing more evidence. The young men are charged with breaking into cottage and removing one "lazy back," one coal oil can with a quantity of coal oil, one wash basin, one tin pail, one trawling line and other fishing tackle. The information states that the cottage was entered on August 1st.

Cheese Board.

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie cleaned up the Cheese Board offerings yesterday morning of 1841 boxes, at 12⅞c. The market has been slipping back a little during the past ten days or more and although it made temporary gains, it gradually eased off. Mr. Morton opened at 12½c and Mr. Watkins raised to 12 13-16c. Mr. Gillespie made it 12⅞c, and none of the buyers showed any inclination of raising him and he was given first selection, taking the entire offering. An adjournment was made for two weeks.

POLICE COURT NEWS

In the Police Court yesterday morning a charge of seduction preferred against Garnet Innis was dismissed.

A more serious charge must be faced by Innis on Thursday, Oct. 16. In the meantime the young man has his liberty, the bail bonds having been renewed and accepted.

Before Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning, the young girl whom it is alleged was wronged by Innis, and also her mother gave evidence, but in the opinion of his worship the evidence was not sufficient to show that Innis' relations with the girl were the outcome of his promise to marry her. The girl is 17 years of age.

The court room was closed to the "public."

James Wallace was charged with creating a disturbance in his mother's house on Tuesday evening. He was arrested by P. C. [illegible] after he had attempted to run away. The court imposed a fine of $[illegible] to be paid forthwith.

Roy Allison admitted being under the influence of liquor while in charge of a horse and vehicle. He was fined two dollars and costs.

A HAPPY CHILD IN JUST A FEW HOURS

When cross, constipated or if feverish give "California Syrup of Figs" then don't worry

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Mann of Bridgenorth spent Sunday the guest of Mrs. S. Nichols.

Rev. Mr. Bryant of Lindsay preached the anniversary services in the Baptist Church on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Johnson is at present in Amherst, N.S., attending the meeting of the General Board of Missions of the Methodist Church.

Mr. T. H. Amys spent a few days in Toronto last week.

Mrs. D. Millar of Peterborough, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Graham.

Mr. Geo. Newbury, of Regina, Sask. spent a few days in the village last week visiting friends.

Miss Hattie Kiss of Fraserville, is visiting in the village and vicinity.

LATEST FROM APSLEY

At the age of 5 months, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Leon passed away Saturday morning, 4th inst. Funeral took place Sunday at 2 p.m.; service at the home, by Rev. Jas. A. Prosser, and a short service at the cemetery, Rev. C. Lord officiating. The parents have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in the loss of their child.

The weather is still warm and no rain despite the warning we had in the summer by fires. Several farmers have been firing their fallows and fears are entertained that there will be more trouble.

Mr. Knox and a friend are up again in connection with canal business.

Mrs. Ribbins and party from Pittsburgh, arrive the other day and went down to her cottage, Jack's Lake, where she intends spending a few weeks.

Dickson Davidson, of the P.L.Co. passed through Apsley this week on his way to the camps.

The Methodist Church has been reinforced by two iron rods through the center, as there was some fears of a collapse, but it is own quite safe.

Mr. T. Mellmoyle has finished the verandah for Mrs. D. Brown's house and store, and is now painting them. They add much to the appearance of both buildings.

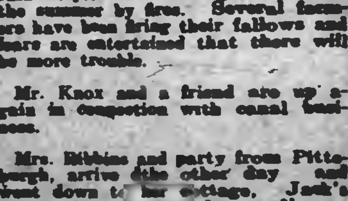
OTONABEE FALL FAIR SUCCESS

The annual fall exhibition of the Otonabee Agricultural Society took place yesterday in Keene, and scored a big success. The day was an ideal one, the result being that probably never before had so many people gathered in the show grounds as were present yesterday. Many motored from Peterborough and surrounding villages, while steamers ran excursions bringing large numbers from points on Rice Lake.

The Alnwick Indian band were present and enlivened the proceedings. A Scottish piper dressed in full Highland costume added variety to the musical program.

The entries were more numerous than usual, the various departments being fairly well represented. Some fine horses and cattle were exhibited, while inside exhibits were fairly good.

The directors of the society have every reason to feel satisfied with the results of their labours.



FEDERALS KILLED REBELS WOUNDED

In Pursuance of Instructions Mexicans Shoot Man Who Lost His Leg

Vera Cruz, Oct. 8. — A report on affairs at the Capital brought by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge D'Affaires at the United States Embassy in Mexico City, was laid before John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson in an over-night conference. It was said that he brought no roseate picture of conditions at the capital, but reported assurances from the National Palace that fair elections would be held and early pacification of the country accomplished.

A number of mining men who arrived here to-day from the State of Durango assert that the Federal troops there have been acting with far more humanity than the rebels. They say that in pursuance of their instructions the federal soldiers kill all wounded rebels and that one man was dragged from the hospital immediately after one of his legs had been amputated and was placed before a firing squad and executed.

In the coast country to the south of Vera Cruz the federal soldiers have been ordered not to take any prisoners and it is reported that this order is to be extended to the State of Vera Cruz to-day. Rebel activity is reported to have greatly increased in the vicinity of Texistlan in the State of Puebla where an American mining concern has its headquarters. A force of rebels who lately attacked the town and were repulsed are said to have received fresh supplies of ammunition. From other portions of the same State minor uprisings are reported.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"LAND OF GOLDEN DREAMS"

Arrangements were completed with the Ladies of St. John's Church and Colonel F. Bragg, to give four performances of The "Land of Golden Dreams" at The Grand Opera House, Peterborough, in November. That beautiful popular, spectacular operetta was dramatized by Miss D. Hope Leonard, and is under the personal management of Col. J. F. Bragg, of New York City. This famous fairy tale is well adapted for song and scenic effects, and the remarkable success of the production in the leading cities assures for it a long run in this country.

In addition to the principal characters, about three hundred and fifty local people, from five to thirty, are required. These will be carefully selected by a committee. It is said that the groupings, dances, specialties, as well as the numerous funny and odd characters, electrical and calcium effects are very beautiful.

The costumes and properties are supplied by Col. Bragg and the stage is personally supervised by Miss D. Hope Leonard and her corps of assistants. It seems superfluous to enumerate the characters in the production as we are informed that all are introduced as portrayed by Miss Leonard in her book. The Ladies of St. John's Church will doubtless realize a substantial sum to add to its treasury.

Among the many captivating stories for children, none is so popular as the beautiful fairy tale of The "Land of Golden Dreams" by Miss Leonard. Almost every mother and every child is now familiar with the strange and beautiful dreams of Willie and Tillie, but it is not until recently that this charming story has been set to music and dramatized. The operetta seems destined to become as famous as the story under the skilful direction of the dramatiser, Miss D. Hope Leonard, and the able management of Col. John F. Bragg, of New York City, who have been engaged in presenting grand spectacular production in the principal cities and theatres during the past ten seasons. The production is magnificently staged and requires from one hundred and fifty to three hundred and fifty people to assist the principals in presenting the various scenes portrayed by the author.

WILL CANADA KEEP DUTY ON WHEAT

Conservative Paper's Report From Ottawa Indicates No Change

London, Ont., Oct. 8.—A despatch from Ottawa to the London Free Press, the Conservative paper here, says:

"An official statement on the subject is not forthcoming and is not to be expected at this state, but all the probabilities are against the Government making wheat free at the next session of Parliament and thus availing itself of the American market for Canadian wheat under the Underwood-Wilson tariff.

"It may be predicted that the Government will carefully study and observe the workings of the new tariff before deciding either to accept or reject the countervailing provision replete with the arrangements for handling the Canadian crop and the inequality of prices in the two markets, at present in favor of Canada. There is no substantial demand of the Government to make wheat free.

ALBERTA'S MINES MOST NUMEROUS

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—Figures received at the Mines Department here today show that the province of Alberta has the greatest number of coal mines in the Dominion. The total number at present opened up is 355, while Nova Scotia which is first in value of output, has only eighteen, the reason offered is that the coal lies so close to the surface in the province of Alberta that the farmers can dig up the coal on their farms and these are classified as coal mines. However a rapid increase is being made also in the value of the output in the Province of Alberta.

While in 1905 the value was $690,000 in 1912 it was $3,466,349. But the Province of Nova Scotia is yet first, having a value for 1912 of $6,862,000.

THREE KILLED BY CHURCH WORKER

Liverpool, Oct. 8.—A fit of religious mania to-day caused a youthful church worker here, William McDonald to run amuck with a loaded revolver with which he shot dead three of his fellow church workers and then committed suicide.

McDonald seems to have drawn up his programme with deliberation. He paid a round of visits to the residences of his colleagues in the church work about midnight, and shot them down in turn, afterwards battering their bodies with a bludgeon.

Apparently there was no witness of the series of tragedies, and the only evidence found besides the dead bodies was nearly empty revolver and a bloody bludgeon clasped in McDonald's hands when his body was discovered.

CANALS OF CANADA ARE TO BE IN FUTURE OF UNIFORM DEPTH

Minister of Railways Gets Ready for Time When Canadian Canal at Soo Must be Equal in Size to the New Welland

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—In carrying out its great national transportation policy which is one of the big planks in the Government's platform it is announced that arrangements have been made for appropriating land at Sault Ste. Marie for the construction of a new canal. Hon. Frank Cochrane has with wise foresight prepared for the future by thus securing the necessary property. If he had waited until plans were all ready, buildings would probably be erected on the needed property, increasing the price by many thousands.

New Canal.

It is the intention to build at the Soo a canal of the same depth as the new Welland a large portion of which is now under contract. In an address delivered recently at Sault Ste. Marie, Hon. Frank Cochrane pointed out that if the New Welland was to be of the greatest use to Canada the remainder of the waterwats system must also be improved. It is evidently the plan of the Government not only to build at the Soo a canal of the same size as the Welland, but also to deepen the St. Lawrence canals so that all will be equal in facility and also for handling the greatly expanding Canadian trade.

Splendid Waterway.

When the bold scheme of Mr. Cochrane is carried out Canada will have a waterway from the ocean to Port William and Port Arthur that the largest ocean freighters can navigate. Wheat can be loaded direct at the head of the lakes and be sent to Liverpool and the European market without unloading as now at the lake ports, Kingston or Montreal.

Must Be Uniform.

The new Welland is being given a depth of 21 feet, which can be increased by four feet without rebuilding the locks, so that this waterway is eventually intended to accommodate vessels of 25 feet draught or equal to many of the large liners now plying between Montreal and Liverpool. At the present Welland was too shallow to accommodate the upper lake boats so the present Soo until rebuilt would be too shallow to accommodate the lower lake boats built to take advantage of the deep channel in the New Welland.

The aim of the Government in this ambitious project as in the whole of its national transportation policy is to keep the whole of Canadian trade as much as possible in Canadian channels. During the season of 1912 over 126,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain passed Sault Ste. Marie canals eastward bound. All but a small fraction of this was unloaded at Lake Huron or Lake Erie ports. The quantity carried through the present Welland Canal with its 14 foot channel did not exceed two or three million bushels. Half of the Canadian grain for export went out by way of Buffalo and New York. If ocean going vessels were able to ascend to the head of the lakes, there would be no necessity for such breaking of cargo. The trade would be kept in Canadian channels with cheaper rates for the west.

Canada's High Credit

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The splendid state of Canada's credit in the old land is shown by the high price at which Canada's recent loan was underwritten in London this week. The loan for £3,000,000 which Hon. W. T. White floated brought 99 which is two points higher than the securities of any other overseas Dominions have been bought.

Of this figure £1,700,000 will be used to pay off a Laurier government loan which falls due this month. The remainder of the money will be used for the general works of the Dominion. No other loans will fall due now until 1919.

LABOR AND CAPITAL LOCKED IN A LIFE AND DEATH STRUGGLE

A Struggle Without Equal in the History of Conflict Between Interests and the Working People—Men, Women, and Children are Starving

Dublin, Oct. 9.—A merciless struggle is now going on in Ireland between organized capital and organized labor.

One hundred thousand hollow-eyed women and children, wives, sons and daughters of the workingmen of Dublin, are starving. Little ones cry with hunger, and women in hopeless dejection, grow faint and sicken and die. The men, most of them, will live, not because they can secure food, but by virtue of a grim determination to fight on till capital concedes better working conditions.

Capital has organized to battle union labor in Ireland once and for all. Fifty million pounds sterling is available to protect the vested interests of capital until these men and women are crushed and conquered.

Civilization has never witnessed a more uncompromising and brutal spectacle. Nothing more dramatic has been witnessed in modern times than the loading of ships with food bought with union labor funds for the succor of the Dublin strikers.

BUILDING SHIPS HERE WOULD NOT MEAN FIRST AID

High Authority on Naval Construction Absolutely Confirms Conservative Contention

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The contention of the Government that the building of warships in Canada would be too costly for the present, is borne out by the opinion of Sir Philip Watts, K.C.B., adviser on naval construction to the British Admiralty since 1912. No higher naval authority could be cited and he stated that warships of the larger kind could not be built in Canada as quickly or cheaply as they are turned out in England. For immediate construction, it is evident that the Borden opinion is upheld.

Not Only Thing.

Building of the ships, however, he remarked would not be the only thing that would have to be taken into consideration. There would be the machinery to build and instal, and the most important item of arming the ships when completed. At present Canada has not the facilities to do either of these things, he claimed.

It may be expected that some Canadian expert in the [illegible] of Parliament may rise up in his wisdom and condemn the statements of Sir Philip Watts. The country saw such spectacles last session and are now tired of it.

FEARED MASSACRE OF 175 SPANIARDS

Mexico City, Oct. 9.—Private despatches here tend to confirm rumors current last night, of a great massacre of Spaniards by the rebels, after the capture of Torreon. Advices are that there was a slaughter of 175 Spaniards in the city.

Besides Spaniards there are a number of French and Germans residing in Torreon. Their diplomatic representatives, here are making efforts to learn their fate.

The rebels are said to be headed by Francisco Villa. They are said to have swooped down unexpectedly, the last of September, on Federals evacuating after [illegible] about 1,200 rifles for which there was no more [illegible].

Every effort has been made by the authorities here to keep the news of the affair from the public.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Unsettled and a little cooler.

PANAMA CANAL IS COMPLETED

President Wilson Will Press Button To-day—Oceans Will Meet.

Washington, Oct. 9.—President Wilson at two o'clock to-morrow will press a button and flash to the works on the Isthmus of Panama the signal to blow up the last barrier between the two oceans. Arrangements for this, the final act in the construction of the canal, were announced here today. The temporary dam which is to be destroyed will let water into the Culebra cut.

VIEWS ON STATE OWNED CABLE

London, Oct. 9.—The Yorkshire Post says that Postmaster-General Samuel's conferences with Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Canadian P.M.G., at Ottawa, have led to Mr. Samuel modifying his view regarding the expense of laying a State-owned cable. He is now inclined to meet the proposals of Australia and New Zealand.

TO OBSERVE ALL FOREIGN PLEDGES

New Chinese President Promises to be Friendly to Europe

Pekin, China, Oct. 9.—The friendly intentions of the Chinese Government toward foreign interests wil, be strongly emphasized in President Yuan Shi Kai's message to Parliament on the occasion of his inauguration to-morrow. On this subject he will say:

"The attitude of the foreign powers towards us has always been that of peace and fairness, and they have given us cordial assistance whenever the occasion arose. This, of course, is due to the civilization of the world, yet, all the same, we highly appreciate the good will of the friendly powers. It is most important for all citizens of the Chinese Republic clearly to understand this and to endeavor to strengthen international friendships.

"With sincerity I hereby declare that all treaties conventions, and other engagements entered into by the former Manchu and Provisional Republic Governments with foreign Governments shall be strictly observed, and that all contracts duly concluded by former Chinese Governments with foreign companies and individuals shall also be strictly observed.

"Further, I declare that all rights, privileges, and immunities enjoyed by foreigners in China by virtue of international engagements, national enactments and established usages are hereby confirmed.

"This declaration I make with the view of maintaining international amity and peace."

PROMISE ULSTER CONSIDERATION

Winston Churchill Declares That Claim Cannot be Ignored

Dundee, Scotland, Oct. 9.—"The claim of North-east Ulster for special consideration is a claim which, if advanced with sincerity and not as a wrecking manoeuvre, cannot be ignored without full consideration" by any Government dependent upon the present House of Commons," was the statement made by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, addressing his constituents last night. He reaffirmed that nothing would deter the Government from carrying through the Home Rule bill as planned, and doing its duty in upholding the law and suppressing disorders by whomsoever fomented.

Mr. Churchill whose speech was keenly anticipated as a declaration of the Government's policy, added that in the natural course of events a general election would occur before any legislation could be passed by the Irish Parliament, and, in the event of the transference of power, it would be open to the opponents of the bill to repeal it. That was their only constitutional remedy so long as they opposed settlement by agreement.

In the latter part of nis speech Mr. Church made what is regarded as an overture to Ulster.

Expediency Has Won.

The Irish Times says: "Earl Loreburn's appeal to the nation showed that some at least af the leaders of the Liberal party realized the facts of the situation in Ulster, and were hesitating between statesmanship and expediency. Mr. Churchill's speech shows that expediency has won."

The Daily Express of Dublin says: "It is obvious that the Liberal party are in great distress for the success of the ill-fated measure. Mr. Churchill's speech will not make its passage any easier. Threats and cajolery are merely wasted on Ulster Unionists, and Mr. Churchill must have made poor use of his famous visit to Belfast if he is still under any illusion as to the stern determination to resist the measure at all costs."

Other Unionist Papers Criticise.

Several English Unionist papers are less conciliatory than the Daily Mail. The Standard finds Mr. Churchill's speech disappointing, and the Daily Graphic finds his talk of concessions waste words, because the Ulster opposition is not against the details of the bill, but its principle.

On the other hand the Pall Mall Gazette, which gave Sir Edward Carson's legions an amplitude of commendatory notices, expressing astonishment that its Unionist contemporaries regard the speech as uncompromising. The Gazette declares the speech deliberately lays down a basis af negotiations.

TO STAMP OUT TUBERCULOSIS

Edmonton, Oct. 9.—The Alberta legislature this afternoon passed a resolution authorizing the government to memorialize the federal minister of agriculture to take steps towards the eradication of tuberculosis in cattle.

"There have been many complaints and up to the present," said Hon. Duncan Marshall, "no action had been taken to prevent the spread of the disease further than supplying the farmers who make requests, with tuberculin."

SPHINX ARRIVES FROM EGYPT

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—A sphinx, carved from a solid block of red granite and weighing twelve tons, arrived here from Suez for the University of Pennsylvania.

The figures bears a likeness of the head of Rameses II. and is the largest ancient Egyptian monument brought to this country except the obelisk Cleopatra's Needle.

MRS. PANKHURST READY FOR U. S.

Her Visit Will be Fruitful for Cause of Woman Suffrage—No Trouble

Paris, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, has made all her preparations for departing for New York on board the Provence from Havre on Saturday. She says she feels physically equal to her American campaign, having benefited much from her sojourn with her daughter Christobel, who will travel with her to Havre to see her on board ship. Mrs. Pankhurst said to-day:

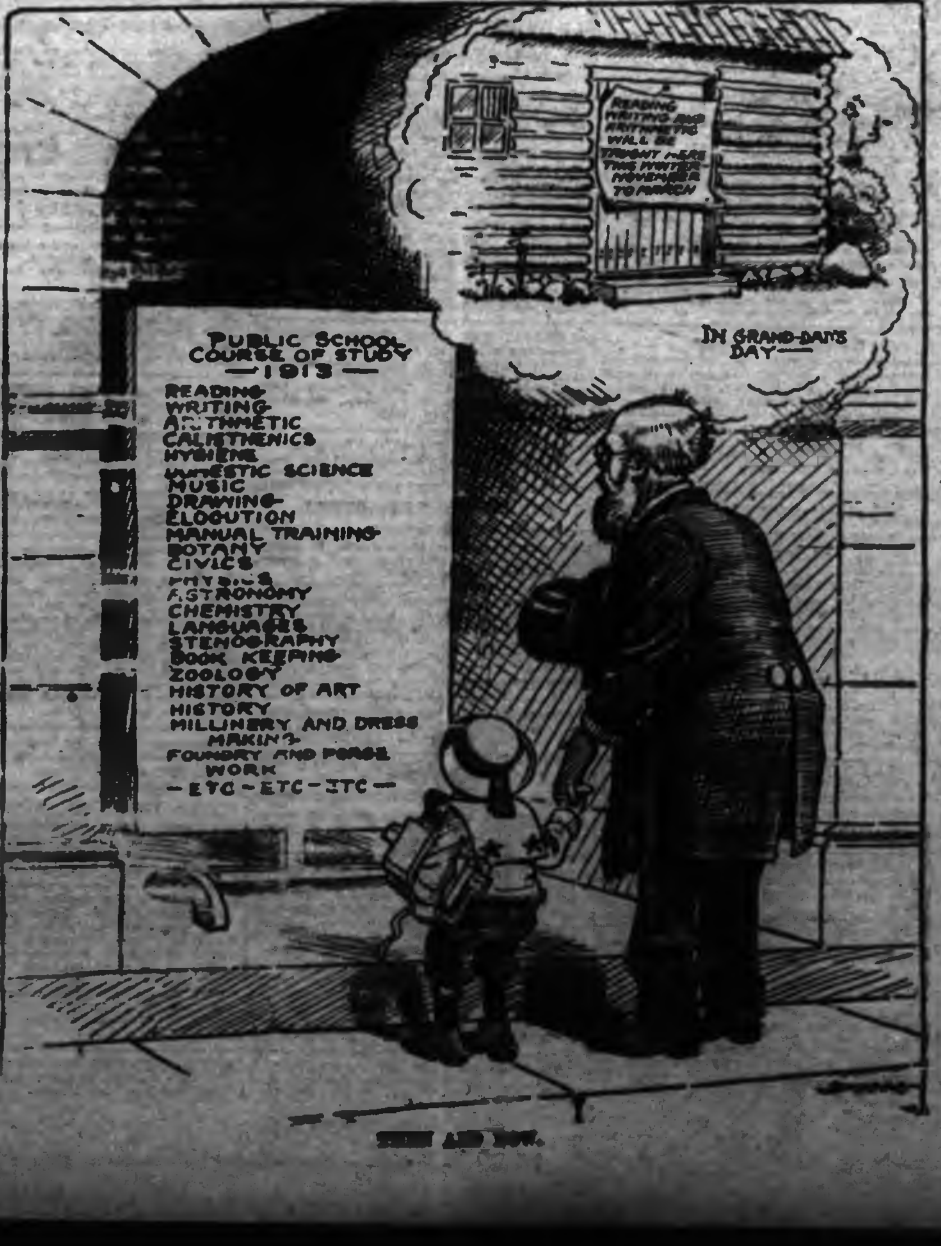
"I look forward with delight to my American visit which will be fruitful for the suffrage cause. I haven't received a word from there indicating that the New York port authorities will raise the least obstacle to my entrance. How could they? The British authorities did not interfere with my last two entries in England. They knew I was coming to the continent, and are quite willing that I should go to America. On technical grounds I am assured there can be no hindrance to my visiting the United States. The only opposition is raised by opponents of woman suffrage."

The Way of Women

Home study for Tommy had just begun, and he found it hard to apply himself to regular hours. At bedtime one evening his father said:

"Tommy, I am not at all pleased with the report your mother gives me of your conduct today."

"No, father, I knowed you wouldn't be, and I told her so. But she went right ahead an' made th' report. Just like a woman, ain't it?"



THEN AND NOW.

GIBSON WILL BE SENT TO KINGSTON PEN ON WEDNESDAY

Will be Given a Chance to Identify Red Wilson in the Meantime—Lennox Will Use Provincial Force

Toronto, Oct. 9.—Following a conference with Charles Gibson in his cell, T. Herbert Lennox, K.C., announced this afternoon that the man named "Red" Wilson would be taken before Gibson to-morrow to see if the accused would identify him as being in the party the night of the murder.

Gibson said he would know the man. "I will know him," he said, "the man I mean had a gold tooth."

Providing the present plans of the authorities are carried out, Charles Gibson will be taken to Kingston Penitentiary on Wednesday to commence his life imprisonment on his conviction as the murderer of Joseph Rosenthal. City Sheriff Mowat had planned to send the young man down on Saturday morning, but agreed to Mr. T. Herbert Lennox's request, when the latter declared it would be necessary to keep in touch with him for the next few days.

Mr. Lennox left for the jail early this afternoon to consult with Gibson, thereby taking the first step in the fight to gain the complete freedom of the young man. The first move towards securing a new trial will be made when a man named "Rd" Wilson, who has already been questioned by the city police, will face Gibson in his cell. The convicted slayer will be asked to identify him. Following Gibson's statement that there were others in the party the night Rosenthal met his death the defence will devote their efforts to locating these missing men. Wilson satisfied the police in his examination at the detective office that he had had absolutely no connection with the affair.

As far as can be learned, Charles Gibson was sleeping peacefully in his cell at the hour previously set for his execution.

"He'll brace up completely now," said Governor Chambers.

Young Gibson still strenuously protests his innocence in an interview with his father and mother lasting three quarters of an hour.

"I will bear up as well as I can," he said, "but I am suffering for a wrong I never did."

Reads a Great Deal.

During the long weary hours he has had to occupy the tiny death cell Gibson has spent a good deal of his time reading. He likes magazines, and his father said, takes an interest in the Bible.

"Charlie was considerably cheered by the news that his sentence was commuted," declared Rev. John McNeill. "The night before had been the most miserable he had ever had in his life. I saw him just before I left for Ottawa, so that I could tell the Cabinet his last declaration. Gibson told me 'I didn't do it myself, and I don't know who did do it.' He was sure he did not murder Rosenthal and he would not implicate anyone else. I believe him implicitly. I do not believe he had either the physical or mental strength to commit the crime."

Mr. McNeill said that Gibson wanted his gratitude conveyed to the public. He said he was thankful for what had been done for him. Gibson's father is at present preparing a statement to the public.

"Gibson hopes he will soon be cleared of the charge and is pinning his fa th on that."

EMPEROR OWNS A RESTAURANT

Berlin, Oct. 9.—Emperor William is revealed as a restaurant proprietor for the first time by the Vossische Zeitung, which credits him with the ownership of a small cafe and restaurant near the historic mill of Sans Souci at Potsdam.

A former restaurant at the same place had been removed to improve the gardens of the palace, but the Emperor, on the protest of Potsdam people, had a new restaurant built near it, renting it cheaply to the former steward of his domestic staff. The Emperor emphasized one condition, namely: that the place should serve "the best coffee in Potsdam."

On his early morning walks, the Emperor often enters his own cafe and gets a glass of sherry and some biscuits, over which he discusses the progress of the business.

AWFUL STORY OF ILLTREATMENT TO A CHILD ON SHERBROOKE ST.

Mrs. Billington, Sherbrooke St. Narrowly Escaped Being Tarred and Feathered by A Mob of 150 People Last Night

For some time past the police have received complaints from residents on Sherbrooke street, near the boundary about the alleged ill treatment, by Mrs. Billington, who had custody of the Ruby Billington who figured before the public prominently in the Samuel Steele case, of another young child, by name Payne, aged about 10 years, whom she also had under her care. It appears this treatment has been going on for some considerable time, and the anger of the neighbours knew no bounds.

Last night, about 7.30, it was noticed by neighbours, this cruel treatment was again going on, and upon investigation it was asserted, that the named Mrs. Billington had had the child tied to a bed by its wrists, and had been beating it with the buckle end of a heavy leather strap. This incited the neighbours, and the authorities were telephoned for, and Detective Newhall, accompanied by Mr. Geo. Cochrane and Mr. Henry from the Children's Shelter went to investigate. A Times reporter heard of the trouble and also wandered in that vicinity. Upon arrival, a scene which almost gave one the impression of civil war, met his gaze. A crowd of 150 people had gathered round the house, and were calling for vengeance, resenting the treatment they knew was going on. For some minutes the reporter stood there, and noticed the rage in the crowd growing every second. At last it broke, and the cry went up "Tar and feather her." This act would a minute later have been perpetrated, but the timely arrival of the aforementioned officers prevented the ultimate. This crowd consisted not of a gang of "toughs," who wanted to make mischief, but some of our well known citizens were noticed voicing their consternation in the highest possible degree. Mr. Henry took charge of the child, and conveyed it to the Children's Shelter, where proper treatment in every respect is assured.

When it comes to the sort of citizens of such fearful perpetrations as this, action needs to be taken, and The Times is doubtless voicing the sentiments of many in saying that no punishment is too great. Mrs. Billington may think herself lucky she did not get [illegible] and feathered.

PREMIER McBRIDE FOR OTTAWA NEXT

London, Oct. 9.—Premier McBride, who sails on the Laurentic on Saturday, says the first business in Canada he will attend to will be the interprovincial conference at Ottawa on the 27th. In view of the suggestion of British Columbia contemplating a fresh loan, Sir Richard McBride was asked whether the chief object of his visit was finance. He replied: "No, not particularly finance. My chief concern has been our new and other Canadian centres in the West End and overlooking the plans." The fact that British Columbia is arranging a separate building close to the C.P.R., Grand Trunk, Allan Line and other Canadian centre in the West End must gravely militate against Earl Grey's all-Canada building scheme, further east at Aldwich.

FOR BUSY HOUSEWIVES

To prevent wooden pails or tubs from shrinking when not in use, paint them over with glycerine.

Fine oatmeal is the best cosmetic known. Put a teaspoonful into the water when washing your face.

Coarse salt sprinkled on the floor occasionally before sweeping is said to be a good preventive of moths.

When beating chairs or sofas, cover first with a damp cloth, and the dust will adhere to the cloth and not rise in the room.

Ginger poultices are as efficacious as mustard, and will not blister. They are made in the same way as mustard poultices.

To stop the bleeding of a cut apply finely-powdered rice or flour to the wound. If soft soap is to be had it will ease the pain of a burn at once.

Those who suffer from unduly moist hands in warm weather should bathe them frequently in warm water to which a little alum or vinegar has been added.

For tired and aching feet, bathe the feet daily in warm water, and after drying, rub well with methylated spirit and dust with starch and zinc powder.

Peppermint has a great power of staying hunger. If one has to go without a meal, the eating of a peppermint is like taking a tonic. It quite removes the hunger sensation.

To sweeten rancid butter, melt the butter, skim it, then place a piece of light brown toast in it, and in a few minutes the toast will have absorbed the unpleasant taste and smell.

When making pies in warm weather fill a bottle with ice water and use it for a rolling pin. The pastry will be delicate and flaky. A smooth, round bottle should, of course, be chosen.

Gilt on china will not last long if soda be used in the washing of it; therefore use soapy water for washing teacups, etc., patterned with gilt, and keep soda carefully away from them.

The best way to warm up a joint is to wrap it in thickly-greased paper and keep it covered while in the oven. By having it covered thus the steam will prevent the meat from becoming hard and dry, and the joint will get hot through in less time.

In warming a steamed pudding, or in steaming a stale cake, never put the article on a plate or a flat dish. Place the pudding in a colander in the steamer, and you will be surprised to find how much lighter and more delicate the pudding will be than if a plate had been used for the moisture to settle on and make the pudding soggy.

To cleanse and purify your coffee pot from the persistent mustiness, put into it a good quantity of common wood ashes and nearly fill it up with cold water. Let it boil a short time, then set aside to cool, after which the inside should be thoroughly washed and scrubbed in hot soapsuds. Then scald twice and dry thoroughly, set out in the sun, and air.

WHIPS THE FOOD IN A JAR

Great Speed of the Wire Whips Secured With Very Little Effort

A good food whip is an essential to the modern kitchen and the one shown in the accompanying cut is a new one which has been recently invented and the chief claim for it is its extreme simplicity of construction which makes it very easy to clean. In fact all the parts being nickel plated it is merely necessary to hold in the stream of water from the kitchen tap and all particles will be washed off.

In operation it is only necessary to move the handle up and down the spiral spindle at a moderate rate and this is sufficient to revolve the wire whips in the jar with a rapid motion which acts very quickly on the contents of the jar.

It is suitable for a great many purposes, and the operation taking place inside a covered jar, there is no possibility of splashing the material around and wasting it as in the case in an open vessel.

Great Garage Opened.

What is claimed to be the largest garage in the world was opened at Willesden Green, London. The garage can accommodate 145 motor omnibuses, and 800 men are employed in connection with the establishment. Altogether 60,000 superficial feet of land were acquired, the buildings occupying 50,031 feet.

DURAZZO ONCE GREAT

Seaport Occupied by Servians Was Important City Many Centuries Ago

Durazzo, the Albanian port which attracted international attention on account of its occupation by the Servians in opposition to the wishes of the Austrians, is just such an outlet to the sea as the Servians long coveted. As a Turkish port it has been badly run down in the last quarter of a century, for the railway from Salonica to Mitrovitza had diverted much of the trade that it once controlled in the interior of the country southward to the Aegean. The harbor is filled with big rocks—if we are to trust the stories of some of the Albanian patriots the Turks dumped them there purposely to ruin the harbor—and it has become silted up. Steamers stop there twice a week, and carry away olive oil, cotton and fruits, which are abundantly produced on the rich lands of the neighborhood.

Durazzo was a port more than six centuries before the Christian era, and became a populous and important city. When the Romans came they didn't like the sound of its ancient name, Epidamnus—and they changed it to Dyrrachium, which time and later occupants corrupted to its present name. It was the beginning of a Roman road southward along the coast and of the great military road via Egnatia, running through to Salonica and the Hellespont. It has been the scene of much strife, and Slavs, Normans and Venetians had been masters of its port before the Turks took it in 1501. An earthquake destroyed Durazzo in 1273, and the only traces of its ancient buildings are in broken columns and marbles where the city once stood.

The city, which was formerly an island, is joined to the mainland by a huge marsh, over which is built a bridge 750 feet long. Durazzo is scarcely more than a shadow of its former self. The old walls are dilapidated, plane trees grow on the ruins of the ancient Byzantine citadel and many of the Roman remains, funeral slabs, columns and inscriptions have been smashed up by the Turkish Government to build a road projecting out into the bay.

STEERED WITH HIS FEET

Thrilling details of a voyage from Falmouth to Rio de Janeiro in a small steam tug were told when Captain J. W. Carver, the master of the boat, returned to England by the steamer Orita.

The tug, of only four tons register, was built at Falmouth for towing lighter barges out to steamers calling at Rio. When within nineteen miles of Cape Finisterre the full force of a gale was encountered.

"It was one of the worst gales I have ever been through," said the captain. "Nine days after leaving Falmouth we shipped one gigantic wave, which carried away the wheel shelter, wrecked the only compass we possessed, and smashed the wheel. The second engineer had four fingers taken away, the man at the wheel had his ribs badly injured, and one of the crew sustained a fractured thigh.

"At last we got to Brest. During the voyage I was kept at the partly repaired wheel steering with my feet for three days and nights. The only food I could get consisted of a few biscuits which were handed up to me. Within a week I began the second voyage without my chief officer and with a foreign crew. The old crew had gone below, so I locked them in, and told them it was a case of 'no work, no food.' I did allow them one biscuit each day. Within thirty miles of Pernambuco the fuel again gave out, but we were sighted by the Spanish mail boat Luis Vives, and their vessel towed us a ton of coal, which carried us into the port.

"I got twenty-two tons of coal, but lost my second crew by desertion, but as the men who had previously refused to work also got ashore, the crew and I navigated the tug to St. Vincent, where we obtained another crew of lads, all foreigners, none of whom had ever been to sea before. We got to Pernambuco, and arrived safely at Rio de Janeiro eleven weeks after leaving Falmouth."

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

The Pierpont Morgan estate has paid as an inheritance tax the lump sum of $2,500,000 and already the Tammy tiger is caressing it fondly.

The Globe says that "the styles of women are being carried to extremes," but not to extremities.

The bride of former King Manuel left him before a week of connubial bliss was over, which shows that he has no better luck in keeping a wife than a throne.

It may be said without fear contradiction that a pretty woman is the best man trap ever invented.

A scientist declares that house work does more than anything else to make women beautiful. Now, girls keep that in your minds and get busy helping mamma with the pots and the mop.

The Examiner prints a paragraph to the effect that a leading New York theatre is going to use motion pictures at rehearsals to show actors how they act. Splendid idea. It is the only way to convince some of them that they ought to bale hay.

If Sir Wilfrid goes to East Middlesex, it is doubtful if he will venture to appeal to the people on the grounds that he is a French-Canadian and a Roman Catholic. He is wise enough to keep such statesmanlike suggestion for St. Hyacinthe and the province in which he was born.

Hon. George Foster has successfully terminated the negotiations or an improved steamship service and for reduced cable rates between Canada and the West Indies. In less than a month the new service will be in operation and Canadian producers will be in a position to take advantage of a market whose value has long been recognized by the United States.

The Borden Government is already preparing for the day when a new and greater canal at the Soo will be necessary as part of the deep waterway from the head of the Lakes to the sea. Land is being expropriated now so that there will be no delay and no extra expense when the time comes for the construction of the new canal.

TRADE IS BOOMING.

Official figures given out by Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Customs, show that Canada's trade continues to increase. The total trade for the month of August was $97,742,581 as against $90,022,904 for August, 1912, an increase of $7,709,697. For the first five months of the fiscal year the total trade was $456,223,167 as against $418,659,748 in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of $37,564,919.

The present outlook is that the grand total for the year will be well over a billion dollars and will probably be two hundred millions in excess of last year's high water mark.

During August there was a large increase in agricultural exports. The exports for the month were $13,176,343 as against $8,603,843. Exports of Canadian manufactures are also increasing rapidly. For the month of August the exports of manufactures were $4,911,478 as against $3,170,362 last year. For the five months there was an increase in exports of manufactures of six million dollars, namely from $15,000,000 to $21,000,000.

Imports for the month of August amounted to $57,853,000, of which $39,277,000 represents the value of dutiable and $18,575,000 the value of free foods. Exports for the month were $29,304,000 worth of domestic products and $1,799,000 of foreign.

For the five months' period imports totalled $283,733,000 of which $189,261,000 were of dutiable and $94,672,000 free goods. For the corresponding period of 1912, imports totalled $267,333,000, of which $176,477,000 worth was dutiable and $90,385,000 worth free.

Exports for the five months ended August 31st amounted to $151,356,000, domestic, and $12,221,000 foreign. For the corresponding period of 1912, the exports of domestic products totalled $136,613,000 and of foreign products $7,768,000.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders

In his home at Waldegrove, N. S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Cross, late of the 6th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bully beef, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

NERVE-BREAKING HORNS

We do not wonder at the fact that the infinite variety of the tones of the auto horn has almost proved too much for the nerves of a correspondent. Daily, and we are sorry to say, nightly, the streets resound or the building reverberate with the eldritch shrieks or the far-from sonorous grunts of these modern instruments of nerve torture. Amongst the problems of our own time we know of none more difficult to solve than this one of the motor horn. It would be a fine thing, of course, if all horns could be pitched in one key and not a discordant note were heard throughout the livelong day or the otherwise silent night. But that seems to be impossible, because the task of the horn-maker is to produce the sound that will most effectively warn the unwary that there is a time to skip lively lest a worse thing befall him. No two makers seem to be able to agree upon this point. Neither, apparently, can legislate whose functions are to safeguard the public. They all have tried to come together and have failed. Some hold that the bulb horn, probably the most objectionable of all from the point of view of the individual afflicted with a musical ear, is not sufficient penetrating in its warning. Up to a certain point the electric horn fits in fairly well, but its note, suggesting some monster afflicted with a severe cold, rasps on the nerve of the musical like an electric shock on the sinews. However, it is probably the bloodcurdling yells of the appliances which depend upon the exhaust from the engines for their power of torture that our correspondent principally objects to. There is no doubt that these demons and all their kindred should be throttled. The matter will, we trust, receive the attention of those to whose keeping the comfort of the public is confided.

SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD.

Darling, I am growing old,
Silver threads amongst the gold,
Shine upon my brow today,
Life is fading fast away;
But, my darling, you will be
Always young and fair to me,
Yes, my darling, you will be
Always young and fair to me.

Darling, I am growing, growing old
Silver threads amongst the gold,
Shine upon my brow today,
Life is fading fast away.

When your hair is silver white,
And your cheeks no longer bright.
With the roses of the May
I will kiss your lips and say:
"Oh ! my darling, mine alone, alone,
You have never older grown,
Yes, my darling, mine alone,
You have never older grown."

Love can nevermore grow old,
Locks may lose their brown and gold,
Cheeks may fade and hollow grow,
But the hearts that love will know
Never, never, winter's frost and chill;
Summer warmth is in them still—
Never winter's frost and chill.
Summer warmth is in them still.

Love is always young and fair,
What to us is silver hair,
Faded cheeks or steps grown slow,
To the heart that beats below ?
Since I kissed you mine alone, alone,
You have never older grown;
Since I kissed you, mine alone.
You have never older grown.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see by the Examiner of Wednesday that in the case of [illegible] vs. [illegible], County Attorney Wood appeared for the defence. Now, Sir, this seems to me to be wrong. Is County Attorney Wood going to get the game both coming and going? Why should he nearly always act for the prosecution, but in this case act for the defendant?

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHALLENGE AT MONTCALM A JOKE

Montreal, Oct. 9.—If their constituencies were to take seriously the challenge which Dr. Lafortune, M. P. for Montcalm, flung at Albert Sevigny, M. P. for Dorchester, that each resign to contest Montcalm, no one would be more surprised than these same two M. P's.

Lafortune has been making the same threat for years, and Sevigny, who has heard it for a score of times thought it would do no harm to call the bluff. Mr. Lafortune seemed surprised when Mr. Sevigny accepted the challenge unconditionally, and without a moments hesitation deposited $100 as a pledge of his good faith, while Mr. Lafortune pledged a similar sum. Mr. Lafortune has been famous in past contests for the readiness with which he has thrown down the gauntlet in this manner. In the present case the conditions are regarded as favorable to him as he did not offer to enter Dorchester, but invited the member for that constituency to contest in his country of Montcalm.

After Mr. Sevigny had accepted the terms, a memorandum of agreement was drawn up, and read in the presence of the candidates and the audience. But if the matter ever goes any further the world will be surprised.

POLICE DISTRICT HAS 500 POLICE

New York, Oct. 9:—What is said to New York has ever known will be effected during the next few days by the uprooting of all the policemen in the upper west side tenderloin section, and replacing them with young be the biggest police shakeup which men just out of the public school. The plan of the police Commissioner is to experiment in establishing a model police district.

All of the 500 recruits are under 30 years old.

Commissioner Waldo says they have been taught the necessity of clan, honorable and efficient service.

SPORTS

The Mackmen scored a great victory over the world series opponents at New York Polo Grounds yesterday by defeating the Giants 8—2.

Connie Mack sprang a surprise when he sent the untried youngster, Bush, to do the heaving for his side, and the selection caused quite a stir and a bigger stir still when it was found how ably the young pitcher kept the batsmen down.

Bush was given a chance to peddle his wares against the Giants, and he did it in great form, keeping the husky men down to a margin of 5 hits. A couple of double plays were of great material assistance.

The consecutive hitting was again the feature of the American League champions' attack.

The score was:

Views Taken at the Rate of 100,000 a Second

Prof. Cranz submitted to the German Physical society a machine which allows the taking of pictures at the rate of 100,000 a second. This enormous limit is higher than anything previously done. Machines are on the market which allow pictures taken at the rate of 5,000 a second. Prof. Cranz goes so far as to say that this limit is not fixed, but that the number can still be greatly increased if it is found necessary. SESSION OF LABOR FEDERATION

Brockville, Oct. 9—The Canadian Federation of Labor, which was ordained five years ago, opened its annual convention here yesterday.

In his address President John Moffatt of Glace Bay, N.S., made a strong plea for Canadian sentiment in trades-unionism. He referred to the labor troubles in the coal fields of British Columbia and Nova Scotia and claimed that in the later province the Federation had completely discredited its rival labor organizations.

With regard to the record coal strike in British Columbia, he praised the Provincial and Dominion Government for refusing to listen to anything but the laws of reason in restoring peace among the strikers. He further claimed that the American operators and union were largely responsible for the labor troubles in the Canadian coal fields.

FELL INTO PROFOUND SLEEP WHICH LASTED FOR 32 YEARS

Medical records contain the accounts of many cases where persons have slept for extraordinary periods. Caroline Olsson, a native of Okno, a small island off the coast of Sweden, in 1875, when fourteen years of age, on returning home from school one day, complained of toothache. She was put to bed by her mother, and fell into a profound sleep, which lasted for thirty-two years. Although pricked with pins, she appeared to experience no pain, or even consciousness of the attempts made to awaken her.

Towards the end of 1908, at the age of forty-six, she suddenly awoke. During the whole of that time her sole nourishment is said to have consisted of two cups of milk a day, which were given to her by her attendants. The case was investigated and her complaint was diagnosed as catatonic stupor.

Margaret Lyall, of Dennill, in the parish of Maryton, near Montrose, slept for two days from June 12, 1812, and again from July 1 to August 8 of the same year. During her sleep she was blistered, bled, and immersed in cold water. Needles were thrust under her flesh, and pieces of burnt rag applied to her nose and pins placed under her finger nails. She was even whipped, but nothing could awaken her.

A German Government official named Arnheim had an accident in 1904, and slept for over four years, although every effort was made to awaken him.

Simeon Watson, a hard-working, industrious man, aged about thirty, of athletic habits and active temperament, about 1826 began preaching in his sleep. His trance or sleeping fit invariably lasted as long as the ordinary service which he was in the habit of attending. The attacks became more frequent as time progressed, and he would go through the whole of the ordinary chapel service, praying, reading the Bible, and preaching.

In 1816 a child seven months old, at Pennington, near Lymington, slept for three weeks after a dose of ordinary medicine had been administered by her mother.

Classical writers tell the story of the Seven Sleepers—Maximianus, Malchus, Martinianus, Dionysius, Joannes, Serapion, and Constantinus—who, to avoid the persecution under the Emperor Decius, hid themselves in a cave in the mountain Coelius, and there slept for 196 years. They then went into the city, thinking they had slept but for one night, though the truth was soon discovered by their different habits and speech, and from the money they had about them, which was of an antiquated stamp and feature.

PHOSPHORESCENT LIGHT

How It is Emitted From Fireflies and Glowworms

Several remarkable lectures were given at the Congress of Zoology at Monaco, attended by scientists from all parts of the world. The greatest attention was paid to a lecture by Prof. Raphael Dubois of Lyons University, who claimed he had discovered the most exact principle whereby phosphorescent light was emitted from glowworms, fireflies and innumerable marine creatures, even certain microbes. Prof. Raphael, one of France's leading physiologists, showed that this "living" light was the product of zymosis, which he called luciferase, oxidising on another chemical compound, which he called luciferine. As soon as these substances, when mingled together, come into contact with water they gave forth light. Prof. Raphael had succeeded in isolating both these bodies, and been able to keep them in bottles for several months without becoming luminous as long as they were in a dry condition. Prof. Raphael's researches had immense practical importance in connection with the discussion on the question of the production of cold light, a brief account of which was sent from Paris, while they also bear on certain problems of the ultimate construction of living tissue.

Record Hunger Strike

The longest hunger strike on record was carried out some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt of his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to cheat the guillotine, and from the day of his arrest refused to eat in spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell, and when that failed, attempted forcible feeding. Granie held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which time he died.

WHEN PREMIER TAUGHT SCHOOL

Reminiscent of the Days When Premier Taught School

When the Right Honorable R. L. Borden was nineteen years old he went down from his Nova Scotia home to become a teacher in the Glenwood Institute at Matawan, New Jersey, and a story is told of an incident which happened during his sojourn there, that illustrates his ready wit and his sense of humor. Then, and possibly still, the teachers and older "scholars" had a reading and debating society that met once a week. The principal feature of the program was the giving out of a book to a member, to be read and at the next meeting reviewed by him or her. The lady teachers were a fun-loving lot of maidens, who were never happier than when "taking a rise" out of some popular new member of the reading club. Young Borden was at once invited to join, and readily consented, for even then he loved debate. Almost his first assignment was the reading and reviewing of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "My Wife and I," in which appear the characters: "My Child Wife," "My Dream Wife," and "My Real Wife."

Anticipation ran high to hear how the young Nova Scotian would handle the literary polygamous subject. The attendance, the night of the review, included practically every member, and enough from the town to put standing room at a premium. No one wished to miss the fun that all seemed so sure would result at his expense. But they did miss it, for although but a boy, the future Premier was not in the least disconcerted by the hundreds of eyes turned upon him that night.

He dealt gently with his "Child Wife," and when he had finished his review of his "Dream Wife," many a Jersey maiden, in that crowded hall, sighed. But there he stopped. Turning to the chair-woman, who, he later found, had been the suggester of that especial book, he said: "I believe it is the custom, and our right, that if one be not prepared, that one may ask for an extension of time. I have reviewed 'My Child Wife,' and have pictured to you 'My Dream Wife,' but to select and properly characterize 'My Real Wife,' I must claim my right and ask for an extension of time."

"Young man," coyly asked the chair-woman, "how much time do you think you will require?"

Looking slowly over the faces before and around him, he most deliberately said: "Well, from present prospects, I think I shall have to ask for—say—Oh, make it five hundred and twenty weeks!" And amid smiles, the young Nova Scotian sat down. It was the last "rise" that the Glenwood Institute ever tried to take out of the future Premier of Canada.

A SUMMERLESS YEAR

Snow and Ice in Plenty in June, July and August

The year 1816 is spoken of as the year that had no summer. On June 4th, Canada, the Maritime Provinces, Maine, Vermont, Massachusetts and parts of New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut were covered by a mantle of snow several inches deep. In parts of Canada and Vermont the snow fell to a depth of nearly a foot.

On the seventeenth another snow storm came. July brought little relief from the cold. On the fourth of July ice a quarter of an inch thick formed in New England, Canada, and some sections of New York and Pennsylvania. August was even worse. In many places that month ice reached a thickness of half an inch. The first two weeks of September brought something resembling summer weather, but it did not last long. The last two weeks of September and nearly all of October were wintry and cold, but the year was brought to a close by remarkably mild December weather.

That the earth or the sun were cooling off were the favorite explanations to account for that summerless year. This theory was all the more firmly held because the phenomenon seemed to be general, and extended to Europe as well as America. Snow fell near London in August, and in France all the crops, except potatoes, were destroyed by the cold. On this side of the Atlantic the crops were also very scant, and a famine was escaped by only a narrow margin.

AVOID HORRID DREAMS

If you want to sleep peacefully, says a physician, and to avoid horrid dreams, observe the following rules:

Keep the window open or otherwise thoroughly ventilate the room.

Secure as much freedom as possible from barking dogs, railway noises, rumbling cars, and the like.

Retire neither hungry nor too full.

Do not use a pillow that strains the neck.

Have bedclothes as light as possible with sufficient warmth.

Avoid cold feet.

If these measures fail, take a warm footbath, and drink a glass of hot milk or water or a cup of weak tea when going to bed. [illegible]

CHANGED HER MIND

By HARVEY PRENTICE.

Hamlin sat beside the bed, watching the house surgeon as he examined the little patient. Three hours before the boy had been brought to St. Mark's hospital, his little body arched like a bow. Nobody had believed a cure to be possible at that stage—until they sent for Hamlin.

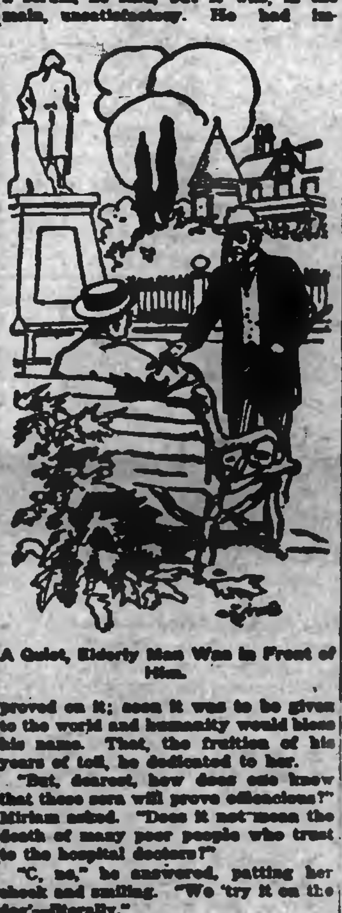
Hamlin was looking at the boy, who now lay quietly sleeping. The desperately large injection of the serum had saved him, dragged him back from the jaws of death. Twelve days previously, on the Fourth of July, the child had injured his hand while setting off firecrackers; tetanus had developed, and but for Hamlin's serum, a fatal termination would have occurred. Now recovery was assured.

"This must be the hundredth life you've saved, doctor," said the house surgeon.

But Hamlin did not answer, for the words had only deepened the bitterness in his soul. What were those hundred lives saved for the one life lost to him?

It was nearly six years since Miriam Gray had broken their engagement. It had occurred so quickly, with such dramatic swiftness, that he had not even felt the pang till she was gone out of his life irrevocably. Their engagement had been a dream of happiness. During the four short weeks that it lasted Hamlin's soul had seemed as though winged; his work was consecrated now. It had been formerly a vague desire to benefit humanity; now it was for Miriam.

She knew he was a doctor, attached to the institute, but she did not know the nature of his duties. He had told her when three weeks remained before their wedding day. He had told her eagerly, enthusiastically, of his specific researches into the cause and cure of tetanus. There was a serum, he said, but it was, in the main, unsatisfactory. He had improved on it; soon it was to be given to the world and humanity would bless his name. That, the fruition of his years of toil, he dedicated to her.



A Quiet, Elderly Man Was in Front of Him.

"But, dearest, how does one know that these sera will prove efficacious?" Miriam asked. "Does it not mean the death of many poor people who trust to the hospital doctors?"

"O, no," he answered, patting her cheek and smiling. "We try it on the dog—literally."

"You are—a vivisector!" she gasped.

"I am," he answered, with proud obtuseness. "Why—of course I am! What is the painless death of a few animals compared with the lives of human beings?"

"I won't argue it with you," she burst out, passionately. "But I will never marry a man who tortures animals. You must choose between your tortures and me."

And all his remonstrances failed to change her. She would hear no reason, listen to no appeal. Her mind was obstinately fixed. Either Hamlin must give up his life work or her. And then he knew that his decision was already made—because, to him, duty meant more than anything in the world. So he had left her.

He had never seen her again. But he had heard of her marriage the following year. Her sister Evelyn had told him, meeting him by chance in the street.

"The mother has been outside the ward for fifteen minutes, doctor," said the house surgeon. "Shall I let her come in for one moment? She has her feelings under control. She's a fine woman, that Mrs. Keith."

Keith! That was the name. It had slipped out of his mind, with many bitter memories, but he remembered it now. Miriam had married Abel Keith, a quiet, oldish man; this must be her child, then. It was the faint resemblance to her that had started his thoughts along their old, well-worn channel.

"Wait, Mercer," said Hamlin, rising abruptly. "Tell her she can come in in a moment. I don't want to meet her. I know her once. I want to get out of this."

He rose up hastily and passed out through the door at the opposite end of the ward, while the house surgeon looked after him in wonder, scenting a tragedy. But Hamlin hastened down the stairs, heedless of the impression he gave. What an irony, that he should have been the means of saving her child—Miriam's child!

Yet the next morning he found a letter upon his table which set the blood hurrying through his veins. Too well he knew that writing. He opened it slowly, fighting down the impulse to fling it into the fire unread.

"Dear Dr. Hamlin," it began. "I want to see you, to thank you for saving Ronald's life. Will you forget and forgive everything that has passed? I cannot rest until I have your forgiveness. Now all my views have changed. MIRIAM."

The house of the Keiths was opposite the park—four miles away from the dingy, old-fashioned quarter in which St. Mark's was set. Hamlin had not been near the place for years. Yet that afternoon, being free, he did tramp into the park, and, as tramping through the cool groves that eased the oppression of that fiery July day, he found his footsteps inevitably trending toward the place which had been forbidden him.

And at last, toward the cool of the afternoon, he found himself seated upon a bench facing the Keith mansion, dreaming vain dreams. He remembered that spot well; there Miriam and he had sat together when alone, dreaming vain dreams.

He had been dreaming for half an hour when he was suddenly recalled to himself. A quiet, elderly man was standing in front of him. The face seemed familiar. The man stretched out his hand.

"Are you not Dr. Hamlin, sir?" he asked. "Yes, I was sure I knew your face. My name is Abel Keith. Surely you remember me?"

"Indeed I do, Mr. Keith," said Hamlin, springing to his feet courteously. So this was Miriam's husband. He could well imagine how the disparity in tastes and years must have weighed on her.

"Miriam sent you a letter yesterday," said Mr. Keith, taking a place beside him. "We hoped that you would call. My wife and her sister will be passing this way in a few moments on their return from the hospital; they always walk through the park. Now, you must stay and meet them—indeed you must, doctor. I cannot, of myself, thank you sufficiently for having given us back our child. It is our only one," he added wistfully.

"—I can't," Hamlin stammered. "I have an engagement. I—"

"Now, my dear fellow," answered the other, smiling, "pray don't be so foolish. I know all about that misunderstanding of yours with Miriam, and I don't say I regret it now, for it gave me a wife. But old friends must not be unforgiving. Stay a while, doctor!"

Hamlin looked at him in disgust. The old dotard! Did he, then, know nothing, immersed as he was in his books—did he know nothing of the intensity of his love for Miriam, that he should seek thus to revive it?

Mr. Keith was prattling beside him, telling of a hundred little things that harrowed Hamlin's heart. He would find that Miriam had not changed in the least, he said.

"I won't deny," continued the scholar, "that when Miriam told me she had changed her views and repented having broken the engagement between you—I won't deny that I did have hopes that things might be adjusted."

Now Hamlin was sure that he was dreaming. The old man babbled on.

"I'm going to tell you about my little romance, my boy—for you are a boy in years, compared with me, and I feel that I have you to thank for having given me the most charming wife in the world. You know I was engaged to Miriam, but I always felt she didn't love me. And I offered her her freedom three times, but she refused to accept it. And so things went on until the very day before our marriage. And then I—I welched."

"You what, sir?" exclaimed the other.

"Welched! Made myself scarce. Rejected her. Yes, my boy, I was absent in Europe a year, and when I came back Miriam saw things the same way that I did. And you know it always had been Evelyn whom I really loved. She is older and our tastes are more alike. So that is how I came to marry Evelyn."

"You married—Evelyn?" said Hamlin, choking.

"Indeed I did, and very happily, too," answered the old scholar. "Don't you think Ronald looks like her a little? Why, what ails you, my boy? The heat must be too much for you. Dear me—let's come into the house. Why, here are the ladies! Evelyn, dear, you remember Hamlin. Miriam! Eh? Why, you seem to remember each other very well!"

Havana's Maine Memorial.

The memorial of the birth of the Cuban republic, to be erected in Havana, is to be a monument composed of the forward turret of the ill-fated battleship Maine, resting on a round stone column supported by an octagonal base of three steps. Out of the smoke of an explosion at the top of the turret will rise the figure in Carrara marble of a maiden, representing the new republic and holding aloft the Cuban flag. Two gun muzzles will protrude from the turret, on its face will be five reliefs depicting scenes connected with the destruction and sinking of the Maine, and below the turret will be a tablet with the flags entwined of American and Cuban [illegible], and an inscription.

THE BEST DIGGERS

The Gopher of the Plains Wonderful Little Creature

It is said that, of all living creatures, the gopher is the one most perfectly adapted to digging in the ground. This creature is short-legged, almost neckless, without visible ears, and with extremely small eyes. In its tunneling work the gopher employs its long and powerful front teeth as a pick to loosen the ground. At the same time the fore feet, which are armed with long curved claws, the sides of the toes being lined, in turn with bristles that prevent the passage of dirt between them, are hard at work both in digging and in pressing the dirt back under the body. There the hind feet take it and push it farther back.

When a sufficient quantity of earth has been accumulated in the rear of the gopher, the animal whirls about and by bringing its "wrists" together under its chin, with the palms of the "hands" held vertically, he pushes the earth out in front. A gopher will move backward just as rapidly as forward, and he can push the soil either way. His movements in excavation are almost as rapid and automatic as those of a shuttle. It has been estimated that a pocket-gopher can make two hundred complete strokes with his teeth in one minute. The jaws are so arranged that thirty-eight distinct single cuts are made by the forward stroke of the jaw, and twenty-eight by the backward stroke. Thus, it will be seen, the jaws of this curious little creature may accomplish a grand total of thirteen thousand two hundred cuts a minute when in active operation. He is immensely destructive to crops, and is, therefore, not popular.

The pocket-gopher digs as long as he lives, extending his burrow from year to year. He digs all summer and generally all winter, since he is not a hibernating animal. All his life is practically passed underground, except when, for an instant, on rare occasions, he emerges into the air to push a load of earth from a freshly opened hole. But he vanishes so quickly that it might be said he is never seen.

If a gopher in captivity finds a whole potato he will cut off little slices, trimming them to suitable shape with his sharp teeth, and transfer them to his cheek-pouches by a swift movement. To remove them from the pouch he presses his fore feet firmly against the sides of his head and carries them rapidly forward, dumping the contents of the pouches on the ground before him. These pouches are often packed so full of bits of roots, stems and leaves as to give the gopher a strongly distorted appearance.

British Columbia Mummies

An unusual and interesting exhibit at the Provincial Museum in the Normal School, Toronto, is that of two mummified bodies which were exhumed in British Columbia. The bodies are in a hunched-up position with their arms clasping their knees. This illustrates one method of burial used by the Clayoquot Indians.

Other exhibits from the Pacific Coast province are Indian costumes on stuffed figures, life size, standing in a large glass show case which runs around the room. Behind the figures are many weird and grotesque dancing masks which bear strong resemblance to the gargoyles seen on old world cathedrals.

HIGH DIGNITARIES OF CHURCH OF ENGLAND

The highest office in the Church of England is held by the Archbishop of Canterbury, officially known as Primate of all England, in distinction from the Archbishop of York, who is simply Primate of England. The jurisdiction of the latter extends over the province or county of York, which includes ten dioceses in that part of England from the Humber to the Dee, and embraces the Isle of Man as well.

The rest of England is under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury. That dignitary, however, as Primate of all England, is supposed to possess a certain authority over the Church in the whole country. He takes precedence on all public occasions, not only of the Archbishop of York, but of all the nobility save the immediate members of the Royal family. He crowns the King, but the Queen is crowned by the Archbishop of York.

The Church has two legislative bodies, called convocations, which attend to ecclesiastical matters. Each convocation, that of York and that of Canterbury, contains two houses. The upper house is composed of bishops and other dignitaries, and the lower house is made up of deans, archdeacons and delegates who are elected whenever a new Parliament is chosen.

CAP-LIKE HAIR FRAMES

Some of these caps have been worn, more or less, by the English women ever since Queen Alexandra introduced that pompadour and "hair bun" hairdressing which all the court ladies and fashionable English women followed so many years. Queen Alexandra still wears her hair dressed in this way.

A QUEER STAMP

That Produced a Crude But Interesting Sticker

A philatelic curiosity that reached England from Tibet is of ruddy purple color. It is very crudely designed and printed, and was evidently modelled after the Edwardian 1 anna stamp of India. In the place of the central portrait, however, there is the mysterious looking beast identified as the white lion of Tibet. Possibly by an error of drawing the white lion is shown in color on a white ground.

The inscriptions are in native and English characters, the latter reading "Tibet-Postage." The native characters are interpreted as [illegible] [illegible]

HAS ANTISEPTIC TOUCH

Remarkable French Woman Has Strange Power to Prevent Decay

French scientists are puzzled over the discovery of a woman, who, apparently, can preserve vegetable and animal tissues merely by laying her hands upon them.

They call her "The Antiseptic Lady," and declare that she possesses a hitherto unknown property of human effluvia, or emanation of some preservative power from her hands. The name of this woman is not made public, but Drs. Clarne and Liagre, of Bordeaux, made many experiments with her and they put themselves on record as placing their entire belief in the powers the woman has to preserve both vegetable and animal matter.

These doctors have known the woman nearly five years, and during that time she kept by her various plants, vegetables and small animals, all perfectly preserved and free from the least sign of decay or putrefaction. Both the woman and her husband declared that these subjects were merely touched by the woman's hands once a day. Probably one of the most astonishing things claimed is that a small animal killed by a gun was kept as perfect at the end of four years as it was the day it was brought in from the forest. The fur was still clean and bright and shiny, and there was not the least sign of decay about the body.

The doctors themselves selected a variety of objects—roses, branches bearing leaves, a rabbit, some uncleaned fish, a number of oysters, plants and wine. These they brought to the woman and watched her carefully. Her hands were washed by them to make certain she had no sort of preservative upon them. Some of the objects, at their bidding, she handled, others she merely passed her hands over without touching them.

These objects were then carefully wrapped in paper and locked up in a laboratory where no one could see or touch them or even get in the same room with them.

At the end of 16 days the rose had dried, but every bit of its color, as natural as when picked in full bloom, was preserved, while the leaves were bright and green and adhered to the twig with the same tenacity it showed while growing. It is well known that under ordinary circumstances the leaves would crumble, turn brown and shatter, and the rose leaves would also turn brown and shatter.

Wine at the end of 12 days had not fermented in the least. The woman had dipped her fingers in this. Wine she had merely passed her hands over had soured and moulded. Oysters she had handled dried completely in 12 days without the least sign of decay. Other oysters she had not handled or seen, but from the same lot and placed in the same room, had putrified in nine days, and turned to a repulsive liquid. Two dead specimens of fish, not cleaned, had dried in three days with no decay, and the eyes were as bright as when taken and the color of the scales quite as brilliant.

It is known that some people possess in a small degree the power of killing bacilli by the touch—that is, by actually touching bare tissues impregnated with the bacilli—but that a person could kill them, alike in vegetable and animal matter through thick fur, heavy scales and the like is considered a most remarkable thing. This woman, the doctors say, preserves objects by her power of killing the bacilli of decay.

A Change in the Kind of Shoes and Stockings Works Wonders

Many women experience much discomfort from swelling of the feet, particularly in warm weather. In most instances this ceases as soon as cooler footwear has been donned, or the foot accustomed itself to the change of temperature; but there are people who suffer agonies the year round, some footsoreness even though their avocations do not require half a mile's walk a day.

If the feet feel dry and hot at night and burn uncomfortably all the time the shoes are on, try a radical change of stockings and shoes. If you have been wearing cotton stockings, try silk ones, or lisle, or wool. Many people cannot wear lisle against the skin without serious discomfort. As a general rule, silk stockings are a wise investment to the woman who has continual trouble from burning or swelling feet. Welt soled boots may also be exchanged profitably for turned soled footwear. Of course the latter is much lighter and will not endure as long as the welted sole model—especially if worn on the pavements a great deal, but the difference in comfort will doubly offset the extra expense. Humane Slaughtering

A demonstration of humane slaughtering of cattle, sheep, and pigs is to be given at the municipal slaughterhouse of Gorgie, Edinburgh. Representatives of most trade associations and many public men will be present. Captive bolts, discharged by means of cartridges or springs, penetrate the skull and produce unconsciousness. The various instruments will be used by the ordinary slaughtermen at the abattoir.

To Remove Mildew

To take out mildew, moisten the mildewed spot with clear water, then spread over it a thick coating of castile or other good white soap and powdered chalk. Let stand an hour, then wash off. Sometimes one application suffices; but if not, repeat once or twice.

Packing Silverware

If silverware, not in general use, is, after being cleaned, wrapped in dark blue paper sprinkled with powdered camphor, it will remain in perfect condition.

RED-HAIRED GIRLS

Quick to Marry But Poor Mates for Red-headed Men

Are red-haired girls more popular than their sisters? If not, then think of the number of red-headed spinsters you have known. You will have to scratch your head a long time before you can remember a single Titian-haired wall flower. The brilliance of women with red hair has been proven by history—Queen Elizabeth, Marie Antoinette, Cleopatra, Helen of Troy.

Prof. C. B. Davenport, who has carried on extensive research work in eugenics, says:

"A curious antipathy is that of red haired persons of opposite sex for each other. Among thousands of matings I have found only two cases where both husband and wife are red-headed and I am assured by red-haired persons that the antipathy exists. If, as it is sometimes alleged, red hair is frequently associated with a condition of nervous irritability, this is an eugenic antipathy."

Red hair is a funny thing, the authorities say. It will turn up generation after generation. It is a known fact that at times the child of two black-haired parents develops a full crop of red hair.

Scientists try to explain why hair is red. They say it is from a superabundance of iron in the blood. The color of hair is due to a pigment called melanin, which is secreted in the roots of hairs. Absence of this coloring matter makes white hair. Melanin is formed by oxidization. A variety of organic compounds may undergo oxidation into melanin pigments ranging in intensity from yellow to black; the greater the oxidization the darker the product. And iron, when oxidized, inside of the body as well as out of it, produces red. This explains the freckles which so often either mar or put an extra touch of daintiness to a red-haired woman's beauty.

IN FOOTSTEPS OF LIVINGSTONE

Twenty-three Years in the Wilds of Africa—Explorer Was Referred to as a "Man Without Toes"

Mr. Daniel Crawford, a missionary who has spent twenty-three years in the Central African wilds, regrets that he never met his great countryman, Livingstone. In an interview he said:

"The point is that I was the first to have the honor of following in Livingstone's tracks after the long silence of the years when he was supposed to have been lost. To me it was a tremendously thrilling and inspiring thing to hear the natives speak in such a fine manner of that hero, David Livingstone. The name they knew him by was 'Ingerese'—that is, 'the Englishman.'

"In other words, the natives saw in this splendid specimen of man the typical Englishman, and, of course, they did not distinguish between an Englishman and a Scotsman. Livingstone, in fact, set the type, and he was regarded as the typical white man; that is why nowadays, when any of the 'riff-raff' type, the broken-down Britisher, comes along, the natives say, sarcastically, 'You are not an Englishman; we know the brand, it is the English brand; Ingerese.'"

Mr. Crawford quoted with approval the last of the five verses which "Punch" offered up to the dead Livingstone:—

He needs no epitaph to guard a name
Which men shall praise while worthy work is done;
He lived and died for good—be that his fame:
Let marble crumble; this is Living-Stone.

"Many of the natives I came across," said Mr. Crawford, "spoke to me of the 'kindly Livingstone', that is their estimate of him. There is, also, amongst the natives of Central Africa a curious Livingstone joke, they call him even to-day, 'A tadi no Shonda,' which means, 'the man who has no toes.' The explanation, of course, is that Livingstone's were boots."

Of all his experiences in Central Africa, Mr. Crawford regards as the finest that which he described in the following words:—

"It was a thrilling day for me when, long ago, I marched through the long grass to the sacred spot where the great David Livingstone died. The grass was very tall, and ran away into the distance. There before me I saw the three pot-stools where the weary old man, Livingstone, had boiled his last cup of tea. There was the tree under which his heart was buried, and the inscription from 'Punch' which I have quoted, cut on the trunk by his faithful boys."

JEWISH STRATEGY

Posing as Dentists They Fooled Russian Officials for a Long While

A remarkable trial was that in Moscow where about five hundred persons were accused of working at various trades on the strength of the possession of faked dentists' diplomas, two hundred and one of them being found guilty and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

The facts are these: Some two years ago the police discovered that a large number of Hebrew dentists living in Moscow possessed neither a dentist's parlor nor a dentist's practice, but followed other occupations instead.

As is well known, Jews are only permitted by Russian law to reside within the "Pale." Outside the "Pale" only certain privileged classes of Jews are allowed permanently to reside. Among those privileged classes are dentists. Now the acquisition of a dentist's diploma in Russia is, or rather was, not a difficult matter. It sufficed to be articled for three years as a voluntary assistant to an established dentist, after which a very simple examination before a medical commission had to be passed.

Thus many young Jewish traders went through their three years' apprenticeship simply in order to obtain the right to reside in Moscow or other cities. Things came to such a pass that of late years there was hardly a young Jew in Moscow who did not have his dentist's diploma in his pocket.

A new law, however, came into force by which a university degree was made the necessary preliminary to obtaining a dentist's certificate. Then a flourishing trade at once sprang up in diplomas bearing dates prior to the day the law came into force.

It was later discovered that a great number of so-called dentists had faked diplomas, and this led to the further discovery of a widespread organization which made it its business to prepare and sell antedated certificates for spot cash. Wholesale prosecutions followed.

SIT UP WHEN YOU SEW

Upright Position May Seem Tiresome at First But Health Counts

The professional dressmaker, like the stenographer, must sit most of the time during her daily duties, and consequently it is very important that she maintains a correct posture of the body. This is also true in many kinds of work and study, such as the office, many of the professions, the shop and factory, and life in school and college. The reason that sitting is the position more indulged in is due to the fact that it is less tiresome than standing. The sitting position, as in sewing, although easier than standing, will after a few hours become very tiresome. When the chest is in a stooped condition the lungs, heart and other internal organs are crowded and restricted in their movements, causing one's work to become all the more tiresome. The legs should not be crossed, as this impedes the proper circulation of the blood in these parts of the body.

Keep the body erect with the chair the proper height, in order that the feet may be placed solidly upon the floor; the chest should be held high and the trunk tilted slightly forward so that its weight may be properly distributed over the pelvic bones.

The strength or power of endurance may be estimated of a man or woman with mathematical certainty, other things being equal, by the straightness of the back.

If the correct posture is maintained while doing these various kinds of fancy work it will be found an excellent form of exercise, because those who keep the chest high and well expanded are not only less liable to pneumonia, tuberculosis and other affections of the throat and lungs than the stooping, faulty-postured person, but are more masters of life.

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed-up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Watson, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

A Pathetic Incident.

A somewhat pathetic incident was told to The Times yesterday, by the father of a two months old infant that was buried yesterday.

It seems that the infant, while around on Wednesday evening, was closely observed by her 4-year-old brother. Tears rolled down the boys cheeks. The mother, noticing this, remarked: "Now, you must give your prayers to-night for little sister." The boy misunderstood what his mother said and replied "Why, mother, she is too sick to give her pears." A few moments later the infant passed away.

You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

POLICE COURT NEWS

John Morgan, claiming Toronto as his home, appeared before Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning, on the charge of trespassing on the C.P.R. property. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded to jail for a week on the request of the special officer of the C.P.R.

Morgan has yet to face the charge of assaulting the officer, who gave evidence to the effect that Wednesday morning while on duty at the depot he noticed the prisoner get off the train.

When searched at the Police station a roll of bills amounting to $257 was found inside his shirt and also a tramp's outfit consisting of a razor, soap and towel, and a few other articles generally carried by the Knights of the Road.

Samuel Young paid two dollars for the privilege of being inebriated on Simcoe street. Young pleaded guilty.

CASES FOR TRIAL AT FALL SITTING

The fall sittings of the High Court will open in Peterborough on Tuesday, Oct. 14th. Mr. Justice Middleton will preside. Five civil actions have already been entered for trial and it is altogether probable that the list will occupy the attention of His Lordship for the remainder of the week. The docket includes one criminal case, that of a Belmont man who will appear on a charge of rape.

A Jury Case.

The first case is that of Benjamin Johnston versus Sidney Armstrong, in which the plaintiff claims damages to the amount of three thousand dollars and costs of action for defendant, who it is alleged, wrongfully seduced plaintiff's daughter, Miss Mabel Johnston. The parties to the action are farmers and reside in the Township of North Monaghan. Peck, Kerr and McElderry are acting for the plaintiffs, and Roddy and Burnham for the defendant.

Ellen E. Smart, through her next friend, Alfred B. Owen, is suing Charles E. Jarrett for $1,000 damages and costs for breach of promise. Mr. R. E. Wood is appearing for the plaintiff.

No appearance has been entered to the writ of summons, therefore interlocutory judgment has been duly entered, with damages to be assessed.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make it thick, glossy, wavy, luxuriant and remove dandruff—Real surprise for you.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and just try it.

A REVISION OF THE RAILWAY ACT

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The act which consolidates and revises the railway act will be introduced at the next session of parliament.

The new provisions are few, and consist mainly in increasing the degree of public control over telegraph, telephone and power companies, and making in most cases municipal consent by-law a condition precedent to carrying out the undertaking. The act has been revised by Samuel Price, K.C.

LEGALLY DEAD PRESENT IN COURT

Denver Veteran Went to War in 1863, and His Wife Remarried

Denver, Oct. 9.—Henry W. Steele, aged soldier in the Old Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, Mass., is legally dead. In his depositions read before a judge in Judge Perry's Court he stated that he was still living and in fairly good health for a man bordering on his three-score-and-ten, but the jury declared him dead since 1863. He has, therefore, been dead 50 years though still breathing, eating and living at a home established by the government for the men who defended it in the civil war.

More than a quarter of a century ago the missing man met Mrs. Adelaide Steele, wife of Henry W. Steele and became infatuated with her. She told him that she was once married to Henry W. Steele, but that he left her to go to the war in 1863 and never returned. She presumed he was dead, as he had not been heard of for nearly a quarter of a century.

She and Fisher were married under the belief that Steel was dead, without going through the formality of having Mrs. Steele obtain a divorce.

When Fisher died a few years ago he left all his property in a will to Mrs. Fisher and her daughter by her former husband, Steele. Henry Fisher a cousin of the missing man, contested the will on the ground that Mrs. Fisher had a living husband at the time of her marriage to Fisher. Judge Dixon decided against him, and he appealed the case to the District Court.

After the appeal was taken it was discovered that Steele was still living, and he gave depositions to that effect; but under the instructions given by Judge Perry of the District Court, the jury decided that Steele is dead so far, as the marriage of Mrs. Fisher and the distribution of Fisher's estate is concerned. Had the jury decided in favor of young Fisher, Mrs. Fisher and her daughter would have been disinherited.

WAS VERY WEALTAY BUT LITTLE KNOWN

New York, Oct. 9.—The estate of Benjamin Altman, president of the dry goods firm of B. Altman and Company, who died at the age of 73 years last evening, is said to amount to probably $45,000,000. About a third of this wealth is represented by art objects, particularly in the line of paintings and porcelains. Real estate holdings are valued at $20,000,000.

Mr. Altman was a bachelor, and had led a very secluded life, especially during recent years. His physician said that it was doubtful if there were one hundred persons in New York who knew him by sight.

CANADIAN GRAIN ON CHICAGO MARKET

Minneapolis, Oct. 9.—The high cost of living received a jolt following the inauguration of the new tariff. All the grain lists of the country were weak as the heavy liquidation in the principal markets. Wheat prices in the local market sold below 84 cents for the December futures, making a new low price for the crop year. Corn and oats in Chicago were subjected to active selling pressure, the result largely of oats imported from Canada, which can be placed in Chicago, duty paid at a profit.

The sharp decline in what is considered by the local grain trade as largely sentimental. Unless Canada takes off the duties against wheat and flour from this side of the line, the domestic market is protected by a ten per cent duty on flour. No action along thos line is expected before January and it is considered only a remote possibility that the Borden Government will remove the duty, having made so strenuous a repudiation of the reciprocity issue.

FRANCE-SPANISH ALLIANCE AROUSES SOME OPPOSITION

Madrid, October 9.—President Raymond Poincare, of France, arrived here to-day on a three day's visit to King Alfonso of Spain, which it is generally expected will result in an agreement between the two countries and bring about the re-entry of Spain into European politics as one one of the Great Powers after a century's occupation of a minor position.

The King met the President at the railroad station, where they embraced, and then proceeded to the Royal Palace amid hearty cheers from a vast crowd.

The Government has been apprehensive on account of the attitude of the Spanish public in reference to the coming visit of President Poincare. A printed invitation was circulated yesterday asking the people to boycott the festivities in honor of the French President.

In spite of the efforts made by Government, very few private buildings have been decorated so far. A meeting of the Socialists has been called for to-day to protest against the alliance of Spain with France. It is believed the police will not permit its being held.

Some papers have printed articles and pictures recalling the Napoleonic invasion.

REFORMED TRAINING FOR MEDICAL STUDENTS

London, Oct. 9. — Sir Wm. Osler, regius professor of medicine at Oxford University, in his address at the re-opening of the medical school at St. George's hospital, denounced the existing system of training medical students, especially the lecture and examination features.

Sir William contended that the work of the students from the day they entered the school ought to count for qualification, and that the students ought not to be under the continual fear of examination.

"The great chasm between examination and examination," he continued, "is shown by the statistics of aspirants to the Royal College of Surgeons. Half of the entrants fail, yet these are the very pick of the students. The lectures ought to be reduced. It ought to be an offence on the part of a senior student to attend the lecture. We make the study of our profession an intolerable burden by examination and the enormous expansion of the subjects of the curriculum."

BRINGING DOWN THE LAST OF MARINE INSURANCE IN CANADA

Hon. J. D., Hazen Intends to Put a Stop Discrimination Against Canadian Route

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct., Oct. 10.—Every effort has been made by the Borden Government since coming into power to have marine insurance rates lowered. The rates, which are fixed by Lloyd's, cause Canadian shippers to complain as they are placed in unfair competition with the American shippers. The reason for the low rates on the New York steamship lines is according to Lloyd's the minimum of risk insured, while the long river journey to Montreal and the ice dangers prevent the Canadians from obtaining as low a rate.

Mr. Hazen Acts.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has devoted considerable time to the matter and while in England last year took the question up with Lloyd's. He inquired as to the means Canada might take in order to have a probable reduction in the future. As a result of these negotiations arrangements have been completed by the Canadian Government by means of which a more thorough and complete system of telegraphing the arrival and departure of vessels in the Maritime Provinces and Quebec shall immediately go into force.

Signal Service

The collectors of customs and subofficials at the various ports or outports in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces shall in future immediately report by telegraph not only the arrivals and departures of all vessels engaged in the overseas trade, but also all casualties to vessels engaged in any trade. For the Maritime Provinces the telegraphs will be sent to the Superintendent of Signal Service at St. John, N.B., and for the Province of Quebec to the Superintendent of Signal Service, Custom House, Quebec.

Daily Cable.

The signal service offices at St. John and Quebec shall send a cable to Lloyds, London, England, daily, (Saturday excepted), at five o'clock in the afternoon containing all arrivals and departures and movements of vessels engaged in the overseas trade in the Maritime Provinces and Quebec. Information as to casualties shall be immediately transmitted by the signal service offices at St. John and Quebec to Lloyds Agents at those places.

On Saturdays the signal service offices at Quebec, and St. John shall forward by mail a full copy of the week's proceedings to the secretary of Lloyd, London.

Improving the Channel.

The work in the channel through the Traverse below Quebec has been completed. The result is a widening of 250 feet and a 30-foot depth at the extreme low water. The completion of this work marks the disappearance of one of the few remaining difficulties to be met with in the St. Lawrence ship channel.

The result of these activities will in the near future convince Lloyds that excessive insurance rates on the great Canadian waterway are unjust and that the American shipping interests have no permanent claim to lower insurance rates.

Religious Liberty in Peru

Lima, Peru, Oct. 4.—Peru in future is to enjoy religious tolerance for all sects. Heretofore the exercise of any religion other than the Roman Catholic has been prohibited.

The chamber of deputies today adopted, by 66 votes to 4 an amendment to Article IV. of the constitution dealing with the subject. The amendment has been approved by the senate.

In spite of the constitutional prohibition the government some time ago permitted the building of a number of Protestant churches and mission schools.

ANNUAL REPORT PROTESTANT HOME

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Home was held in the Board Room on Thursday, Oct. 9th. The secretary read the report for the year. This was adopted.

The treasurer read her report which showed a balance in the bank of $190.79, with an expenditure of $3,895.90.

THE REPORT.

The year which has just closed has been a quiet and uneventful one, though a most successful one for the home. The increased responsibility in carrying on the work on a much larger scale since the opening of the new building in April of last year, has been fully realized by the Directors.

There have been in all 39 inmates in the home during the year with a total number of 8,894 days, 18 men and 20 women. Of these, 13 have been discharged for various reasons, four deaths have occured, and 21 remain at the present time. Judging from the number of applications for admission which are being received, this number will soon be materially increased.

Twenty-eight meetings of the Directors have been held and two general meetings of the Board have been called, when subjects of special importance had to be discussed.

The usual Christmas entertainment was provided for the old people, and they spent a very happy day. The donations from the public were most generous and acceptable.

On the formation of the Local Council of Women, the Board thought it wise to affiliate, and Mrs. Neill, Miss Brown anh Miss Robinson were appointed as representatives. Mrs. Roger, taking her seat as President.

Owing to the vastly increased work entailed by the larger institution, the Directors have found it necessary to increase their numbers from nine to twelve and a by-law to this effect was passed, to be ratified at thit meeting.

In December, Dr. Clinton, M. H. O. for this district, visited the Home and reported most favorably on the buildings and sanitary arrangements.

The work in the Home has been carried on in the most able manner by Miss Lancaster, who has been unfailing in her efforts to promote the welfare and happiness of the inmates, and has endeared herself to all those with whom she has come in contact.

We cannot close the report of the year's work without expressing the deep gratitude we feel towards the many who have so mat)rially assisted us. To the Ministerial Association for their Sunday services. The doctors of the staff, who as usual have given their services so freely, also to the many kind friends who have been generous in their donations To Messrs. Robinson and Kidd, who have so kindly acted as Auditors, to the Press of the city, which has always shown unfailing courtesy. And to Messrs. Matthews-Laing & Co., who have allowed us to use their cold storage.

We also wish to express our satisfaction with the manner in which Mr. Downing has carried out his work in the garden and also for his kind care of the sick men.

Owing to the demand upon our space, we regret having to omit a large portion of the report.

He Took It With Him.

The other morning a young Irishman entered Jimmy Lynch's drug store on Hunter street. The young son of Erin pointed to a stack of green castile soap and said:

"Oi want a lump o' thot."

"Very well, sir," said the clerk. "Will you have it scented or unscented?"

"Oi'll take ut with me,' said the Irishman."

THE WEATHER.

To-day—South to south-westerly winds, and showery.

IMMIGRANTS STILL FAVOR ONTARIO

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Never in the history of Ontario has there been such an influx of immigrants in the Province as there has been during the past year.

From the beginning of January until the end of September a ceaseless stream of homeseekers flowed into Ontario, and now at the end of nine months, statistics compiled by Mr. Birmingham, of the Dominion Immigration Bureau, show that no less than 56,932 immigrants, mostly British have arrived in the Province. This number eclipses all previous records. During the same time last year, which was one of the busiest periods in Ontario immigration circles, the number of arrivals was 37,716. The figures for this season show an increase of 19,216 over those of last year.

September also showed a gain, as 3,440 arrivals were recorded, compared to the 3,160 of the corresponding month last year.

STILL THEY COME.

One hundred British immigrants arrived yesterday bound for various parts of Ontario, and 60 boys of the Dr. Barnardo Homes came last night. The latter have been despatched to various farmers in the Province who were eagerly awaiting their arrival.

Despite the lateness of the season, the demand for farm hands is still great.

Mr. Birmingham states that never in his extensive career has he witnessed anything like this year's influx of immigrants.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS TO SPEAK AT PETERBORO'

The Canadian Club is to be congratulated on having for its guest at its opening meeting for the season on Thursday evening next, Mr. Chas. R. McCullough, of Hamilton, the founder of Canadian Clubs. Mr. McCullough who is a forceful and fluent speaker will address the members on "Twenty one years of the Canadian Club," for it is now 21 years since Mr. McCullough suggested the idea to his friend Mr. Sanford Evans who assisted him in carrying out his plans, and became the first president. Mr. McCullough remaining the secretary until the success of the venture was beyond question. Now Canadian Clubs are a national institution and every town of any size as well as every city in Canada has its Canadian Club, holding meetings regularly during the winter season, listening to speakers on subjects of National interest and learning at first hand of the development of the different sections of our country.

The cost of membership is only one dollar per season and any British subject is eligible. Meetings are held in the Y.M.C.A. and are preceded by an informal dinner, the cost of which is 50c. Membership tickets may be had from the following members of the committee: D. Walker, principal of the Normal School, W. H. Monro, J. F. Harvey, V. J. McElderry, G. O. Cameron, B. D. Hall, A. H. Stratton and W. R. Morris or from Mr. Hainsworth at the Y.M.C.A. It is hoped and expected that there will be a large turn out of old members at the first meeting and in addition that there will be many new ones.

POWER COMMITTEE TAKES EXCEPTION TO PROPOSED AGREEMENT WITH STREET RAILWAY

The Terms Under Which the Railway Company Will Use Hydro Electric Poles For Their Trolley Wires Considered Altogether Unreasonable

At the inception of the Hydro-Electric proposition for a power and light service in Peterborough, the street pole line system of which Mr. Johnston Greer is now installing, the Street Railway Co. agreed to string their trolley wires along the ornamental lighting poles from which will be suspended the magnetite arc lamps for street illumination. This would allow of the removal of the present wooden trolley poles, and free our business streets from ugly timber, however, when they met last night had the following form of agreement from the Street Railway Co. to hand for their signature. This agreement the Power Committee considers very much as a hold-up, binding the city to conditions which they cannot entertain. The Committee will approach the Street Railway Co. with a view to securing considerable modification to the agreement in question.

THE PROPOSED AGREEMENT.

This Agreement Made this day of A.D., 1913.

BETWEEN :—

The Municipal Corporation of the City of Peterborough, hereinafter called "the City" of the First Part.

—and—

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company, hereinafter called "the Railway," of the Second Part.

WHEREAS the railway has built and is operating a street railway along the public streets of the City of Peterborough, and under a Franchise granted to it for that purpose, has the right to erect poles along the streets of the said City for the purpose of the street railway.

AND WHEREAS the city is desirous of erecting a street lighting system on the public streets of the city, and has requested the railway to abandon its present poles upon George street, from McDonnel street to the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near Wolfe street, and upon Charlotte street, from George street to Bethune street, and to use in the place and stead thereof, the metal poles, which are to be provided by the city, for stringing its suspension wires, feeder wires, ground wires, and other apparatus used for railway purposes, and which poles are also to maintain and carry the City's street lighting system.

NOW THEREFORE THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH that in consideration of the premises the railway doth agree to abandon its present poles used for its street railway purposes upon George street, from McDonnel street to the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near Wolfe street, and upon Charlotte street, from George street to Bethune street, and to remove all wires and fixtures therefrom, and to use the metal poles belonging to the City for stringing its suspension wires, feeder wires, ground wires, and other apparatus used for railway purposes, as hereinafter provided.

1. The City covenants and agrees that it will erect metal poles along the parts of the streets hereinbefore mentioned, the poles being of tubular metal, and of such height, weight and size as shall be satisfactory to the railway for its uses in conducting its street railway. Said poles shall be erected in a manner satisfactory to the Railway, and shall be provided with substantial, proper and convenient means of attaching suspension wires, and any other necessary wires or attachments. Said poles shall also be located and erected along straight sections of trolley wire, so as to give suspension points of intervals of not more than 115 feet at the maximum, while at all curves, turnouts, intersections, switches, etc., poles shall be located, installed and erected to the number and in the position required by the Railway, in lieu of which the Railway will continue to use its own poles.

2. The City also covenants and agrees that if at any points on the parts of the streets above mentioned, the City does not desire to erect or install lamps, but at which poles are required by the Railway, that the City shall erect plain tubular metal poles of such height, weight, size and manner as required by the Railway. The said poles to become an integral part of the Railway system.

3. The City does covenant and agree that it will bear all expenses of whatsoever nature or kind that the Railway may be put to in changing the Railway's system on the parts of the streets above mentioned, in the matter of poles, suspension wires, feeder wires, ground wires, and all other changes incidental thereto, from its present condition to a condition whereby the metal poles provided by the City are used. The city further covenants and agrees to pay the Railway at the rate of $10.00 per hour per "line" of cars, for each hour or fraction thereof that the traffic on each "line" is wholly or partially interfered with for loss of revenue and inconvenience of traffic during the period said system is being changed. It is [illegible] provided that the City [illegible] bills of the Railway for [illegible] said change as its presents, within ten days after presentation.

4. The Railway shall, so soon as the transfer above mentioned has been made, and upon obtaining the written consent and concurrence of The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and The Otonabee Power Company, Limited, who have the joint issue of the said wood en poles, remove said poles no longer required. The cost of removing said poles and delivering them at Pole Yard on London street, east, to be paid by the City.

5. The City shall bear all extra expense and cost to the Railway in case the Railway shall desire to carry trolley feed wires, power transmission wires, ground wires, or signal wires, on the poles furnished and erected by the City, or to make use of the said poles in any similar way for the necessity of carrying on its business, provided, however, that in the City does not desire to permit the Railway to carry feed, power, ground or signal wires or other apparatus on the said poles, it shall supply an alternative route equally as safe, suitable and satisfactory to the Railway as over the said poles, and shall bear all extra expenses incurred by the Railway over and above the expenses that would have been incurred if the Railway's present poles had been used for such purpose, and it is agreed that the evidence that the Railway produces as to what amount constitutes such increased expense shall be accepted by the City as final and binding.

6. Whereas at the present time the Railway has feeder wires erected on poles of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as short cuts to points of their system where they desire to have feeders applied, and it is possible that the City is going to purchase the Plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, in which case the City agrees that if they do take over the Peterborough Light and Power Company's lighting system that they will permit the Railway to run feeder wires or power transmission wires for purposes of the street railway only, on any distribution system poles, free of charge, that may be the property of the City, and the Railway agrees to erect and maintain such wires.

7. The City hereby releases and agrees to save harmless the Railway from (a) any and all claims whatever for damages to either person or property due to the presence on any poles used of electricity, or the leakage through same of electric current. (b) Any damage to lamps or connections or other apparatus, not the property of the Railway, installed on or in said poles, or hindrance or interference with the operation of the said lamps or apparatus which it may be alleged is caused by operation of the street railway or any occurrence thereon, either regular or accidental. (c) From any loss, injury or damage however caused to any property, person or persons whomsoever by reason or in consequence of, or resulting from the use of said poles by the Railway harmless from any and against all claims, costs and proceedings of every kind and nature whatsoever which may be made or taken in respect of or arising out of such injury, loss or damage.

8. The City shall for the period covered by the Railway's franchise, and by any extensions thereof, paint keep in alignment, re-install for defects in material or looseness of joints or footings; provide new suspension wire and other attachments and insulators, and pay for their renewal on the poles, (work to be done

J. VINCENT ECK IS REPORTED TO BE VERY MUCH ALIVE

Despatch Received Last Night Asserts That the Victim of the Auto Accident Near Lakefield Was Not J. V. Eck

The following despatch to The Times was received last night, but no further particulars could be obtained, as no telegraphic service could be obtained.

St. Catharines, Oct. 10th.—The body buried in the Catholic cemetery at Peterborough, is not that of J. V. Eck, as was supposed—He is alive.—Moore.

The mystery concerning the identity of the man who was killed in the Lakefield auto accident, has deepened again and again, and yet another mysterious factor looms up. A man named Moore in St. Catharines sent the above telegram to the Times which says that Eck is very much alive. Yet the marks, which proved the body to be that of Eck's cannot be left out of the consideration. It will be remembered how the accident occurred, the subsequent inquest, the supposition that the body was that of Windover, Richardson, McDonald and Eck. Now looms the question—Eck is really alive. Who is the man who lies buried in St. Peter's cemetery? The body has been identified satisfactorily to the authorities as Eck—no one claimed it—the remains were sent to the University at Kingston, as unclaimed, were reclaimed by St. Catharines residents through the instrumentality of deceased's parents in England—brought to Peterborough and interred.

Is it Windover, McDonald, Richardson or is it really Eck? This is a matter that is far from being cleared up, and will occupy the closest attention the authorities can give.

What will be heard next?

PREVENTION OF BRUSH FIRES HAS BECOME LIVE QUESTION

Appeal to Mr. J. H. Burnham M. P. by an Owner of 150 Acres of Young Timber

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I enclose for the perusal of your readers a complaint of a well-known man up north, whose name we conceal for obvious reasons. It speaks for itself:

Harvey, Oct. 8, 1913.

J. H. Burnham, M.P., Peterborough:

Sir,—I have about 150 acres of young timber on lot 26, con. 10, that I am trying to keep for present and future use. You know there are fire bugs in this county. How can we get after these lads; is there such a thing as a Fire Act. If there is, where could I get a few copies? It is a terrible misfortune that nobody takes any interest in the preservation of our young timber. There was a fire set out beside my timber. It may wipe it out. Has Dr. Fernow anything to do with the preservation of our young timber? Please let me hear from you.

Lately we have been before the Minister of Forests in Toronto on a forest fire mission, but he seems helpless in the work of our growing timber and the soil under it, which when burned, becomes the sand of a desert. Is it not time that some of our people set themselves to do try? Politics is well enough in its place, but surely we are not stupid something for the benefit of the country enough to see our country destroyed before our eyes without an effort to stop it.

J. H. BURNHAM.

RISK MANS NECK IN APPLYING FOR A NEW TRIAL FOR GIBSON

Unique Situation Involved in Move Being Made to Free "Lifer"—Would Not Convict

Toronto, Oct. 10.—Early this afternoon a party started out from the office of Lennox and Lennox in an effort to find "Red" Wilson. When he is found he will be taken to see Gibson, to find if Gibson will identify him as one of the men the young man has sworn was in the party the night Rosenthal was murdered. Wilson has once been examined by the city police, who were satisfied that he had nothing to do with the affair.

A new development came in the case of Charlie Gibson to-day when a woman offered to adopt him and look after his future welfare should he be freed from his sentence in the Kingston Penitentiary on his conviction as the slayer of Joseph Rosenthal, and given into her charge. The woman is Mrs. Charles McDonald, who lives at a down town hotel, and who has already written to "Dear King George," asking his Majesty not to allow the hangman to "hang Charlie Gibson." She has not received an answer to this letter.

He Might Be Hanged.

In the attempt to gain a new trial for the young man, it was learned in legal circles to-day that the Gibson interests were again risking the passing of the death sentence and the possible hanging of the youth. This chance they declared they were willing to take so earnest were they in their efforts to free him of the charge.

If a new trial was had, Gibson would be placed in exactly the same position as he was when he was first arrested and charged with murder, explained Mr. John F. Lennox today. "His first conviction, his sentence to death and the subsequent commutation to life imprisonment would be swept aside. As the case now stands Gibson must serve the rest of his life in jail. Should he be found guilty in a new trial, of course, there would be no other alternative than the death sentence. We realize this in our efforts to secure a new hearing before the courts."

SPORTS

Once more the luck broke against the New York Giants when Connie Mack's aggregation of [illegible] handed them the small end of a 6—5 score. The Mackmen drove Demaree off the slab in five innings, when Marquard was substituted. The score was 6—0 in favor of the Athletics up to the seventh innings. In this inning, [illegible] work by Burns and Murray [illegible] by a homer by Merkle, netted the [illegible] three runs. Two more runs [illegible] in the eighth, but New York could do no more, Chief Bender being too good for them.

The final score was 6—5 for Philadelphia.

This afternoon two games in the football league in competition, the Hampton vs. Cochrane at 1.30, and the Centers vs. Glaciers at 2.30. Both games will be [illegible] and the lovers of football should [illegible] the Exhibition Grounds where the games will be played. Mr. [illegible] will referee both games.

SAVE THE PIECES

Save the small ends of candles. They smooth boiled starch when added while cooking.

Save the water in which unsalted rice has been boiled. It makes the best starch for lingerie waists.

Save the paraffin off tops of jelly and jams as the latter are used. Wash it all up, melt and put away for next season.

Save the pieces of lemon and orange peel. Dry and powder for flavoring or cut into shreds and boil in a white syrup.

Save the broken bread. The larger pieces can be made into toast points for creamed meats and fish. Smaller pieces may be made into bread or chocolate pudding. Or roll and keep the bread crumbs till wanted.

Save the pieces of cold potato and make a salad out of them.

VALUE OF CREOSOTING

Treated Railway Ties Last Much Longer—Creosote Mostly Imported

One million four hundred thousand gallons of creosote could have been produced in Western Canada last year if the coal that was converted into coke had been coked in by-product ovens. With the exception of the creosote produced from the by-product ovens at Sydney, N.S., and at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., no creosote is produced in Canada. This valuable wood preservative is imported from Britain and the United States, but the high cost of the imported article has restricted its use very materially. In view of the steady and even rapid rise in the price of almost all classes of wood products, the importance of creosote is readily seen. For example there is the problem confronting Canadian railways in obtaining timber for cross ties. There were 13,683,770 ties purchased in Canada last year, an increase of 48.5 per cent. over the figure for the previous year. When it is considered that the annual replacement of ties on existing lines amounted to about 10,000,000, it is evident what enormous quantities of the material are required in order to supply the demand. This demand will not remain stationary, but, on account of the increased mileage of railways being constructed in Canada, will increase each year. Owing to the other demands for lumber and wood products, the price of cross-ties has been steadily increasing. The cost of the maintenance is now a large item of expense and the higher prices of the better grades of wood have forced the railway companies to use inferior woods. In order that the lower grades of wood may be economically used for ties it will be necessary to creosote those species that fall through decay, writes W. J. D. in Conservation. In order, also to utilize ties of the softer woods, it is necessary to use tie-plates. When it is remembered that the average life of an untreated tie is seven years while the life of a treated tie is seventeen years, the importance and value of creosote is readily seen.

LIFETIME IN WORKHOUSE

Woman and Family Who Have Cost London Ratepayers $6,770.

In a City of London Guardians' report, appeared a striking instance of how the ratepayers' money is spent in supporting other people's families.

A woman who was born in 1866 became a charge on the city two years later. She spent fifteen years at the Hanwell Schools, and then a situation was found for her as a servant in Kensington. She stayed there for a fortnight, and then returned to Hanwell.

Another situation was secured for her at Herne Hill, and she spent fourteen months there, afterwards going into the City Workhouse. Since that time she has been in and out four hundred times.

She has had five children, three of whom have been educated at the expense of the ratepayers. The other two died. The woman and her children cost the ratepayers $6,770 in all to date.

EX-SULTAN'S QUEER PRIZE

Abdul Hamid, ex-Sultan of Turkey, came into possession of $36,000, given him by a German admirer for the purpose of erecting a temple of peace in Constantinople. Of all men in the world, Abdul would probably be the last to lay the cornerstone for such an edifice.

Some two years ago at Leipzig a curious old man by the name of Seelmann died, leaving his fortune, $36,000, to the ex-Sultan with the above stipulation. He evidently had forgotten that he had a niece in very poor circumstances, who was just able to make her living by her work. She brought suit to break the will, but the Supreme Court of Leipzig ruled against her.

Two Centenarians Dead

Mrs. Mary Fehily passed away in her 104th year at her daughter's residence at Midleton, Ireland. The old lady was a regular smoker.

The death occurred of Mr. William Hemsworth, Lorrha, County Tipperary, at the age of 100 years. Deceased was in good health almost up to the time of his death.

A Scholar's Record Attendance

At a meeting of Cambuslang, Scotland, School Board the clerk read a letter stating that a pupil of St. Bride's Roman Catholic School had made a record attendance at school of ten years, and asked if the Board recognized such an achievement. The pupil is Michael Murphy, the son of a mining contractor. It was decided to present him with a medal.

GUARDS HIS CLOTHES

An Old Raincoat Put to Good Use by Motor Cyclist

As collectors of dust and mud motor cyclists are unequalled.

A young man who was rather particular about his clothes, and who disliked to stalk into a hotel after a motor cycle ride covered with all the earth his wheels could throw upon him, found a way out of the difficulty.

He secured an old raincoat, split it up the back almost to his waist and equipped it with snap fasteners on each side so that he could fasten it about his legs when riding.

It doesn't look very nice, but it keeps off the mud and dirt, and does not cost very much either, as the cheapest sort of a raincoat was used.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW
the novelist, who made himself unpopular with the people of Manchester by referring, in a speech at Dublin to the Manchester City Art Gallery in most slighting terms. He called it a "picture dealer's lumber room."

NOT HARD TO TELL FORTUNES

Little Need for Soothsayer to Be Gifted With Much More Than Ordinary Intelligence.

The way to tell people's fortunes is to have one list of characteristics and use it for every one without the slightest variation. It is bound to succeed. For instance, suppose Falstaff and Hamlet had their fortunes told by the same soothsayer. I imagine he would have told Hamlet's character as follows:

"You are not so fortunate as you seem. You have a great deal of sense, but more sense than knowledge. You can give admirable advice to other people. Your judgment is excellent as regards others, but bad as regards yourself. You never value your own good advice. You are fond of your friends. You prefer to talk to action. You suffer from indecision. You are fond of the stage. You are susceptible to female beauty. You are witty, amiable and well educated, but you like coarse jokes. You are superstitious and believe in ghosts. You can make people laugh. You often pretend to be more foolish than you are. At other times you will surprise people by your power of apt repartee. Your bane will be your hesitation to act, which will hamper you in fighting. You are unsuccessful as a soldier, but unrivaled as a companion and philosopher. You will mix in high society, have friends at court. You will come off badly in personal encounter and your final enemy will be a king."

Now imagine him saying exactly the same thing to Falstaff. Doesn't it fit him just as well? Can't you imagine Falstaff saying: "He has hit you off to a 'T'," and Hamlet murmuring: "My prophetic soul!" In fact, I believe fortune telling [illegible] [illegible] the world, and the [illegible]

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Sir Wilfrid says that he will calmly await the verdict of posterity, which indicates that he is going to hang around for a good long time.

We are informed that "Dam hats" for women are the latest idea in millery. No doubt the name was given to them by papa when the bill was presented.

"Be sure you are right, then go ahead," but there are a great many men who never get ahead because they are so sure they are right.

The old-fashioned girl, when she came downtown to do some shopping was afraid someone would see her ankle, but her daughter, nowadays, is afraid, that someone won't.

Nothing ever is just right. A few weeks ago there were not enough perforations in the knit underwear, and now there are too many.

Having just burned down a home for incurables, the suffragettes have proven that they are deserving of having the privilege of casting votes for good government and the protection of property.

The Gideons have now placed 15,000 Bibles in Canadian hotels, and 12,000 of these are in Ontario. Those who know the work of the Gideons will rejoice to know that their work is progressing so favorably. The Christian Commercial Travellers' Association has surely justified its organization.

Australia's premier says that the motto of his country in connection with the naval policy is "One life, one flag, one fleet, one throne; Britons, hold your own." The adoption of this Tennysonian moto would seem to indicate that the Australian fleet is not one of the "autonomous" variety, but an integral part of the imperial fleet. Our Canadian autonomists will please take notice.

THE RED FLANNEL MYTH

A professor, addressing the American Association for Spondylotherapy in session at Chicago, presents as a result of investigation with colors,, the discovery that "red" imparts the greatest energy. For fatigue, listlessness, and "that tired feeling" he advocates wearing a red dress, necktie, or undershirt. Yellow, he says, has the opposite effect).

Perhaps the late Garibaldi, the "man of the red shirt," was a disciple of this chromatic psychology. The effect of a red petticoat on the male of the bovine species has been frequently attested. Red hair is supposed to "yellow," on the other hand, is synonymous with weakness, yielding, cowardise. But beyond these isolated istances — historical, zo-ological,n anatomical and etymological, respectively, the only basis for the professor's discovery seems to be a colorful imagination.

Red flannel as a cure for rheumatism has many adherents. No doubt the flannel keeps warm and protects the stiff joint and sore muscle, but as far as the color goes any other in the spectrum would be fully as effective. Like many of our boy and girlhood superstitions, the notion has become so deeply grounded as to have an undoubtedly favorable mental effect. Perish the iconoclast who would destroy it!

JAPAN WANTS NEW TREATY

There is a very definite rumor that Japan has asked, or will ask, the United States Government for a new treaty, to include express provision that the rights with any other aliens in the United States. This would, of course, nullify the anti-alien land laws of California, and would permit the Japanese to purchase land anywhere in the United States, while at the same time no United States citizen would be permitted to purchase land in Japan. But the point at issue, vizf, whether Oriental races can safely be treated as European races and accorded equal rights, is not to be settled in a day. In Canada, only a few days ago, the Labor Congress asked for the exclusion of Oriental labor from Canada, and shortly before the Westminster Presbytery of British Columbia had put itself on record as follows: "This presbytery would, therefore, urge that an understanding be arrived at between our Government and the various Governments interested, so that until the proportion of Orientals to Occidentals in British Columbia is one to thirty of the total population no Orientals, excepting bona fide merchants and students, be permitted to enter or reside in Canada." This would mean practically the prohibition of Oriental immigration. Realizing something of the feeling that exists wherever any considerable body of Oriental immigrants is found upon this continent, we venture to say that the treaties and legislation of both Canada and the United States must, for some time to come, be made to conform very largely to this strong public sentiment.

Strengthens the Throat Assists Public Speakers

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

TAKE THIS LETTER TO MY MOTHER.

Take this letter to my mother,
Far across the deep blue sea,
It will fill her heart with pleasure,
She'll be glad to hear from me.
How she wept when last we parted,
How her heart was filled with pain,
When she said "Good-by, God bless you.
We may never meet again."

Take this letter to my mother,
It will fill her heart with joy;
Tell her that her prayers are answered,
God protects her absent boy.
Tell her to be glad and cheerful,
Pray for me where'er I roam,
And ere long, I'll turn my footsteps
Back toward my dear old home.

Take this letter to my mother,
It is filled with words of love.
If on earth I never meet her,
Tell her that we'll meet above,
Where there is no hour of parting,
All is peace and love, and joy.
God will bless my dear old mother
And protect her wand'ring boy.

THE FIRST PLUG HAT

It Caused a Riot and Arrest—Popularity Seems on the Wane

The shiny silk cylindrical hat, sometimes called "topper," "high hat," "plug," "high dicer," "stovepipe," or "four-gallon hat" by the irreverent, seems fated to disappear, after little more than one century of existence. In England, the place of its origin, it was long esteemed the very highest badge of respectability, so much admired that 'varsity crews rowed races and 'varsity elevens played cricket in correct, shiny bell-topper.

This form of headgear was first seen in London on January 15, 1797, when John Hetherington, a haberdasher, emerged from his shop in the Strand wearing a silk hat, and was promptly surrounded by an astonished mob of such proportions that he was arrested and charged before the Lord Mayor with inciting to riot. The officer who arrested Hetherington testified that he "appeared upon a public highway wearing upon his head a tall silk structure, which he called a silk hat, having a shiny luster, and calculated to frighten timid people. Several women fainted at the unusual sight, while children screamed, dogs yelped, and a young son of Cordwainer Thomas who was returning from a chandler's shop, was thrown down by the crowd which collected and had his arm broken." The defendant pleaded that he was merely exercising a right, possessed by every Englishman, to appear in any head-dress he chose, and had not violated any law. He was, nevertheless, bound over in $2,500 to keep the peace. This verdict aroused the wrath of the Times. In its issue of January 16, 1797, the hat worn by Hetherington is described as "an advance in dress reform, and one which is bound, sooner or later, to stamp its character upon the entire community. The new hat is destined to work a revolution in headgear, and we think the officers of the Crown erred in placing the defendant under arrest."

ONLY UNIVERSITY IN SIBERIA

One Big University Supplies Huge Russian District

Tomsk, the agricultural centre of Siberia, boasts of the only university in that country. It was opened twenty-six years ago, and is so well endowed that tuition fees amount to only $50 a year. It has a library containing 110,000 volumes, probably the biggest collection of books in the northern half of Asia. There are two courses, medicine and law. The former is the more important and with it are connected well-equipped laboratories and a biological institute. At the university hospital may be obtained the only Pasteur treatment for [illegible] bite that is available in [illegible] rabies is rife, this is no [illegible] to the settlers. A great institute of technology and school of mines, too, is to be found at Tomsk. It has an enrollment of 1,700 students, many of them from the far-away region of the Caucasus, in southern Russia.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

SANITARY ASH SIFTER

Inventor Claims That It Will Not Fill Air With Dust

Anyone who has ever sifted ashes knows what a dusty job it is under ordinary conditions. The dust from the ashes permeates the air and gets into the hair as well as the lungs. A hardware man has devised an ash sifter which he declares has none of these objectionable features. The sifter fits on top of the ash can and consists of a hopper and a hood, with a chute leading out of the opposite end of the hood from the hopper. The sifter is placed on top of the can, where it fits closely, and the scuttle of ashes is dumped into the hopper, the lid of which is quickly closed. By turning a crank at the side the ashes are thoroughly sifted, the worthless particles dropping into the can and the coal being carried out through the chute into the scuttle, which is hung up in waiting.

Interesting Discovery in Recent Excavations at Palatine

Another of Professor Boni's discoveries in his excavations of Palatine is reported. He has re-opened a house of the early Imperial period which was partly uncovered in 1731 and subsequently reburied. Professor Boni is convinced from the inscriptions and other evidence that it was the residence of Tiberius Caesar and Julia, the daughter of Augustus. Amongst the minor evidences which he has discovered are luxurious fittings which correspond to the capricious, exacting character of Julia, who, according to Suetonius, Tiberius reluctantly married. A large bath and hot and cold water supplies exist among the fittings. There is an underground cell beneath the house which Professor Boni tentatively identifies as the prison where Drusus starved to death as narrated by Tacitus.

If a man has loved and lost, he is apt to consider marriage a failure.

The New Improved COLUMBIA Tone Arm

THE old Columbia tone arm had a single joint—giving play both sideways and up and down. It was better than any "gooseneck" attachment near the reproducer. Our newest improvement, however, making the "breech lock" tone arm like a cornet, gives the Columbia a tone none other can approach. It is the smallest tone arm in use and tapers to a smaller inlet at the reproducer than is possible with any other. This scientifically devised improvement over the "guessed at" proportions of less perfect tone arm secures a clearer, fuller tone. Let us demonstrate with the instrument how important this feature is. With no "gooseneck" or other loose joint to rattle we do not have to use a tone-destroying rubber collar on the reproducer to muffle the machine noises — THERE ARE NONE TO MUFFLE.

LOOK TO CANADA FOR THEIR HORSES

Loose Methods of Racing Across Border Sending Horses Northward

The American thoroughbred industry seems to have been shot to pieces. There are statistics that in the states of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia where the thoroughbred formerly flourished, there are not enough thoroughbred race horses left to make it worth talking about. And this state of affairs has been brought about entirely by the loose methods of conducting race track meetings and the consequent strenuous reform measures. There is no immediate indication that the thoroughbred will amount to anything very much in the near future in the United States. What horses of the breeding classes there are left are gradually finding their way to Canada. They find their way into the hands of Canadian owners and their progeny will be raced as Canadian breds. And chances are, that by the time the racing laws of the United States have been remodelled the Americans will have to look to Canada for their horses, and much good money for the Canadian owner should be the result.

GREEN FOOD FOR HENS

If you have some hens, and want eggs, you must feed your chickens green food. During the summer and early fall you can give them plenty of grass cuttings, but during winter and early spring months there is nothing green out-of-doors.

The best way to supply the necessary green stuff is to buy some oats or wheat, make a bed of boards and raise your own food for the hens.

On the bottom of the shallow box put several layers of newspapers, liberally watered. Soak the oats or wheat overnight in water and spread them on the wet newspapers. Sprinkle often. In about four days the grain will begin to sprout. A few days farther along will see the green shoots several inches high. Cut off as much as needed, taking both grain and sprouts; feed well scattered so that each hen will get a share.

A good plan is to have more than one sprouting bed, so that while you are feeding one another may be growing up and still another may be starting to sprout.

Keep them in the warmest spot in the cellar and in the sunshine if possible.

Why Clocks Stop

The reason why mantlepiece clocks so often get out of order is so obvious that it is strange that attention to it has not been drawn before. A clockmaker says:

"It is because mantlepieces are rarely level. If a clock meant for a mantlepiece is not placed in an exactly horizontal position it is sure to go wrong. When the clock gains or loses because of its slanting position, people regularly move the hands forward or backward, as the case may be, in order to adjust it. Eventually the clock's hands are moved about so much that the mechanism gets out of order, and the clock refuses even to tick.

"Watches and travelling clocks are constructed differently from the stationary clock, and they will go in any position. That is why they are relied upon more than the ornamental mantlepiece clock."

MEN OF ALL SORTS

But Not of Conditions, and Hartridge Was the One Among Many.

By H. M. EGBERT.

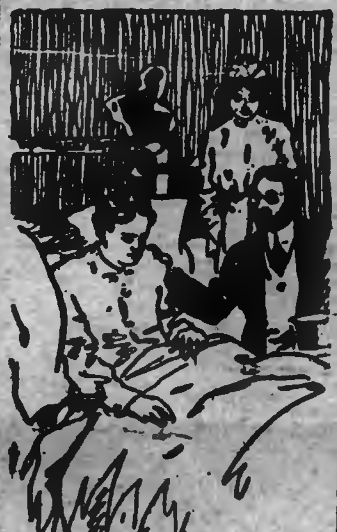
Hartridge knew that he would be chosen, though there had been thirty-seven applicants, by the head nurse's count, in answer to the hospital's brief advertisement. Thirty-six others! Hartridge had never realized before how low he had sunk, until he actually found himself sitting in a line with them in the reception room. There were men of all sorts and ages, but not of conditions.

The men rose awkwardly as the physician sauntered in, accompanied by the head nurse. He looked the men over as though they were animals. "You can go—we don't want you," he said to the first. "Nor you," he added, to the next. The third man looked more reputable, but when the doctor approached he detected the smell of spirits upon his breath. "Nor you—nor your kind," he continued angrily. So he went down the line, eliminating the majority at a glance. He looked at Hartridge and passed him over and continued his monologue until at last there remained only Hartridge and three others.

"Now, men," said the doctor, "it's between you four. You read the advertisement; we want a healthy man for blood transfusion, to save a woman's life. It won't be a trifle, either. It's going to mean more than you estimate, to lose a couple of quarts of blood. Don't think you'll earn your five hundred easily. You may die. Now then, does anyone want to go?"

There was a pause; then two men shuffled out awkwardly. Poor, broken-spirited creatures though they were; the love of life was strong in them. Dr. Briggs looked at the two who remained, and his choice fell upon Hartridge. He selected him. Two minutes later he was taking down his pedigree.

"You're willing to sign an agreement absolving us from further responsibility?" he asked, when the medical tests were ended. "Good! Have you any friends to be communicated with, in case the operation is unsuccessful?"



"Dr. Briggs Has Spoken to Me About You."

Hartridge knew what that meant. "No, sir," he answered.

"But why do you want to risk your life for five hundred dollars?" continued Dr. Briggs. "Are you out of work?"

"No," answered Hartridge quietly; "out of prison."

The doctor looked at him keenly.

"I was sent away ten months ago for forgery," said Hartridge, in explanation. "I was a bank clerk in the Merchants' and Oriental—underpaid, wretchedly poor, and married. I wanted to play the market, and I lost. The judge let me off with a year as a first offender. My wife divorced me. Now I want the five hundred to go west."

Half an hour later Hartridge, bathed, clothed in a clean nightrobe, was lying in bed, waiting the summons to the theater. His nurse enlightened him as to the process of the operation.

Strapped in his stretcher, he was carried to the operating room and transferred there to the glass table. On one side of this a flimsy screen of linen had been erected, and on the other side, so near that he could feel the screen tremble with every breath she took, was the patient. Hartridge wondered whether she were young or old. Somehow he obtained the impression that she was a young woman. He felt a sudden dignity in his position; the thought of the robbery made him wince now. He who had done so much harm and ruined one woman's life—might he not have gratuitously given this much to save another? After an inappreciable interval the surgeon began his work. Hartridge felt the [illegible] sting of the lancet; he saw the other doctor's head over the top of the screen as he performed the same service.

He felt comfortable. His mind, more active than was its wont, recurred incessantly to the woman not a cubit distant, so near that once his hand touched hers, with only the frail linen barrier between them. The money had now become a hideous menace to his peace of mind, robbing him at once of his self-esteem, so much as was left of it, and of his chance of making reparation for his sin. [illegible] He must tell the surgeon instantly. He tried to speak to him, but there was an uncanny silence in the room which he did not dare disturb. Something had gone wrong with the lights, too, for all had gone out except a tiny globe in one corner, which burned with a strange sputtering sound that seemed to keep time with the beating of his heart. And all this sacrifice was vain, for he was selling his soul—selling his right to reparation for five hundred dollars. He must stop the operation and make a new bargain. He found his voice at last and shouted, but the light was roaring like a dynamo and the sound drowned his cries. He wrenched his arm away and—

"How are you feeling?" asked the nurse.

He opened his eyes. He was back in his bed and the daylight was streaming in through the open window near his head. He looked at her, astonished, uncertain.

"You fainted," she explained. "People generally do. But you'll be all right in a little while. It's only ten minutes since they brought you back."

"But the operation—?"

"Perfectly successful."

"I didn't—do anything? Didn't I shout or struggle?"

Hartridge was silent for awhile.

"Nurse," he said presently, "do you—do you think she would see me before she goes?"

"Why?" asked the nurse bluntly. "That's never allowed, Mr. Hartridge. She wasn't allowed to see you on the table—they threw a blanket over you. If you'll think a little you'll understand that that's the only thing possible."

"But if she wanted to—" he faltered.

"Well, of course, in that case I suppose she could. But why do you want to see her?"

"Because," said Hartridge slowly, "I want to thank her for doing something that she never dreamed of. She looks on me, no doubt, as you all do—as a convenience, as a poor man who has sold something which he possessed for money. There can be no thought of obligation on either side, of course. But I'm not going to take the money. I'm a jail-bird. I've just come out of the penitentiary where I served a year's sentence for forgery. She has given me back my self-respect. I feel that I've done some good in the world at last—I can't very well explain it, but I want to thank her. Won't you tell her at least?"

The nurse was looking at him very strangely. "Yes, I'll tell her," he heard her say, and he resigned himself to the feeling of intense weariness that was creeping over him.

Two days passed. Hartridge made no further reference to the fulfilment of his request. He did tell Dr. Briggs that he would not accept the money.

"There's a gentleman coming to see you this morning," the nurse announced triumphantly that day.

"A gentleman?" repeated Hartridge with a puzzled frown. "I don't know anyone. It must be a mistake. What is his name?"

But the nurse would not tell Hartridge his name. At twelve o'clock, however, the ward doors were thrown open to the stream of visitors who came to see the patients. Hartridge, who had been dozing, heard his name spoken and looked up. A man with very well remembered features was standing by his bed.

"Mr. Hartridge—my dear fellow—" he began, somewhat nervously.

"I want to tell you," he said, "that Dr. Briggs has spoken with me about you and made clear some things that I did not understand last year. If I had realized your circumstances I might have been less harsh in exacting justice. None of us can afford to exact that to the uttermost. They tell me you have refused compensation for your brave sacrifice. Hartridge, we are starting a branch bank at Clifton. I want you to go there as assistant cashier. Nobody will know of your past. That is all atoned for. You will go with our complete confidence—and at a salary adequate to support yourself and your wife comfortably."

"My wife?" said Hartridge bitterly. "Perhaps you don't know that—"

"Here's somebody come to see you and thank you for your—for her life," said the nurse, coming up softly. Hartridge glanced up. A woman came swiftly toward his bed and sank down beside him. She flung her arms round his neck and drew down his head to her breast and her tears, falling on him, washed his soul clean at last from all its bitter memories.

Return of the Sea Serpent

Capt. Ruser, who is now commander of the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria and has been designated to command the colossal Imperator, says in his log of July 5, 1912 (as quoted in Annalen der Hydrographie), that at 6:30 a. m. of that day he, as well as his first officer and an Elbe pilot who was on board, saw a sea serpent in the water close alongside the ship, then off Prawle point. The creature was twenty feet long and appeared to be engaged in combat with some other marine animal, as it was lashing the sea violently with its tail. Its color was grayish blue on the back and whitish under the belly. The body was between a foot and a foot and a half in diameter. Capt. Ruser says that the whole length of the animal was visible, and there could be no mistake about its reptilian form.

Synopsis of Canadian North-West Land Regulations.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Girl's School Coat

This school jacket for a little girl is made of black and white goods costing 70 cents a yard, and it is lined with plain blue alpaca at 50 cents a yard. Button molds and cords made of the same material finish the neck and sleeves. It takes 1½ yards of plaid material and two yards of plain.

It can be made for less than $2, though it could hardly be purchased ready made for three times that price.

BOOKS FOR QUEEN MARY AND ROYAL CHILDREN

The Business of Selection Always in the Hands of a Court Official

In all King George's domains there is said to be no more voracious reader than Queen Mary.

In spite of the innumerable demands on her time, her Majesty manages to read most of the novels of to-day that really count, and almost always has a serious work in hand, too, such as a book of biography or one devoted to science or travel.

But the Queen does not choose her reading herself. The business of selecting it and also that of Princess Mary and the young princes—with the exception of the heir to throne—is in the hands of a court official. This is the Hon. John Fortescue, and the author of several books.

Since 1906 the Hon. John has been librarian at Windsor Castle, and he went to India with the King and Queen, and wrote the official account of the Durbar, which was severely "roasted" by the newspapers on account of its author's tendency to dilate on the color of ceremonial carpets and the length of court trains to the exclusion of more human details.

However, there was some excuse for the Hon. John, for it is hard to imagine a more thankless job than writing about such a ceremonial with a whole battery of royal and official blue pencils ready to pounce on the slightest "indiscretion," or disclosure of what went on behind the scenes.

One reads every now and then that Queen Mary has accepted a copy of [illegible]'s book, but whether she ever reads it or not depends on the royal librarian. Every week he sends her a list of works which he believes she will enjoy reading, including suggestions about books for the royal children, and we hear that he has his work cut out to keep up with the literary appetites of the Queen and her youngsters, all of whom, the little princes especially, are inclined to be bookworms. Nor is the Hon. John Fortescue's job an enviable one.

There is always some one at court whose business it is to recommend the right books to the young princes and princesses, and probably Queen Mary has no time to bother with book reviews, and is glad to be told what is worth reading. As for King George, he rarely takes up a book, and when he does wants a straightaway story of adventure.

LAST OF BONNOT'S GANG

Loaded Revolvers Taken From Under Pillow of Sleeping Bandit

The French police quite unexpectedly captured the last of the notorious Bonnot-Garnier gang of motor bandits, who over a year ago terrorized Paris.

Investigation had been made into a burglary, and the police got on the track of the receiver of the booty. He lived in the Montmartre district, and the officers were warned that he was an Anarchist, and would surely be armed.

They, therefore, waited until they judged he was asleep. Then a locksmith opened the door noiselessly, and they were able to creep up to the man's bedside and remove two loaded revolvers from his pillow before they awakened and arrested him.

He was absolutely stupified when, at the sight of the police, he reached for his firearms, and found them gone; but not more staggered than were the police themselves, when, under a false name and an appearance completely changed by dyed hair and moustache, they found the suspected receiver was none other than a prominent member of the Bonnot-Garnier gang named Mény, for whom they had been searching for months. Arms and ammunition were found under his bed.

FROZEN YET ALIVE

Remarkable Experiments That Have Been Made With Fish

Fishes belong to the class of animals that have variable body temperature, depending on the temperature of their environment. In extreme cold they assume a rigid condition, in which all of the vital functions are suspended, while life still remains present. During several months of each year some of the great rivers of Siberia are frozen solid to the bottom, but many of the fishes imprisoned in the ice retain their vitality, and resume their active life when the ice melts in the spring. This fact has suggested experiments in the freezing of live fish for transportation. Many years ago the celebrated physicist Pictet, of Geneva, put fresh water fishes into a tub of water, which he kept liquid at the freezing point for 24 hours and then allowed to freeze slowly into a solid block of ice, which afterward was cooled gradually. When the ice was melted, a month or even two months afterward, the fishes began to swim as briskly as they did before freezing, and showed no symptom of ill health. Similar experiments have recently been made in France. The fishes are placed in water which is kept near the freezing point for a few hours, then at the freezing point for 15 to 18 hours, and finally frozen by immersing the vessel in a freezing mixture, producing a cake of ice a few inches thick, in which the frozen fishes are embedded. This cake is wrapped in cloth and surrounded with a heat-insulating packing, to prevent melting during transportation. It is necessary to thaw the ice very slowly and to keep the water near the freezing point for several hours, in order to preserve the life of the fishes. Even those which do not survive are in a perfect state of preservation.

DUCAL PALACE REVEALED

"Suffolk," or "Farmhouse," Once Home of Mary Tudor a Lodging House

While continually growing on the outskirts into startling newness, London still holds undivulged mysteries hidden in its ancient quarters. Strange accidents, however, are frequently bringing to light unsuspected romance in stone, and indications of the storied past.

The district of Southwark, well known because of its fine old cathedral and its memories of Charles Dickens, has lately given another picturesque secret to the world. A shoeblack died suddenly in a common lodging-house. The coroner startled the members of the jury by announcing to them the historic interest of the quaint old place where the shoeblack died. This was the "Farm House," a strange title for a place now [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] acres of [illegible] bricks and mortar. To find it is like looking for a needle in a haystack. Only by dint of pertinacious search in the neighborhood of the site of the old Marshalsea [illegible] [illegible] Farm House reached, [illegible] through a slit of brickwork [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] what is probably the only relic of Suffolk House, a notable mansion of Henry VIII.'s day. The authorities [illegible] that the Farm House was built about 1518 by Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, as part of the palace for his royal bride, Mary Tudor. [illegible] [illegible], it was partly pulled down and small cottages were built on its site. In course of time it became the haunt of robbers and small debtors, who shielded themselves under the rights of sanctuary, supposed to be conferred by the fact that it was once the site of a royal residence.

Novel Silver Wedding Gift

Mr. Leonard R. Franklin, of London, celebrated his silver wedding by presenting to ten poor girls in Paddington Priory $125 each to enable them to be married. The dowries are to be given to those who would otherwise be unable to enter into the bonds of matrimony for some time to come. [illegible] [illegible] is to be drawn for the distribution of the gifts.

The rat had been shot [illegible] the other side of the wall [illegible] [illegible] of the body mixed with [illegible] struck him in the face. He was [illegible] receiving a charge of shot.

Farmer Was Wise.

"A farmer took out a policy of fire insurance on his barn. After a loss had due proofs the company came to settle or adjust the loss, but took advantage of its option under the contract to build a new barn.

"Subsequently a life insurance company sought to have him insure his life in favor of his wife. 'O, no,' he says, 'you don't catch me a second time. If I'd die you would come around here and offer to get a new husband for her.'"

A New Use for Sandpaper

Keep a sheet of medium sandpaper handy where you wash dishes, and for browned or burned places on enameled-ware rub the spots with a small piece of the sandpaper and it will be found easier and quicker than using a scouring powder.

John Kaley, for many years a respected farmer in Cambridge, died at Guelph aged 107 years. There is no doubt about the old gentleman's advanced years, his age being attested by a record in a well-kept family Bible.

Fashion in China.

The Chinese have always had a "philosophy of clothes;" their garments are symbols. Consequently, if a Chinaman is a revolutionist, and wishes to express his frankest criticism of the old regime (and to indicate that he is open as day to all the influences of the west, he cuts off his queue, steps into a little tailor's shop and orders a straw hat, a celluloid collar and a pair of cuffs, colored socks, a safety razor and a pair of American boots. These modes of Europe are China's "dernier cri." So much so that the "tailors' shops producing crude semi-foreign apparel," which here (according to the British consular reports) "spring up in almost every important street," are inundated with orders to supply "outward manifestations of a progressive spirit," and the local agents of British sewing machines are not able to supply fast enough the machines required to keep pace with the demand.

Dainty Negligee

The model shown in the illustration is wearing a beautiful negligee, made with a white brocaded petticoat with a Greek key in silver about the bottom. Over this is a white crepe de chine tunic with a wide sash with the silver Greek key about the edges. This kind of negligee would be very easy to make by any woman who has the knack of dressmaking. Made of white cotton voile and worn over printed voile, it would be especially pretty and very inexpensive.

HANDY CANDY BOX

Separate Compartments Display Every Piece at Once

An Illinois man has designed a candy box which displays each piece of candy when the box is opened. The receptacle is made in three sections, two of them hinged, and each section is divided into two compartments. The middle section is hinged on the lowest section and folds in upon it, a lid closing it so that the contents are not spilled. The top section is hinged to the top of the body of the box and folds in upon the middle section. This also has a lid to keep the contents in. For assorted candies such a box provides good display, as the different kinds of confections may be kept separate. Furthermore, with every sweet in view it is possible for a fastidious woman to select which she likes best without having to burrow down to the bottom of three or four layers.

RED HAIR FEUDS

Do Women of Titian Locks Wed Only Dark-complexioned Men?

When one red-haired girl meets another red-haired girl, does love fly out of the window?

Women with gleaming Titian tresses are said by a scientist to have a natural antipathy not only to all other women with red hair, but also to red-haired men.

Indeed, so intense is this dislike of red hair by red-haired people that they are, he says, seldom known to marry. This dislike, it is contended, is far more deep-seated than the hesitancy of men and women in marrying persons of their own coloring.

It is seldom in England that two red-headed people marry. But if red-haired women object to red-haired men, the latter, it appears, do not have the same dislike of red-haired women.

One city man with red hair confessed that he certainly likes red-haired women—almost prefers them, in fact, to dark-haired women.

But a young woman with gleaming red-gold locks was emphatic on the subject.

"I would never marry a red-haired man under any consideration," she said. Two other girls with beautiful red hair also expressed strong disapproval of the red-haired man.

"We cannot agree with the statement," said Mrs. Gotto, of the Society of Eugenics. "In fact, we cannot yet give an opinion on the matter because the research into the question of red hair is almost in its infancy.

"There is a very strong interest felt in the question by eugenists, and close investigations are being made. Red hair has decided character about it."

Red-haired men and women frequently choose as life partners those who have hair of a flaxen type.

King George Gives Medals.

The King presented to the Royal United Service Institute in Whitehall a number of valuable medals, including Queen Victoria's jubilee medal of 1887, the diamond jubilee medal of 1897, King Edward VII. coronation medal, 1911, and the Royal Victorian Medals issued by Queen Victoria, King Edward and King George.

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

"Three months ago I was a weak, [illegible] man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had [illegible] and indigestion. At night I would often waken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation. I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised.

NOTHING HELPED.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Mr. Richard Crawford of Lakefield met with a serious accident recently while driving home with Mr. W. J. [illegible], when they had been doing [illegible] work. Their horse became frightened at an automobile and ran away. Mr. Crawford jumped from the buggy, the wheels of which passed over him. It was found that he had been injured internally and was removed to Nicholls Hospital. He underwent an operation and is progressing as well as can be expected.

A RECEPTION.

Last night at the George street Methodist church, a reception was given to the Rev. and Mrs. Peever. A large number of the congregation were present, and helped to make the reception a hearty one. Musical numbers of various descriptions were rendered by several of the members of the choir and congregation and refreshments were served. Appropriate addresses were made to Rev. Peever, to which he suitably replied.

The Primary and Beginners staff, including Cradle Roll superintendents of the City Sabbath Schools, are making preparations for a High Tea to be held on Tuesday, Oct. 21st, in St. Paul's lecture room, at which Miss Laine of Toronto will be present. Miss Laine who is a specialist in these departments of Sabbath school work, will have a whole evening for the display of samples of mechanical aids and for the presentation of approved methods of work for the grades presented. Invitations will be sent to the teachers and officers of the grades referred to.

Forest Fires Again Raging

Yesterday, word was received at The Times office that the forest fires in the north country are again raging, having broken out afresh, and are likely to do considerable damage. The fires have broken afresh somewhat scattered, but are causing considerable destruction to property in the north part of the Burleigh country. In several cases, the settlers and residents are devoting their time and energies to saving their homes.

Appointed District Manager

Mr. George Dunor, who has for some years been associated with the North American Assurance Co., in Campbellford, has been appointed district manager, in the place of Mr. R. J. Kidd, who has resigned, in order to devote his time to the growing real estate and general insurance business. Mr. Dunor has been with the company for a period of many years, and will find room to develop and improve the business to a larger and more successful advantage in a larger field. He will move his family to Peterborough in a short time.

Re-Arranging Charges.

The Presbytery of Peterborough met in an adjourned meeting in St. Paul's church on Thursday, Oct. 9, to especially consider the re-arranging of the Springville and Omemee charges. As is well known this matter has been in an unsettled condition for over a year. An arrangement was entered into on Thursday. It is that Springville and Lakevale be united and that Omemee and Mt. Pleasant should now stand alone without the assistance of Lakevale. The parties concerned, were at the close of the discussion, called to the bar of the Presbytery to express their opinions, and all accepted the decision of the Presbytery and seemed happy over the decision reached.

Dr. "Guy" in Custody.

Detectives Newhall and [illegible] took into custody yesterday afternoon, a man well known to Peterborough public in the person of "Dr." Guy, on a charge of vagrancy. The doctor had a few minutes before, been preaching a sermon to another knight of the Sons of Rest, when suddenly a rude hand from around a dark corner took our worthy street-corner leader into custody. He is well known to many citizens in Peterborough. His principal and only work is done around the barrooms, in which places he delights to dwell. He [illegible] be [illegible] to tell Magistrate Dumble, in which vicinity work has taken place for the past few weeks, and his worship will probably tell him a [illegible] place he will work for a few weeks in future. IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomach or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

Mr. T. Lancaster, of the Havelock Standard, was in the city, and paid The Times a fraternal call.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wood motored from Keene yesterday afternoon and are the guests of Mrs. John Wood, Belmont avenue.

Mrs. (Dr.) Neal was at home to her many friends yesterday afternoon at her residence on Rubidge street. She was assisted in receiving by her guest Miss Gill.

Mrs. Robbins, of Pittsburg, Pa., with a party of friends, are occupying a summer cottage at Jack's Lake during the autumn.

City Clerk Armstrong, was at Toronto, on Thursday, and motored home to Peterborough in company with Mr. J. J. Duffus.

POLICE COURT NEWS

John Irwin's address for one week will be the County Gaol. He was remanded yesterday morning on a charge of being found drunk. Chief Thompson was of the opinion that a week in jail would be of material benefit to the accused.

Thomas E. Perkins was fined five dollars and costs, amounting in all to eight dollars and seventy-five cents, for disorderly conduct.

One year in the Mercer was the sentence meted out to Mrs. Peter Munroe by Magistrate Dumble at the Police Court yesterday morning, on the charge of being a common prostitute.

Mrs. Munroe was arrested a week ago in company with a man and woman by the name of Wallace who claimed their home was in Campbellford. The Wallace couple were able to give satisfactory account of themselves and left the city at the Magistrate's request, but the Munroe woman was not so fortunate and as a result she was remanded to jail for a week.

The case of Harry Hutchinson, a local man charged with allowing his horse to run at large, contrary to the by-law, was dismissed owing to the fact that sufficient evidence was given to show that the horse was locked in a field and that the fence had been tampered with.

APSLEY

Tuesday was auto day in Apsley, three or four passed through that day, and the last but not by any means the least, was the one that brought up our genial and hustling friend, Mr. J. G. Baled hay is being brought up from the front for the P. L. Co.'s camps, and on the way through stop over night at B. F. Coone's.

The other night some young lads found what they thought was a prize in the shape of a bottle of booze, wired in a bag to one of the bales of hay. To get it quickly they cut the bag and got out two bottles and sampled the larger one but alas it proved to be a bottle of horse colic medicine, and the smaller one was a liniment. They will recover. Just the same, if anything of the kind occurs again, there will be a case for the police magistrate.

It's a good idea to see that your buggy is well oiled before starting out on a fishing trip. That's what Anvil Jim thinks now, as he and W. P. started for Jack's lake, and after going about a mile or so, were stalled, one of the wheels refused to go round. There was nothing for it but pack the provisions, tackle, etc., and tramp the rest of the way, while Alex managed to get the rig back home. Judging from the language they used when they found they had to walk the balance of the road to the lake, Alex does not think they will have any great success fishing.

AUNT SALLY'S ADVICE TO BEAUTY SEEKERS

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

W. C. D. says: "My face is freckled the year round; nothing I try seems to help much. Is there anything that will really take off these horrid spots?" Have you tried the treatment recommended to Minnie L.? I've known this to remove very obstinate freckles.

Ellen B. asks: "Why should I do for deep lines under my eyes and across my forehead?" Such lines, and all wrinkles, are best obliterated by bathing affected portions in a good astringent and tonic lotion, which strengthens and draws in the relaxed tissues. Here's a reliable formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, ½ pt. witch hazel; mix and use daily until entirely relieved.

Minnie L.: The undue redness as well as the pimples, may easily be removed by using ordinary mercolized wax. Apply nightly like cold cream and erase mornings with warm water. Soon you'll have a beautifully white, clear, soft and velvety complexion. Mercolized wax, sold by all druggists, is better than cosmetics for any complexion trouble. One ounce suffices for most conditions.—Woman's Realm.

MUSIC and DRAMA

RETURN OF THE FAVORITES

Next Thursday, Oct. 16th, evening, the attraction booked for the Grand Opera House is the famous Guy Brothers Minstrels. This season Geo. Guy has gathered together the best company that he has ever engaged, and assures the theatre-goers of Peterborough a good evening's pleasure. The show is entirely different from former years and well worthy of your patronage, as every member is first-class in his work and each act was carefully selected for this season's tour.

At the rise of the curtain you see a beautiful stage setting, with all new scenery and handsome costumes, all of which blend and help to make a very pretty scene. Albert Guy, the favorite interlocutor, will present the eight endmen, who are the best white colored comedians that could be secured, and they know how to entertain you. Their songs, dances and jokes are right up-to-the-minute. The soloists, who were engaged some months previous to the opening of the season, are trained vocalists, and will be heard for the first time in this city. The olio consists of twelve big vaudeville acts that will please every one. It is seldom that any company carries as large a number of performers as do the Guy Brothers this season, among whom are Herman, known as the Human Bird, a European novelty, the paraphernalia for this wonderful act alone weighing over fifteen hundred pounds. Vally & Arnold, a very clever dancing team, will also appear; these men have more different steps than any team on the stage to-day. The Imperial Quartette will be heard here for the first time. Their selections are the best ever heard and worth going miles to hear. The Davis Brothers have a magnificent stage setting for their grand musical act; they play nearly every kind of musical instrument to perfection, making it one of the best acts on the road. Harry Sims, a real comedian, will also make his first appearance here with this company; he is a first-class entertainer. It is hard to say enough for this attraction this year, and it is sure to be greeted by a full house as usual. Don't miss the grand street parade at noon, and hear the celebrated Silver Concert Band. The reserved seats now now on sale at Box Office.

FOREST FIRES HAVE BEEN VERY DESTRUCTIVE

Mr. R. C. Strickland, manager of the Burleigh Ranching Co., Ltd., was in the city yesterday on his way north. To The Times, Mr. Strickland stated, or rather, was very optimistic n regard to the adaptability of the northern country for ranching purposes. He said that there were 2,000,000 acres of land that could be adapted to the raising of cattle. The company shipped a car load of cattle to Toronto a few days ago, and the market prices were very satisfactory. The forest fires of the early summer, destroyed a considerable portion of the pasture most suitable to cattle grazing, and this was really forcing the sale of a considerable portion of stock.

Mr. Strickland thinks that the government should appoint a different class of men to combat the fires that have been so destructive, and the people who light fires should be punished, and it is only in this way he said that any substantial relief can be obtained. Tens of thousands of acres of land and property, timber, etc., have been destroyed, destruction which has been caused for the most part, either through outrageous carelessness or deliberate incendiarism.

HAMBOURG CONCERT WAS SUCCESSFUL

A fairly large audience was present at the Conservatory of Music last night to hear the concert by the Hambourg Trio, which is patronized by Royalty. The renditions were in every way pleasing, and delighted the audience greatly. The public of Peterborough were slow to learn what a musical treat was awaiting them and are surely slow to grasp at such opportunities as the one which presented itself last night.

VOLTURNO, OWNED BY C. N. R. TAKES FIRE IN MID OCEAN, NO CANADIANS ABOARD

Wireless Brings Ten Ships to Rescue and They Take Off Over Five Hundred Passengers and Pick Up Many From Water

Liverpool, Oct. 11.—One hundred and thirty-six men, women and children lost their lives when the Uranium line steamship Volturno, bound from the Mackenzie and Mann interests, Toronto, caught fire in mid-Atlantic on Thursday and burned to the water's edge on Friday. Ten liners, led by the Cunarder Carmania, Captain Barr, stood by the stricken ship and battled for many hours in a gale to rescue the passengers and crew, but were able to take off and pick up only 521 persons.

While hundreds of passengers aboard the rescue fleet crowded the rails and looked on spellbound with horror, the captains manoeuvred in desperate attempts to get alongside of the Volturno, but were unable to do so until yesterday at daybreak. Captain Barr then ran a life boat under the stern of the Volturno and took off eleven passengers. Other captains followed. The survivors taken from the Volturno as well as those picked up in the only two life boats that got away during the fire were distributed among the rescuing liners.

Again the wireless played a leading part in the drama, and by its agency and the heroism of the captains who responded to the call, the lives of 521 of those on board the Volturno were saved.

The Volturno was owned by the Canadian Northern Steamship Company, but had been chartered to the Uranium line. Officials of the latter company declared this morning that those on board comprised 24 cabin and 540 steerage passengers, with a crew of 93, making a total of 657. When the Carmania reached the vicinity of the Volturno at noon she found the forward end of the distressed vessel burning fiercely. The flaming ship was at the same time rolling heavily, while her propellers were fouled with boats tackle used in lowering her six lifeboats.

FAMILY HOODOOED BY BROKEN ARMS

All But Two Have Suffered—"They Will Get There," Father Says.

Redding, Cal., Oct. 11.—Irb C. Robinson, sr., of Harrison Gulch believes that his family is hoodooed by broken arms.

His son Clifford broke his right arm two years ago, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. M. J. Walker, broke her arm three years ago.

The older Robinson has two children left and he says he believes they are slated to suffer similarly in due time.

BRIDE FORGOT NAME

Man Disappears After Being Married One Day—Wife Asks Police Aid

Temple, Tex., Oct. 11.—A woman who claimed to have been married at Belton the night before to a man whose name she declared to have forgotten, applied at the local police for assistance in locating and claiming the spouse. She claims to have lost recollections of all of his name as nomenclature is concerned.

According to her story she was married at Belton, came to Temple with her husband, stayed for the night, and when she awoke this morning the husband was not there; and, stranger still, she discovered that she had completely forgotten his name.

She averred that, despite this trivial incident, she loved the missing one dearly and wanted him to return to her.

The police have agreed to notify the women of any stray husbands that they might run across corresponding to her description.

COUGHED UP BULLET WHILE TESIFYING

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 11.—While testifying against E. N. Pigg, a car inspector, who shot him on Sept. 12, Clifford Johnston of Wister, Okla., a stationary engineer, was seized with a violent fit of coughing which ended with a bullet that had lodged in his neck being expelled.

The bullet had lodged at the base of the brain and for weeks had defied all efforts of physicians to dislodge it. Physicians say that if it had not been expelled it probably would have driven Johnston insane.

Pigg was fined $50 as a result of the shooting. He mistook Johnston for a burglar. Johnston had lost his way en route to Van Buren and was looking for a telephone.

LEASED FROM C.N.R.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—"The S.S. Volturno was leased a year or so ago by the Uranium line from the Canadian Northern," said R. V. Vaughan of the Canadian Northern Co. this morning.

The Volturno was built at the Fairfield Works at Glasgow in 1906 and was reckoned a pretty tidy vessel. The local agent in Toronto is J. Garfunkel, of Queen street west.

Never Before Have Thousands of Persons Watched a Great Vessel Burning in Mid-Ocean

New York, Oct. 11.—At nightfall the ten vessels, all alight, were within reaching distance of the Volturno, but they might as well have been at the points were they first picked up the wireless call, for all the good they were able to do after their hurried trip. In the terrific wind and sea it required skilful seamanship to keep the half score ponderous vessels out of each other's way.

Never before have thousands of persons watched a great vessel burning in mid-ocean, with her passengers and crew aboard and helpless. No more dramatic sight could be imagined.

At every available point of vantage on the ten vessels tense watchers clustered heedless of the biting wind and the spume and spray that whipped their watching and waiting. Out of the bowels of the vessels piled coal trimmers, oilers, firemen and engineers to gaze spellbound upon a spectacle such as it has been given few men to see. While the ships themselves were idle with engines moving just enough to give steerage way, the commanders and their subordinates were keenly alive and alert. Despite the danger from the pounding seas each vessel put over lifeboats. It was apparent from the experience of the boat from the Carmania that only by some fortuitous chance could any of these craft get close enough to the Volturno to take off a soul from the blistering decks. But that chance was sought time and time again with the blaze from the Volturno lighting up the sea and guiding the daring seafarers in their work.

CONSERVATIVES WIN BY OVER 200 MAJORITY IN CHATEAUGUAY

Hon. Sidney Fisher Defeated in Riding That Was Previously Carried by Liberals With Forty Majority

Ste. Martine, Q., Oct. 11.—The election of James Morris, the Conservative candidate, is conceded by over 200 majority.

Seventeen polls give Morris 196 majority and there are six more polls to hear from.

This is the first time a Conservative was elected in the riding of Chateauguay since confederation, and is regarded as a great victory, sounding the death knell of Laurierism.

The usual stories of bribery and corruption among the electors are afloat, and it is estimated that not less than $25,000 has been spent in the county within the past few days.

So open, indeed, is the alleged boodling said to have been, that an appeal is looked upon as certain. Both parties were well supplied with vehicles for the carrying of their supporters to the polls for the effects of liquor are also evident, though the bars were all closed.

Marine Disasters

The Volturno tragedy on Saturday naturally recall a long list of disasters at sea, notably the foundering of the Titanic a year ago last April, with 1,600 lives. Instances of fire and death at sea are not uncommon.

The burning of the excursion steamer Gen. Slocum in the East River, near New York, June 15, 1904, resulted in the loss of more than 1,000 lives. In December, 1906, the British steamer [illegible] burned in the China Sea and 101 persons perished, while in November, 1877, 400 lives were lost when the British steamer Wah Young caught fire between Canton and Hong Kong. In December, 1874 the immigrant vessel Cospatrick took fire and sank off Auckland, N.Z., and 470 perished. In September, 1908, the Austria an emigrant ship burned in mid-

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY FROM TORONTO TO PETERBOROUGH MAY BE DOUBLE TRACKED

Company is Seeking Authority From the Railway Commission For the Work

The intention of the Canadian Pacific Railway to double track its main line running out of Toronto in the direction of Montreal via Peterborough is indicated in a number of applications for grade crossings which will be considered by the Board of Railway Commissioners at a hearing to be commenced at the City Hall, Toronto, to-day.

This will be good news for the people of Ontario in general, and for Peterborough in particular. The fact that the Company is extending its warehouse facilities enormously here, also goes to show that Peterborough is likely to have a very considerable increase in railway shipping in the near future. The new steel bridge over the Otonabee river which is to be built, is to provide for double track. This will mean the construction of new piers and considerable filling in on the east side of the river. Peterborough's prospect of becoming an important shipping point is very bright.

IMPERIAL DEFENCE MEETING ASKED FOR BY AUSTRALIA

London, Oct. 11.—While the Imperial authorities in London deny that any representations for an Imperial defence conference has ever been received from the Australia Commonwealth, it appears that, according to the correspondent of the London Morning Post at Sydney, a telegram on the subject was sent to London by the Australian Cabinet over three months ago. Although apparently authoritative statements are published in English newspapers, no official information has reached Australia. This procedure, which is said not to be unique, is not considered to be calculated to make for harmonious Inter-Imperial relations.

The Premier, who with some diffidence expressed his opinion on the subject, declared that if it was true that the question of a conference had been abandoned, the Ministry would have to consider seriously its future course of action on the naval policy. It was necessary to look ahead to the construction of ships, for the Australian fleet unit was now nearly complete and it was time to think what was to be done in the future. The question of co-ordination of Admiral Henderson's proposals in the general scheme of Imperial defence, he added, must be well thought out.

Mr. Millen, the Defence Minister, referring to the suggestion that the Imperial Government had not arrived at a final decision on the subject, said that if this were true no one would be more sincerely pleased than the members of the Commonwealth Government.

HORSES FOR GERMAN CAVALRY BOUGHT IN FRANCE

150 of Them Said to Have Been Purchased In a Year and French Are Angry

Paris, Oct. 11.—Alarming statements have been repeated within the last few months of big purchases of horses made in France for the German army. M. Boutin, senator of the Department of the Manche, a couple of weeks ago wrote an excited letter to the minister of war for the protection of the French breeders, and declared that he would bring the matter before the senate. In his letter he complained that the cavalry depot of the French army at Saint Lo refused to purchase horses that were more than four and a half years old, while Germany was glad to purchase all the horses in the district above that age. This, he alleged, was a scandal, and a number of breeders had come to him with complaints.

On the other hand, he said, the French government was making wholesale purchases at the general horse mart at Mont Rouge, and it is well known that most of these horses were palmed off on the French army. Similar complaints were echoed at Montbéliard, in the French Comte, where it is said a number of intermediaries had come and purchased horses at any price for Germany. At one station alone a train left with 50 horses for the other side of the Rhine.

The climax in these complaints is reached by the publication of a dispatch from Brest to the effect that the writer saw German agents in a hotel at Landivisiau, who, during the last few days had bought up all the horses in the district and dispatched 47 railway carloads of horses to Germany. The exact figures were furnished, he says, by a veterinary. [illegible] purchased wholesale, he states, in the centres of Morlaix, Pol de Leon, Landivisiau, Quimper and Quimperle. In the region of [illegible], he says further, as many as [illegible] horses liable to requisition in the French army were about to be purchased by Germany last May, but the patriotic Norman owners, when they learned for whom these horses were to be purchased, refused to sell them.

Finally, he asserts that within the last year 150,000 horses were purchased by the German army [illegible] in France, in addition to [illegible] for the German army by Italian, [illegible] or Spanish intermediaries.

ONTARIO TO HAVE SEVERAL FUR FARMS

A new industry or rather a new type of farmer, is springing up in the northern country, whose direct aim in life is to strike a blow at the high of luxury. He is the fur farmer! The establishment of these farms through the northern, more wooded parts of Ontario is the direct result of legislation enacted at the last session of Parliament, Ministers of Government and M. P. P.'s becoming shocked at the fabulous prices quoted on those handsome fur-garments [illegible] which decorate the shop windows, were unanimous in their belief that something should be done to encourage the raising of fur-bearing animals. Therefore they made it possible, by Act of Parliament, for any person to start the industry in that line of fur bearer already protected by the laws.

Furthermore, realizing the handsome profits which are to be made out of the fur industry, are backing the Government in the undertaking and already a dozen applications for the establishment of the fur farms have been placed in the hands of the Minister of Public Works. These will all be granted, and the Government have hopes of receiving many more. The only animals for which permission is required are those, now protected, the royal ermine, which from ancient times has decorated the robes of kings, the mink, otter, beaver, and muskrat. The commoner fur-bearer such as the fox, skunk and rabbit all of whose fur is put to some use, may be farmed without a permit.

Not only were prices coming on fare by leaps and bounds, but with the advancing steps of civilization the dealers were beginning to face the problem of complete extermination.

STARTS DEER FARM.

Monticello, Ind., Oct. 11.—Wiley F. Baker, a wealthy farmer near Idaville, is starting a deer farm. He has enclosed 20 acres of woodland with a ten foot wire fence and will otherwise fit it to care for the deer.

MORE DIVORCE APPLICATIONS.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—This week's Canada Gazette contains notice of two more divorce applications, making 25 in all. One of the applications is from Coaticook.

Rachel Rosenstein of Montreal is applying for a divorce from her husband, Abraham Mack, of Ottawa.

No Wonder It Fooled Her.

Little Polly, coming in from her walk one morning, informed her mother that she had seen a lion in the park. No amount of persuasion or reasoning could make her vary her story by one hairbreadth. That night, when she slipped down on her knees to say her prayers, her mother said:

"Polly, ask God to forgive you for that fib."

Polly hid her face for a moment. Then she looked straight into her mother's eyes, her own shining like stars, and said:

"I did ask Him, mamma dearest, and He said: 'Don't mention it, Miss Polly; that big yellow dog has often fooled me.'"

EAGER TO HEAR OUTLINE OF LABOR MEASURE

London, Oct. 11.—Lloyd George's Bedford speech to-day is being keenly anticipated everywhere. Various contradictory forecasts, each labelled authoritative, has been circulated as to his intentions. It is generally believed that he will reserve the full details of the Government's scheme for a later date, satisfying himself with a general outline of the coming measure. Labor interests here are specially interested in his declarations about the minimum wage for agricultural laborers, as, if the Government concede, this will form a precedent for wage regulation in all sweated callings.

GOVERNMENT LOSES $100,000.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—The main barn and stables at the Government Experimental Farm here were destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at $100,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

300 FOR ALBERTA.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Oct. 11.—Immigration agent Howson here says he was expecting about 300 immigrants from the Volturno to pass through Medicine Hat for this and other Alberta points. No names are available.

KILLING OF NAVAL BILL IS MAKING TROUBLE FOR LIBERALS

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—The Liberals are having serious difficulties over candidates in Chateauguay and East Middlesex where by-election dates have been fixed. In Chateauguay where the election is fixed for to-day, October 11, there is dissension in the party. Hon. Sidney Fisher, ex-Minister of Agriculture got the nomination. Despite the fact that Chateauguay is a traditionally Liberal seat, having supported the Liberals steadily since confederation, the chances for the government supporter, James Morris are said to be good.

He Wouldn't Run.

In East Middlesex the Liberals had some difficulty securing a candidate. A prominent farmer was pressed to run, but refused to accept and finally as a last resort a London lawyer consented to take the field in what is purely a rural riding, so as to prevent a Conservative acclamation. The Conservative candidate is Capt. Glass, a popular London township farmer.

EARL GREY AND HOME RULE

Says That the Bill is Not What Canadian's Have Been Led to Believe

London, Oct. 11.—Earl Grey today replies to his Canadian critics who have expressed surprise at his approval of Sir Edward Carson's campaign:

"It is, I believe," he says, "the general opinion of the Canadian people that the Ministerial measure confers upon the Irish the same power of local self-government as they enjoy. That they should hold this opinion is only natural. When T. P. Connor came to Ottawa in 1910 he conveyed the impression that the policy of Asquith and Redmond was to give to the Irish equal but not greater powers of local self-government than those enjoyed by the nine provinces of the Dominion.

"If this had been the object and effect of the Ministerial measure of home rule, it would have found me an enthusiastic supporter. What would be said in Canada if the Canadian Government proposed to apply the principles of the present home rule bill to the provinces of either Nova Scotia or New Brunswick? The combined population of these provinces is much smaller than that of the four northeast counties of Ulster. What would be said by the peoples of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick if they were to be told that their local affairs were to be managed for them against their will by the electors of the Province of Quebec, and that the Government of Quebec would be able to regulate their customs and to fix the design upon their postage stamps?

The great mistake the present Government is committing is in attempting to settle the question, not on Federal lines, but on a Nationalist basis, which will inevitably lead to disunion.

"But the attempt to compel the north-east corner of Ulster to accept the rule of Dublin is a crime. I oppose the ministerial measure for the better government of Ireland, which is a bar to federalism, not because I am opposed to home rule, but because like every Canadian, I am a federalist."

AROUND THE WORLD IN SEVEN DAYS

Airmen Think It a Possibility of the Not Far Distant Future With Powerful Hydroplanes

There is no mistake about it—the world is growing smaller. Magellan, the first circumnavigator, took no fewer than three years over the task. In 1907 Lieutenant-Colonel [illegible] Burnley-Campbell, a veteran of sixty-four, rushed round it in a little over forty days. This is the record, so far; but it will probably be broken in the not far distant future.

The waterplane, of course, is destined to accomplish this seeming impossibility. It can be done, airmen have no doubt. It is merely a matter of building machines big enough, with sufficiently powerful engines and adequate storage capacity.

First will come the flight across the Atlantic—roughly speaking, two thousand miles from land to land.

Then will follow preparations for the greater journey—the crowning aerial achievement of all—the flight round the globe.

This is not so difficult as it sounds. Possibly the flight across the Atlantic from, say, St. John's, Newfoundland to Valentia, on the southwest coast of Ireland will be a more trying ordeal to airmen than any single stage in the round-the-world flight. And for this reason. The North Atlantic is proverbially a rough and stormy ocean, even in summer.

The aeronaut who essays to fly round the world, on the other hand can choose his own route; and this means that he can fly, for the most part, over tropical seas, and in air of an equable temperature.

Nor need he at any time make a longer land-to-land journey than that which will have to be accomplished by the winner of the trans-Atlantic flight. His jumping-off place, so to speak, will probably be Cape San Roque, in Brazil, whence he will set a straight course for Sierra Leone approximately one thousand miles distant. From thence he will steer his machine up along the African coast hardly ever out of sight of land, and then through the Straits of Gibraltar, and, by way of the Mediterranean, the Red and the Arabian Seas to Ceylon.

Thence past the "Spice Islands" as the old navigators christened them, he will fly, by way of Torres Strait, out into the Coral Sea and the broad, isle-studded Pacific, and so back by way of Panama to his starting-place.

Approximately, the distance travelled by the route indicated will be about 30,000 miles, and this can be covered, by a waterplane of 200 horse power, at the rate of one hundred miles an hour, making 300 hours of actual flight.

Assuming the pilot to fly on an average fifteen hours out of each twenty-four, the remaining nine hours being devoted to resting, he would accomplish the entire journey in twenty days, less than half the shortest time taken for the trip up to now. Or if a waterplane be built of sufficient size to carry three men comfortably, so as to allow of a practically continuous flight being made, with only brief stops for petrol and provisions, then the world may be flown round in about twelve and a half days.

And even this is not the limit. Experienced airmen expect to be able to construct presently machines that will be capable of flying at the rate of 200 miles an hour; and this, of course, may mean that the world will be circumnavigated aerially in less than a week.—Answers.

BUILT LIKE A BIRD

Another Step Towards Solving Problem of Successful Flight

The Etrich monoplane, of Austrian make, stands out as one of the most remarkable designs of this class of aerial machine, and it represents a type that bids fair to be more permanent than many other models which from time to time have created sensations.

The monoplane has fallen into disfavor with the military authorities in several countries as a consequence of an unfortunate series of accidents, which were debited rather unfairly to the machine without taking sufficiently into account the variable human element.

Of the Etrich monoplane, it may be said that it is designed to remedy some of the defects which have been pointed out in monoplanes. Great strength and automatic stability to a high degree are the two most notable features. It is birdlike in appearance, and the wings are curious in that they are curved backwards and upwards at the ends. The tail is birdlike also. From tip to tip the machine measures no less than 46 feet, an enormous width for a monoplane. Its length is 37 feet.

The wings are the weakest part of the monoplane as a rule, and in the Etrich a very remarkable method of construction seeks to remedy this. Three main spars project from the central body, and the cross-ribs are secured to these and then covered with fabric. A cantilever bridgelike structure of steel tubing supports the main spars and thus gives a degree of strength to the planes which enables them to be made of ample dimensions. The rear part of the plane is built up of bamboo ribs covered with fabric so as to form a flexible trailing edge. In this again there is a suggestion of bird formation being followed. The wing-tips are turned up at the rear, and natural stability to a high degree is obtained thereby. The pilot also has control of the wing-tips. The central body is made of steel tubing strongly braced and the front part is covered in with metal sheeting. The largest machine is a three-seater, and it has an engine of 120 horsepower. The Etrich monoplane is largely used in the Austrian army, and by its strength, power, and reliability, it seems peculiarly well adapted for naval and military work.

EFFECT OF FEAR

The Response of the Body When an Emergency Arises

In a paper on the subject of fear and its effect upon the human body, prepared by Dr. G. W. Crile, a London physician, it is explained that under the influence of fear the organs of the body are divided sharply into two classes—those that are stimulated, and those whose work ceases temporarily.

Under the first classification come nerve systems, which cause movement—the mechanism for raising the hair, the respiration, the sweat glands, and, it is found, the thyroid gland and the adrenal gland.

On the other hand, the entire digestive functions are paralysed. So far as we know, the organs stimulated increase the efficiency of the animal either to fight or flight. The increased action of the muscles of the heart increases the efficiency of the circulation; the secretion of the adrenal gland causes a rise in the blood pressure; the increased activity of the thyroid gland causes an increased activity of the tissues, and the production of glycogen is a symptom that the body is preparing fresh supplies of energy. Increased respiration is necessary to co-ordinate the supply of oxygen with this manufacture; even the sweat glands and dilated nostrils are playing their part. The digestive organs cannot help, they can only hinder; so the body does the best it can by shutting off the nervous current to them and saving the vital force which they would consume.

Thus, because fear first robe from injury, its phenomena are due to a stimulation of all the organs that add to efficiency in self-preservation, and a stoppage of those which are noncombatants. Fear takes many forms in civilised society, but nature has only one means of expressing it physically, and that does not alter.

A PERILOUS POSITION

Many Attempts Made on Lives of India's Viceroys

There is only one case on record of the actual assassination of a Viceroy of India—the Earl of Mayo being fatally stabbed by a prisoner in 1872 during a visit to a convict settlement. The murder had no political motive, but during recent years, as a result of the unrest which followed the partition of Bengal, the life of a Viceroy has been aimed at on more than one occasion.

In November, 1909, Lord Minto was making a tour of India, and during a procession through Ahmedabad two bombs were thrown at his carriage. One was cleverly intercepted by the sabre of a sergeant of the Inniskilling Dragoons; the other hit the umbrella which was being held over Lady Minto and fell harmless to the ground. The culprits were never discovered.

In November, 1910, when Lord Minto was holding his farewell reception at Calcutta, three natives who had got in with forged passes, were arrested on the charge of shadowing the Viceroy. Lord Minto escaped other perils. During the trial of some conspirators in 1908 one of the prisoners confessed that their plans had included a plot to assassinate Lord Minto, Lord Kitchener, and other high officials. The informer was afterwards shot dead in his cell by a fellow prisoner.

In November, 1907, Lord Minto was making a prolonged tour, when the officials got wind of a plot against his life, and the Viceroy's tour was cut short. In February, 1908, while his lordship was at Assam for a few days' shooting his train passed a spot where a few hours previously a bomb was thrown at a passing train, and the coincidence gave rise to disquieting suggestions at the time.

Lord Minto's predecessor, Lord Curzon, was also once in peril. During the hearing of the Kolhapur bomb case in April, 1911, one of the prisoners confessed that at the Delhi Durbar of 1901 four men were deputed to kill Lord Curzon as he was passing in the procession, but the courage of the conspirators failed at the last moment.

Other distinguished Indian officials have been in peril. Four attempts were made in the course of three years to murder Sir Andrew Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; thrice bombs were hurled at the train in which he was travelling, and once a native fired at him in a lecture hall in Calcutta.

Tempting the Postman

At Edinburgh a young man pleaded guilty to having endeavored to induce a postman to detain or delay letters, and to having fraudulently obtained from the postman two letters addressed to a Leith bookmaker, stamped with official postmarks indicating that they had been posted at Dunfermline before 10.45 a.m. on a certain date, and to having enclosed in one of the envelopes a coupon offering to make a bet on the result of football matches played on that date, which matches had, as he already knew, been played earlier in the day. He was put on probation for six months.

Much Gold Stolen

Despite the precautions which are taken to prevent theft, it is said that gold to the value of $5,000,000 is annually stolen from the mines on the Rand, South Africa. This thievery is done systematically and although a corps of detectives are employed for the purpose of detecting theft, there have been no convictions for a long time. There is a woman who has grown very wealthy in the business of buying gold, and although the officials are sure of her activities, all efforts to trap her have been unsuccessful. The newest hot-air story from California has to do with the orange crop. The growers are preparing to put millions of orchard heaters beneath the trees during the month of December to ward off frosts.

The rise in C. P. R. stock is one of the signs that the money stringency is disappearing. At the time of the Balkan war a large number of European holders of the C. P. R. sold out, which caused a decline. Now they are buying back on a rising market, a sure sign of confidence.

The taking of a party of Canadian officers to witness the British and French army manoeuvres is one of the most sensible things that Colonel Sam Hughes has yet done. It is sometimes the practice to scoff at the colonel but the idea is dawning in the minds of a great many people that he is thoroughly on to his job.

ADULTERING MAPLE SYRUP.

Extensive adulteratio of maple sugar and maple syrup is indicated in the bulletins just issued by the Inland Revenue Department. of 128 sample sold as maple syrup, 86 were found to be genuine and the remainder adulterated. Of maple sugar, 83 samples purchased by inspectors were examined and 36 were adulterated.

The chief analyst says that a combination of maple and cane sugar syrups. or of maple and cane sugar, make palatable articles, and there is no ground for complaint against its appearance on the market. He recommends, however, that for the protection of the producers of the genuine article, all mixtures should be required to be plainly labelled as such, in order that the purchaser may be fully aware of what he is getting.

SOUND IMPERIALISM.

Some interesting things were said by Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel, postmaster-general in the Asquith cabinet in the course of two addresses delivered by him in Toronto a few days ago. Two statements of his are sufficient to show that the new Liberalism in Britain is far different from the Liberalism of the mid-Victorian period—that, in fact, the new British Liberalism is decidedly imperialistic in spirit. Mr. Samuel said that the Liberal party in Britain has discarded the old laissez faire principle by Cobden, Bright and the other leaders of the "Manchester school." It was adherence to this princ ple—the principle to "let alone"—which identified the Manchester school with the policy of encouraging the colonies to break away from the empire. The old Liberalism regarded the colonies as encumbrances to Britain and took the view that so long as they traded with the mother country it would be better both for them and for her if they set up in business for themselves as independent nations. Mr. Samuel tells us that that idea is dead, and that the new Liberalism puts a high value upon the imperial bond.

He also says that while the self-governing dominions must be free to assist in imperial naval defence each in the way which best suits itself, it is their duty to assist somehow. It is not fair, he declares with reason, that the whole burden of imperial naval defence should rest upon one pair of shoulders. And he adds that the Liberal party realizes that the security of the empire depends upon British naval supremacy.

The speeches of this bright young Liberal statesman were soundly imperialistic; and there can be no doubt that he voiced not merely his own sentiments, but those of his cabinet colleagues and o—cial Liberalism also.

Weak, Tired Folks Given New Vigor

STRENGTH RETURNS, HEALTH RENEWED, VITALITY OF YOUTH RE-CREATED

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned Into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From Chebogue Pt., N.S., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Haydolds: "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost my appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the 'blues.' I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do that should be in every home."

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

SPORTS

Once more Connie Mack guided the Philadelphia Athletics to the World's pennant by defeating the New York Giants 3—1 on Saturday. The Mackmen accomplished their third consecutive victory on the grounds of the luckless Giants. Both managers [illegible] again their best twirlers, but Mathewson was outpitched by his veteran rival Leftie Plank.

The Athletics scored one run in the first innings, followed by two more in the third by opportune batting and sacrificing. The Giants' lone tally came in the fifth, when Schafer was walked, the first Giant to reach first. Murray was safe when Plank dropped his high fly. McLean singled to left scoring Schafer. After this neither side scored for the remainder of the game.

SECRET SOCIETY OF CONVICTS FOUND IN SO. AFRICA

Have King And Other Officers and Impose and Execute Death Sentences

Kimberly, South Africa, Oct. 11.—A sensational story of a native convicts' secret society, the facts as to which are well known to South African judges and the police authorities, has been unfolded in the course of a murder trial here. Five native convicts were indicated for the murder of a fellow-convict, named Jacob Mkaba, at Dutoitspan convict station. The story for the crown was that Jacob had decided to withdraw from the Ninevite Society, abdigating the chieftainship, and had pursuaded others to withdraw also. For this and for the fact that he was supposed to have carried tales to the station superintendent he was sentenced to death. He resisted endeavors to get him into a certain cell, but evidently went, and was set upon and stabbed to death.

One of the accused was thesociety's doctor, another a "judge," a third succeeded Jacob as chief, the fourth belonging to an opposing faction known as the "The Scotchmen," and the fifth was neutral.

The Ninevites are a native convict secret society. The evidence showed that they have their own king chief, general, judges, doctor, and other officers, and hold secret courts, sentence fellow-convicts to death, and issue the orders for the execution of their sentences.

FOLLOW THE RULES OR PAY THE PENALTY.

Judge Lange said that the Ninevites originated in Pretoria convict prison, and were represented all over the country. A native witness said that nearly all the convicts in Johannesburg were Ninevites. The deceased had been chief of the society. Secret prison meetings decided on the stabbings, and those appointed to execute orders were liable to punishment if they failed. This witness said the rule was "Once a Ninevite, always a Ninevite." Jacob's death warrant was "verbally signed," and it was ordained that should the knife not be forthcoming, he should be killed while working on the De Beers floors.

One of the accused admitted stabbing the deceased "under orders from Pretoria," because it was thought that it was through him that two convicts had been shot at the Cinderella Prison. If he (witness) had not killed Jacob he would undoubtedly have been killed himself. He did it in self-defence."

Four of the accused were sentenced to death.

SEIZURE FOR TITHE RENT

Two Gravestones Were Seized to Satisfy a Claim

The death of Mrs. John Reddie, of Aston's Green, recalls the fact that it was this lady's husband who, some thirty years ago, challenged the right of the late Canon Eliot, the then Vicar of Aston, to demand tithe rent from him. As Vicar of Aston Mr. Eliot was entitled to certain tithe rents, which in the event of the property owner declining to pay, could be recovered by distraint from the tenants in occupation. Mr. Reddie was a prominent member of the Liberal party in those days, absolutely declined to pay and finally the vicar levied for value of the tithe. As Mr. Reddie was a stonemason in the Aston Road the bailiffs found some difficulty in selecting an adequate or convenient article to seize, and finally carted away a couple of gravestones. The matter created considerable sensation at the time.

A ROYAL ARTIST

Princess Louise Excels in Watercolors and Sculpture

Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll besides being an accomplished painter in water colors, studied sculpture under the direction of the late Sir Edgar Boehm, although in all likelihood she gained her first knowledge of the art from watching the late Mrs. Thorneycroft at work. This accomplished lady, the mother of the Royal Academician, was "attached" for many years to Queen Victoria's household, and modelled all the young Princes and Princesses at various stages of their lives. The well known portrait of Paderewski and the statue of Queen Victoria in Kensington Gardens are good specimens of Princess Louise's work. Unlike many artists, the Princess is of a most practical turn of mind, and knows as much about the internal arrangements of a house as the workmen who built it. She has many friends in the literary and artistic world, devotes much of her time to practical philanthropy, and rejoices to leave behind her the strict rules of Court etiquette.

The Missing Rhyme

Fowl stealers who visited Southchurch Wick Farm, Southend, left behind them the following rhyme, written on a piece of paper which was pinned on one of the fowlhouses:

So please continue breeding more—
We'll call when you've further store
Unless the police should—

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WHERE THE CATS GO

Skins Are Sold in London Market Extensively.

The fur of the domestic cat is much bought on the London market; into what it turns after manipulation probably is a trade secret. According to a report furnished by J. M. Munson, trade commissioner at Leeds, to the weekly report of the department of trade and commerce, no fewer than 120,452 cat skins were purchased in one year. Many of these skins came from North America. In point of number musquash skins led, over five million of them being bought. Only 1,328 silver fox skins were sold, the supply being stationary. The number of beaver skins sold was nearly 61,000. Prices were high this year, and Mr. Munson notes that there was a strong demand for skunk, the price of which advanced 20 per cent.; wolverine skins doubled in value.

NORAH McSHANE.

To better my fortune I've cross the big sea;
But I'm sadly alone, not a creature to mind me,
And, faith! I'm as wretched as wretched can be.
I think of the buttermilk, fresh as a daisy,
The beautiful hills and the emerald plain;
And Oi don't I oftentime think myself crazy,
About that young black-eyed rogue,
Norah McShane.

I sigh for the turf-pile, so cheerfully burning,
When barefoot I trudged it from toiling afar;
When I tossed in the light the thirteen I'd been earning,
And whistled the anthem of "Erin-go-bragh."
In truth, I believe that I'm half broken-hearted;
To my country and love I must get back again;
For I've never been happy at all since I parted
From sweet Ballymornach and Norah M'Shane.

Oi there's something so dear in the cot I was born in,
Though the walls are but mud and the roof is but thatch;
How [illegible] the grunt of the pigs in the morning,
What music in lifting the rusty old latch!
'Tis true I'd no money, but then I'd no sorrow;
My pocket was light, but my heart had no pain;
And, if I but live till the sun shines to-morrow,
I'll be off to old Ireland and Norah M'Shane.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar whatever. This condition is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I was well allowed to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

"There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

CURIOSITIES IN HOSPITALS

Interesting Relics in Some of the London Institutions

Pretty well every old-established hospital has some curious and interesting relics in its possession. The "Hospital" mentions that the celebrated couch upon which John Hunter died when he was attacked with angina pectoris during a board meeting, is still preserved in the board room of St. George's Hospital, London. Many hospitals, too, possess valuable paintings of their early benefactors and medical staff by English masters of the eighteenth century; and practically all have museums from which curios, not pathological or gruesome, could be sent to an exhibition. The half-sovereign which was extracted from the windpipe of Brunel, the railway pioneer, was stolen a few years ago from one such museum.

HOW OLD IS MAN?

He Has Probably Existed on the Earth For 24,000,000 Years

The question of the first appearance of living things is of perennial interest, although tantalizingly uncertain. Professor G. Frederick Wright, says "Science Siftings," has now estimated that life has probably existed on the earth for 24,000,000 years, but that it cannot possibly have begun as long ago as 50,000,000 years. Man's antiquity cannot, he says, be less than 10,000 years, while it need not be more than 15,000. The evidence that man appeared in Tertiary time is regarded by our authority as very doubtful, and the Post-Tertiary age has been a relatively short period, while the known facts of human development can be amply accounted for by 8,000 years of time before the historic record began.

Escape From Molten Ore

Thomas Chappel, the driver of a locomotive near Newport had a remarkable escape from being buried in molten slag. He was taking a wagon of hot slag to the tipping-ground, and was unable to shut off steam. The ladle and locomotive consequently ran over the end of the tip, and, after turning, fell a distance of about 60 feet. In falling the wagon broke away from the locomotive, and the driver was saved from being covered with hot slag. When the engine was near the bottom the driver was thrown out, but his only injuries were slight bruises on the head and body and some broken ribs. Two who were on the engine jumped clear.

Modern Sentimentality

Love of notoriety and the amount of public sympathy displayed for offenders are declared by Mr. W. J. Pringle, Chief Constable of Blackpool, in his annual report, to be factors that increase crime. A man, he says, has only to be put on his trial on a grave charge to bring forth a display of public sentiment almost amounting to open opposition to the execution of the law.

At Haddington Police Court, George Spence, laborer, pleaded guilty to stealing a suit of clothes by getting them from one broker on loan and selling them to another. The fiscal said Spence got the clothes to attend his aunt's funeral. He cleared out, but by accident was seen in Edinburgh by a Haddington police officer. The accused was fined.

The Elephant and His Driver

Those in a position to speak authoritatively on the subject assure us that, as a worker, the elephant never volunteers his services, although he can be trained to perform all manner of work. He will not, however, proceed to any task unless he is so ordered by his driver or mahout, to whose guidance he submits for the simple reason that he is aware that disobedience brings punishment.

Sitting on the elephant's neck, the mahout governs the big beast by an iron hook and spike, which resembles a boathook and weighs from four to six pounds. The mahout drives the elephant forward by digging the point of the spike into the head, and pulls him back by inserting the hook in the tender base of the ears.

An elephant whose mahout [illegible] responds readily to the secret signs of his driver. The pressure of the mahout's toe, the compressing of his knees, the lay of his heel, or the [illegible] swaying of his body to one side, all constitute a driving system whereby the powerful beast is guided in very much the same way in which a ship responds to the rudder.

A Hurried Glance at a Few Events of Unique and Outstanding Interest

Death of Lucknow Officer

Death of the Whip

The Whip, a mare by Ard Patrick, belonging to Mr. Arthur Collins, died after appearing hundreds of times in the Drury Lane drama of the same name.

Ten Thousand Trout

Four lakes belonging to the Eaton Fly Fishers' Club, which have been made for fishing at Milford, Surrey, at a cost of $30,000, have been stocked with nearly 10,000 brown and rainbow trout.

Mother Nurses Dead Child

It was stated at the inquest at Ascot, Berkshire, on a child named Robert Bulpin, who died of pneumonia that the mother had nursed the child for two hours and put it to bed, not knowing it was dead.

Fund for the Helping Horse

Kitty, the trace-horse which Our Dumb Friends' League placed on Putney Hill in order to assist heavily-laden horses up the steep incline has the benefit of a fund made up of street collections by a number of Wandsworth ladies.

Roman Relic Discovered

A fine bronze Roman hanging lamp has been found near Thetford, Norfolk. It is in the form of a dolphin with wide open mouth, from which projected the wick. The British Museum authorities describe the find as one of the greatest rarity.

Footballer's Tragic Death

James Blair, aged twenty-eight, a professional footballer of the Stockport County team, was found dead in his bathroom at his home with his throat cut. He had been depressed because he was unable to take part in football matches with his team.

Beach Palmists Taboo

No palmists will be allowed on the beach at Mablethorpe, Lincolnshire. In previous years palmists have done good business among visitors.

Death of Aged Rector

The Rev. Henry Spurrier, rector of Roughton-with-Haltham, Lincolnshire, died at the age of eighty-three. He was taken ill while he was celebrating Holy Communion.

Trawler's $6,000 Catch

The Grimsby steam trawler Cascinia, after having been on the fishing grounds for a period of about forty-eight hours, landed about sixty-five tons of fish, which realized nearly $6,000.

Motor Cyclist Falls Dead

An engine-driver on the Great Northern Railway named William Fox left his home at Colwick, Notts, for a ride on a motor-cycle. Five minutes afterwards, when he was riding up a hill at Carlton, he suddenly collapsed and fell from his machine. When picked up he was dead.

Damage to a Boat Train

Before the Dover magistrates a Parisian named Didace Thibalt was alleged to have wrecked a compartment on the boat express from Charing Cross. With great difficulty he was arrested. In the police cell he tore up his mattress and clothing.

Smoking in Church

The Vicar of Lancaster, at the annual vestry meeting, called attention to scenes of desecration in the church. Being a place of historic interest, the church must be kept open, but many trippers did not know how to behave in church, and the verger again found people eating luncheon in church. They must protect the church from such desecration as eating in it, men wearing their hats, and even smoking in it.

Boys Foil Revolver Champion

Mr. Walter Winans, the famous revolver shot, owing to his being pelted with stones by the boys at Ashford, Kent, when he rides to and from his residence at Surrenden Park in his American trotting-cart, has intimated to the schoolmistress that in future no prizes will be allowed for boys. Instead he will give extra awards for girls and infants.

Rules for Repentant Wife

Mr. Spencer Hogg, the Salford stipendiary, drew up a set of rules for a wife whose husband said he was willing to take her back if she would give up drink. The rules were: To abstain during the next twelve months from alcoholic drinks; to leave her present abode and to go to live with her husband; to have nothing whatever to do with those of her companions with whom she had been in the habit of drinking; to report monthly to the court missioner.

LOSS OF MEMORY

Glasgow Man Found Wandering in Chelsea

The Glasgow police were asked by the London authorities to trace the friends of a man who was found in King's Road, Chelsea, suffering from loss of memory. It was stated that he had just returned from the coast of Africa, and was on the way to his mother, who resided in the vicinity of Glasgow University. The man, about thirty-six years, was unable to give the address, and was detained at Chelsea Infirmary. He was well dressed and of gentlemanly appearance.

WHY MORE WOMEN THAN MEN?

The fact that in almost all civilized countries women outnumber men has been ascribed to the higher birthrate of girl babies; yet statistics show that 105 boys are born to every 100 girls. According to figures compiled by a European statistician, the girl has a better chance than the boy of attaining maturity.

He finds that from the third to the fifteenth year the mortality for both sexes is the same; from the fifteenth to the nineteenth year the girl's chances are slightly better than the boy's; from the thirtieth year to the thirty-fifth the mortality among women is smaller than among men, and it continues smaller until the seventieth year. Then, for a decade and a half, the sexes once more have the same chance of survival, but above eighty-five years of age, women again stands a much better chance than man. To account for this difference the statistician points out that woman has greater resilience in shaking off diseases than man. It is true that the physical strength of man is greater than woman's, but a woman's power of endurance is more robust. One reason for this is that woman possesses a finer perception of her power of endurance than a man, and when her perception warns her of fatigue, she stops. A man does not stop until his power is exhausted. His nervous system is not as finely organized as a woman's, and as Mosso, the Italian physiologist has pointed out, men and women are entirely dependent upon their nerves for caution not to over-exert. While it is true that women more easily contract many diseases, particularly nervous and mental diseases, than men, they overcome them more easily.

"I have Killed a Dozen"

When Hugh MacLaren, aged twenty-nine, a dock laborer, was remanded at Cardiff charged with the wilful murder of Julian Ochoa, a Spaniard, Chief Detective-Inspector Harries stated that after being charged at the police station the accused said: "I have killed a dozen like that. They cannot touch me for it. My father was an executioner of them in America."

O'Connell's Granddaughter Dead

The funeral took place at Foulkstown, near Kilkenny, of Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, widow of the late Mr. James Sullivan, proprietor of the Kilkenny Brewery. The deceased lady was a granddaughter of the Liberator, her father being Mr. John O'Connell, third son of Daniel O'Connell.

Died at Mass

A lady named Hayes died suddenly while attending Mass at the Redemptorists' Church, Limerick. She belonged to an old Limerick family.

GERMAN PRAISE OF THE BBITISH

British Men and British Ways Are the Best Types and Standards

A Berlin correspondent of The Sketch, London, writes in part as follows in German praise of England:

"The Englishmen who run down England and exalt the Continent are nearly always bad judges of the Continent; but the Continentals who condemn the Continent and exalt England usually are sound experts on England. Such a sound judge is Dr. Hermann Iglicki, who was in England continuously from 1875 to 1886 and from 1901 to 1907, and who therefore knew intimately two successive generations. His view is that England is still better and more civilized than Germany; and that she keeps the lead, which is a lead essentially in the civic and public virtues, in breadth of view and universality of public interest; and in the intense and wide identification of her own people with national greatness.

"This kind of praise appears in Germany daily. Despite the prevailing melancholy view at home of English government (especially when the other party is in), despite real faults in the British system, foreigners praise it. They praise it, not because it realizes an ideal, but because they feel their own systems farther from the ideal. The most objective and strongest praise comes from Germans who have been studying England's despised education system. During the past few years books and brochures have come out by the dozen on comparative and on English education; and nearly all of them pronounce for the English way. Some, but not all, say that German brain education is the better. But all deny that brain education is the main half of education; they reason that it is the making of men and citizens which counts; and the universal view is that England does it better.

Self-Mastery, Self-Discipline

"Since English education is thus superior in what counts for most, it is superior all round. That view is confirmed by a new publication of the famous Shakespearean scholar Professor Franz, of Tubingen. The English way, says Dr. Franz, produces more culture than the German. Under culture he understands general fitness for life. "The Anglo-Saxon is decidedly ahead of us in this," he says and he praises English schools because the relations of masters to boys is a relation of trust on the side of the masters and of self-respect on the side of the boys. The English people to-day, it seems, gloriously reflects this superior training. It is a compound whereas the German is only a mechanical mixture of heterogeneous elements. The success of Socialism in Germany, the weak German reactions in national affairs, contrasted with England's strong race and national feeling, with the love of Englishmen for England, with the fine type of English officials and the triumphs of British Colonialism—this contrast proves the superiority over the German principle of Anglo-Saxon self-mastery and self-discipline.

Effectiveness in Business

"The praise of England extends beyond education. In business Germans praise English ways in much the same exaggerated note as British grumblers use for German ways. Everyone knows the British Consul who explains why Englishmen lose trade. Because they do not study their customers, because they pick badly, because they print catalogues in English, because their travellers are inferior and speak only English, because they despise small deals. Now, in one week there were three different growls from competent Germans that German business men are inferior to English business men in some of these respects. A Hamburg man, Herr Julius Harre, has complained to a meeting of shareholders 'that English beat Germans in selling because in all domestic manufactures they show a good taste and more adaptability. Their travellers are more effective than ours, being more accomplished and more obviously men of the world. A main cause of English success is the substantial construction and the substantial packing of everything; and our German system of packing things attractively does not compensate in the eyes of purchasers for flimsiness.' The reputation of England and Englishmen stands higher than it ever did; and what Professor Franz praises as 'the high and free culture of the Anglo-Saxons' has nothing to fear from any foreign rivalry."

Steel Furniture

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sideboards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference cannot be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

A Mammoth Incubator

The largest egg incubator in the United Kingdom, one with a capacity for 3,000 eggs, is at work on a poultry farm in Kent. The appliance is in reality a succession of incubators joined, operated and controlled by one small automatic heater or fire-pot. The cost of running the incubator is not more than 50 cents a week, as only 15 pounds of anthracite coal is used each day in the fire-pot.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WOLF AND THE LAMB

By FRANK FILSON.

"I beg to remain, lovingly yours, John P. Stevens," the man dictated, and Miss Keith, his stenographer, started round in her chair.

"'Lovingly,' did you say, Mr. Stevens?" she asked in surprise. "Surely you are not going to write that to the Anderson Iron Foundry!"

John P. Stevens took the slim white hand which Miss Keith had laid upon the back of her chair and pressed it between his own. "No, my dear, I meant it for you," he said. "End the letter in the usual way."

Miss Keith smiled and hammered out the letter upon her typewriter in a couple of minutes. Then she glanced up at the clock and rose, patting her hair. Her hat hung upon its peg close by.

"One moment, Lucy," said Stevens. "What would you say to a little supper somewhere tonight? I've a couple of theater tickets which might come in handy afterward."

"Why not?" demanded the man blandly.

"Somebody might see us together who—who—"

"Yes?"

"Who knows your wife."

"My wife," said Stevens, "has not seen me for nearly a year and wouldn't care. During our five years of wedded life I think I can say that she has thoroughly tired of me. Come, Lucy, what's the odds?" he continued. He caught at the pretty wrists which she had just released from their paper cuffs. "Lucy, are you going to let that come between us when I love you?" asked Stevens.

He saw the agitation which she could not hide. Her hands were trembling as she put on her hat. "Outside the Hotel [illegible] at seven?" he whispered, and she nodded lightly and hurried away.

Stevens leaned back in his chair and lit a cigar. He was wondering just how much his pretty stenographer cared for him and how much was due to the fact that the Stevens Foundry company netted him a clear forty thousand dollars a year. Six months before, when she had come to work for him in her first position, she had been a plain, innocent-eyed country girl of whom he had been almost afraid. Somehow she reminded him of Mary, his wife, who had left him not long before when she had discovered certain matters in his life. Yet he had really loved Mary. Perhaps if he had gone humbly to her. . . . He puffed out a cloud of smoke. Well, for all his money he was down and out so far as decent friendships were concerned. All their friends had sided with Mary. Stevens had been through a whirl of dissipation since that time. He was having his fling—all the pleasure that life now held for him. Undoubtedly his subtly bestowed praise, his kindness, his attentions had turned Miss Keith's head. Well, if she was such a little fool as to play with fire. . . .

Stevens looked up to see his bookkeeper, Henry Austin, standing at the door of his private office. The young fellow had been in his employment some two years; he worked, for a pittance of forty dollars a month, in the dimly lighted stock room at the opposite end of the floor. He looked at Stevens in an imploring manner that irritated the manufacturer.

"Well, Austin, what is it?" he asked.

"I want to give you a week's notice to leave, Mr. Stevens," answered the young fellow, coming forward, his hat in his hand.

"So you're going to desert the ship, eh?" sneered Stevens. "Why? Got a better job?"

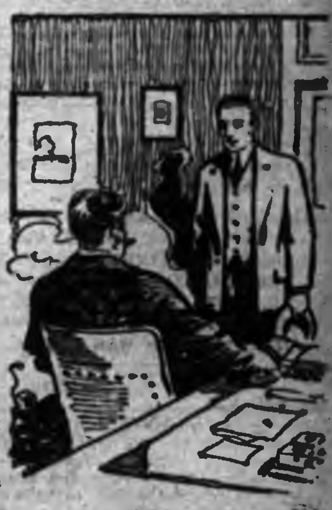
"No, Mr. Stevens. I haven't got a position yet," he replied.

"Want your salary raised?"

"No, sir, it isn't that. I'm perfectly satisfied."

Moved by an impulse of kindness which surprised himself, Stevens walked forward and placed his hand upon the young fellow's shoulder. "Best tell me what's the trouble," he said.

"I will," Austin blurted out, his pallid features working convulsively. "If you were my own size and willing to fight I'd just about kill you. Miss Keith and I were—we were going to be married as soon as I got a raise to fifty. She's from my home town. And now—you—"



"So You're Going to Desert the Ship, Eh?"

"So that's the trouble, eh," said Stevens, nodding understandingly. "You think I've cut you out in her affections, eh? Why, didn't you know that I'm married?"

"Yes, damn you," shouted Austin. "That's just where the trouble lies. I can't fight a man twice my weight and the law wouldn't give me any redress, so I'm going to leave. Take your week's notice. I'll get out this evening."

"No you won't, Austin," said Stevens, with sudden emphasis. "Now see here! Suppose I went out of the way; do you think she'd marry you? Do you think that if I raised you to—well, sixty, say, you'd be man enough not to be satisfied with everything and to keep her at home to look after your house, and to try to make something of yourself?"

"My son," said the manufacturer, "you blame me—but that's where you've wrong. This is a fighting world—it isn't a world where we whine for justice and get it. Maybe I've been too much of a wolf and too little of a lamb, but I'm going to do the square thing for once. Here's your chance—will you take it?"

"You bet I will," answered the bookkeeper breathlessly.

Stevens nodded and put on his hat. He went out humming. He saw what Austin saw, that he was responsible for having put the poison of ambition into Miss Keith's mind; but he knew also that it required its drastic antidote, to humble her. He took a street car up to the rendezvous and waited inside the hotel.

The hands of the clock were just upon the hour when he saw his stenographer's trim figure pass slowly before the revolving glass door, and, throwing his cigar, he went outside.

"Good evening, Miss Keith," he said, raising his hat. "Waiting to see me?"

The girl recoiled a little and looked at him, an angry flush reddening her cheeks. Stevens patted her on the arm.

"Run away home, little girl," he said. "I've changed my mind. And say," he continued, "you needn't report to me tomorrow or any other time. I'm going to get a business woman for my stenographer next time, and not your kind."

He turned and left her, speechless with indignation. Then, because the medicine sickened the giver as well as the recipient, he went back into the hotel and sat for a long time in the smoking room. At last he rose, and, with a sudden determination, went toward the door. His features had softened out of their habitual hard lines.

"I wonder," he said meditatively, "I wonder if Mary would give him another chance?"

A MISSING TALISMAN

Russia's Royal Family Much Worried Over Non-Recovery of Jewels.

The Russian Czar and Czarina are much perturbed over their inability to recover a diadem of brilliants, which has a curious history attached to it. It was lost unaccountably by the Empress at the funeral of the Grand Duke Vladimir and though almost the whole staff of the Russian secret police have been searching for it since, not a trace of it can be found. The real origin of the diadem is wrapped in mystery, but tradition says it was discovered on the head of a saint in St. Serafim's Cathedral in Moscow, and the Empress wore it to ward off evil spirits, though it doesn't seem to have been very successful in her case. But the great thing about this diadem is that the pearls and diamonds of which it is composed are said to foretell by their condition the well-being—or otherwise—of the Russian Royal family. If danger impends, the diamonds lose their sparkle and the pearls their soft lustre, while if the prospect brightens the stones resume their pristine beauty.

What makes the Royal couple anxious to recover this talisman is that they superstitiously attribute the Czarevitch's delicate health to its disappearance.

Slips in Oratory

Even the most facile speakers are guilty of unpardonable errors in their oratory. Mr. Arthur Balfour on one occasion spoke of "an empty theatre of unsympathetic auditors," and Lord Curzon of Kedleston remarked that though we are not out of the wood, we have a good ship."

Mr. Asquith once stated that "redistribution is a thorny subject which requires delicate handling, or it will tread on some people's toes."

Mr. St. John Brodrick, when a member of the House of Commons, told that assembly that "among the many jarring notes heard in this House, on military affairs this subject (mobilization) at least must be regarded as an oasis."

In a debate on the London Education Bill Mr. Walter Long said, "We are told that by such legislation the very heart of the country has been shaken to its very foundations."

The late General Redvers Buller, desiring to convey that there was little to be gained by so-called Army Reform, declared that "the Army is honeycombed with cliques, and kisses go by favor in this web of axe-grinding."

Likes Canada Best

Rev. Father Lebeau, of the Archbishop's palace, Ottawa, returned from a tour of France, England, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Egypt and the Holy Land and made this statement.

"After visiting all the European countries and the Eastern ones, too, I find that I never appreciated Canada so greatly. There is a spirit of liberty here which I found in no other country I was in. There the rich are rich and the poor hopelessly poor. Here in Canada we know how to enjoy life as they do not."

NOTES OF SCIENCE

A scientist of Amsterdam perfected a method by which he secures a very excellent substitute for rubber from sea fish. It is claimed that the product has all the qualities of rubber at one-sixth the cost. Another new source of rubber substitute is the "[illegible]" tree of Natal. This plant has been heretofore regarded as commercially useless, but recently about one ton per week has been shipped to London, where it is used as insulation for electric wires.

There is a tendency among the automobile manufacturers to make use of silver-plating instead of nickel for covering the exposed metal parts of the machine. The latter has the advantage of hardness, but when exposed to the weather it becomes covered with an oxide which is hard to remove, while silver is whiter, takes a higher polish and when it becomes tarnished it is easier to clean. The difference in the cost of silver is slight.

A funnel has been devised for the use of automobile owners which dispenses with the use of the chamois skin usually necessary to remove the water from gasoline which gets there by condensation and which seriously interferes with the operation of the motor. The funnel is supplied with two copper screens, through which the gasoline must pass before reaching the tank, and these screens are said to be so fine that the water will not pass through the mesh without the least difficulty.

SPORT IN CANADA

A Plea for Lacrosse and Other Trials of Strength

The game of baseball is a striking contrast to the sedate, leisurely Old Country game of cricket with its intervals for tea and its innings lasting two or three days. Nowadays there does not seem to be so much written or said about the real Canadian national game: lacrosse. It would be pity indeed if lacrosse were to be allowed to pass and become forgotten in Canada. For a manly robust summer game the pleasure of a well-matched lacrosse battle would be hard to excel. It may not be so entertaining to the spectators, but for a downright test of physical fitness and combination it is equal to any in the field. In modern times the tendency in sport as in work appears to be away from brawn in favor of brain. The midways at the fairs know nothing of the tough old boxing booths where brawny rustics were invited to don the gloves; wrestling on the green has given place to Japanese acrobats and vaudeville turns.

The opportunity to watch a straight bout between burly champions comes rarely. To see such a splendid specimen of manhood as Zybsco, or Frank Gotch, the western farmer, is a stirring incentive to the youth who is inspired to build up a robust constitution. How much better, with all its rough, strenuous work, is the glove fight and the wrestling match, than the morbid gazing at freak animals and fake criminal cars. Happily the sturdy spirit of sport still prevails in Canada; and even if lacrosse has to give way for baseball nothing will displace the stalwart contests of autumn on the Canadian football field and the fast hockey games of winter.

EXCITING BOAR HUNT

Lord Hardinge Proved Himself Adept With the Spear

In the course of a recent tour in India Lord Hardinge had an exciting experience at Lallgarh, to which place he had motored to take part in a boar hunt. The hunting party consisted of about half a dozen spears, and the beaters who entered the coverts drove into the open a fine herd of pigs, amongst them a boar which, separating itself from the herd, gave a capital run to his Excellency, the Maharajah, Captain Medlicott, and Thakur Gopji Singh. The boar proved full of fight, and as the huntsmen closed upon him he turned and charged straight at the Viceroy's horse. His Excellency took the boar cleverly on the point of his spear, getting well home in the shoulder. Twice more, however, the pig charged before he was finally despatched. A pig 196 pounds in weight, Lord Hardinge's victim proved the biggest of the bag of ten.

The Generous West

An immigration lecture persuaded N. F. Lamborn, a native of Derby, to visit Saskatchewan some three years ago. He did so and bought a 1,300 acre farm near Marshall, Sask., and he now has sufficient money to allow him to live in comfort for the rest of his life.

He bought 1,300 acres for $13 an acre and sold the farm for $65 an acre, getting $124,500 for the land he bought for $37,000. He had 1,340 acres in flax his last year on the farm. This crop netted him $37,000; he got 27,000 bushels of flax for which he obtained $1.40 per bushel. Mr. Lamborn made his living for three years and in addition cleared a profit of some $150,000.

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

NO DRUGS TO TAKE — YOU SIMPLY BREATHE A HEALING BALSAMIC VAPOR

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in the Nose and Throat.

Montreal this time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible way nowadays breathes the soothing vapors of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Ducane did, and writing from his office at 87 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of sprays, ointments, tablets and washes, but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages of my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened—my voice improved—and no longer hawked and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

Get the Dollar outfit — lasts two months and is guaranteed. Smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. each, all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

To avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.

Execution and Deportation.

Thomas Woodall one of the Sons of Rest from England, who evidently thought he could pick up dollars in the street here, was charged in the Police Court on Saturday with being drunk and disorderly. He pleaded not guilty and pleaded to be sent back to a country that would use him right, and not "execute a man like this." Mr. G. N. Gordon suggested the man be deported. Immigration Officer Miller said Woodall only arrived in the city on Monday last, was destitute and showed a great dislike for work. The Court decided that the execution of arrangements for deportation would be considered.

ARE YOU GOING WEST THIS FALL.

If so, take advantage of the exceptionally low one-way second-class Colonist Rates to Vancouver, Victoria, Nelson, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, etc., in effect daily until October 15; or if Western Canada is your destination, the low-rate Homeseekers' Excursions, in effect each Tuesday until October 28. The route is one of the most scenic in the world. Bear in mind that the Canadian Pacific Railway offers the finest possible equipment and fastest train service. It is the only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers, also dining-cars, to Winnipeg and Vancouver. By travelling C.P.R. you avoid the necessity of changing depots. All equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R., affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C.P.R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Stole Horse in Port Hope.

William O'Connor was, on Saturday morning at the Police Court, charged with stealing a horse and buggy the property of Meadows and Jordan, liverymen of Port Hope. He pleaded not guilty. When he arrived in the city on Friday he went to E. Jones the local liveryman, where he effected an exchange and $15 to boot. Not content he went to Gibb's livery and succeeded in selling the property, which belonged to Jones. After O'Connor had left the yard Mr. Gibbs thought he recognized the horse as one belonging to Jones and communicated with the latter. The police were then informed, and the accused was arrested by P. C. [illegible] outside the Bell Telephone office. Had the authorities delayed in apprehending the man, he would have got away as he was arranging to hire an auto. It might be incidentally [illegible] Brown in Belleville, and is wanted there for the theft of the clothes he [illegible] was wearing.

On Suspended Sentence.

Lavergne Killenbeck and Herbert Landry, who were charged on Friday last at Lindsay with vagrancy, were allowed to go on suspended sentence. They had been detained by the Lindsay police in the hope that some clue might be found to connect them with the robberies that have taken place in that town recently. The fathers of the two accused were in court, and had put forth all their energies to effect the release of the two young men. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused, and it was mainly on account of his excellent plea for the liberty of the two young men, that they were allowed to go on suspended sentence. They both have police records, and were warned that if ever they were caught within the [illegible] of the law again, their [illegible] would not be so easy [illegible].

"CASCARETS" ALWAYS STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right — who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

BOY-CONVICT SENDS LAST BULLET INTO HIS OWN HEAD

Stands off Police Hour, Writes Mother Farewell Note and Ends Life

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 11.—After he had exhausted his supply of ammunition in a battle with half a score of policemen who had surrounded him in a lodging house here early this morning Homer Cleveland Wiggins, youthful murderer of a Philadelphia policeman, and who escaped from the Eastern penitentiary in that city August 28, sent his last bullet in his revolver through his brain, dying almost instantly. Policeman Sewell Scott was shot over the heart by Wiggins and may die.

BATTLE TIES UP STREET CAR LINES

Policemen stationed themselves on adjoining roofs and in doorways and trolley cars were held up while volley after volley of shots were fired at the convict, who seemed to be conserving his ammunition and only fired when a member of the attacking party came within his view.

After an hour's fusillade, the report of a muffled shot came from Wiggins' rooms, and then the firing ceased. The patrolmen broke in the convict's door. They found him dead. Close by his side was a note, evidently written during a lull in the fusillade, and addressed to his mother, who lived in this city. It read:

"Dear Mother:

"Do not worry about me. I am better off dead. I will have no more misery. I am going to commit suicide. They will never take me alive. Goodbye, loving son,

(Signed) "HOMER."

BELIEVE HE WAS BOLD HOLD-UP MAN.

When searched at the police station $540 was found upon Wiggins' body, and the authorities now believe he was the highwayman who held up and stole $1,800 from the cashier at the office of the Wilmington and Philadelphia Traction Company here early last Thursday morning. A false beard and wig also were found in his room.

MOTHER AND THREE JAILED AS AIDERS.

Charged with abetting a robbery and receiving stolen goods, Mrs. L. M. Wiggins McDermott, mother of the escaped convict; Wiggins' brother, Harold, and two other men, were arrested today. The officers recovered two-thirds of the $1,800 stolen by Wiggins.

MOTHER JAILED, "AFFINITY" IS SOUGHT FOR MURDER

Mystery in Killing of Golden-Haired Little Girl Now Being Cleared

New York, Oct. 12.—Mystery surrounding the murder of a golden-haired child of three years yesterday began to clear today with the identification [illegible] a general police alarm for the apprehension of the man from whose flat the body was taken late yesterday afternoon.

The child was identified as Lulu Salerno by Mrs. Louise Roeber, who said she was the grandmother. Mrs. Roeber told the police that her daughter, Lulu's mother, had quarreled with her husband, Michael Salerno, a boot barber at Columbia University, and left him a year ago to live with another man.

Lulu, she said, was one of three children taken by Mrs. Salerno when the home was broken up. Mrs. Salerno last left her mother's home, according to the mother, a month ago with two men. One of them, Mrs. Roeber said, was Tony Fishera, over whom Mrs. Salerno and her husband had quarreled; the other was Joseph De Puma.

De Puma and Fishera, Mrs. Roeber said, occupied the same flat. It was from this flat that the child's body was taken to the morgue. A general alarm has been issued for De Puma's arrest.

The police asserted this afternoon that Mrs. Salerno was living at the flat when the child was murdered. Mrs. Salerno was hysterical when arrested this afternoon.

BODY REMOVED.

The child's body was brought to the morgue last night by an undertaker, who told a tale of having being coerced at the pistol's point to go to the gunman's flat and remove the body. In the flat he saw a blonde woman weeping. When detectives reached the apartment after she was gone, and with her the gunman.

The theory was advanced that the child had been kidnapped and was being held for ransom. There is no police record, however, of a child of that description being missing.

The undertaker, Ralph Pasquel, was held today pending further investigation. He says the gunman told him that he had hit the child as she begged for water at night.

"SUFFS" ATTACK PRISON GOVERNOR

London, Oct. 11.—Militant suffragettes attacked and severely maltreated Dr. Francis Edward Forward, the deputy governor and chief medical officer of Holloway Jail, where so many of them have been imprisoned.

Dr. Forward was walking along the street when he was assailed and was heavily belabored and bruised before he was able to make his escape. Two women caught hold of him and held him while a third beat him with a horsewhip.

The suffragettes accuse Dr. Forward of being responsible for the forcible feeding system, which he denies.

CROWN PRINCE RAPS KAISER

After Patching Up Two Years Quarrel, German Ruler and Son Are At Outs Again

Berlin, Oct. 11.—He's one little [illegible], is Friedrich Wilhelm Victor August Ernest Hohenzollern. But maybe anyone of us folks would be funny, too, under the same circumstances.

His father is Emperor of Germany, and Fred Wilhelm will have to take up the job as soon as his father quits. But, until he does quit, the old man won't let Fred touch a bit of the machinery. And all this seems to create a peeve in Fred, which he takes out on his daddy.

It has been really shameful, of late, how Fred has gone after father.

DIFFERENT IDEAS OF SPORT.

It has been really shameful of thirty years, Fred has done some hunting, but Fred's idea is to play tag with his deer; to chase it and tire it and shoot it only when it's so tired that it would die anyhow, while father's way is to hide in what they call a "shooting box," and when hired men drive the deer past them, shoot them by the dozens.

Very well. The other day Fred astonished folks by issuing a book on hunting and it seems as if his whole purpose was just to take a rap at dad.

He called folks butchers and no sportsmen who killed game from hunting boxes; real sportsmen gave their prey a chance to get away and didn't bag them, twenty at a time, from an easy chair in a little house. The latter way was too much like shooting at a herd of cattle. Whereupon Fred and his father were at outs again.

It was too bad, too, for only a short time before they had made up a two-year's quarrel, which started when Fred, sitting in the German parliament, as a mere onlooker, led an awful rumpus against the chancellor, his father's representative, because that dignified old statesman was talking too much against war to suit Freddie.

CRITICISM OF WAR PLANS

Only the other day, too, when father was celebrating the fact that Germany had been at peace for twenty-five years, another book came out pointing out what a delightful and interesting thing Germany could make of a little war with somebody or anybody. And the Crown Prince—that's Fred—had written an introduction to the volume, in which he practically said, "The fellow who wrote this book is dead right." Which again made it pretty tough on dad.

But it isn't fair to be too harsh with young Friedrich. In his home, with his wife and four babies, he's a gentle person.

Aside from baiting father and hunting, Fred's greatest pleasure consists in trying to turn his auto into an aeroplane. He has an idea that if the auto goes fast enough it will leave the rough roads and sail through the air, and he's been experimenting along this line for some years.

One of the finest sights in Berlin is to see one of Fritz' cars come tearing through Unter Den Linden, just as if it was a race track instead of the finest business street in the German capital.

"Ach! It's only Fred," sigh the Berliners, as they hustle out of the way.

THREW COMPANION INTO COLPOYS BAY

Wiarton, Ont., Oct. 11.—Emerson Darragh, Owen Sound, is under arrest here, charged with having thrown Charles Jones overboard from a launch in Colpoy's Bay, on Monday evening. Jones was drowned and his body has not been recovered.

The information was laid by Thos. Fleming, who was also in the launch. The charge will be heard here Monday, before Police Magistrate B. B. Miller.

BIRTH DECREASE IS ALARMING TO GERMANY

Mortality Increase Also Has Serious Effect on Military Strength

Berlin, Oct. 11.—A decided check in the growth of Germany's population, most alarming to the military aspects of the empire, is shown by the statistics for 1911 which have just been published. The surplus of births over deaths fell from 2[illegible] in 1910 to 74,000 in 1911, a shrinkage in the rate of great number of 1[illegible] or 50 per cent.

This marked decrease in the growth of the nations was due both to a reduction in the number of births and an increase in the death rate. Despite an increase in marriages from 4[illegible] to 512,819 the total number of births for the empire decreased from 1,[illegible] in 1910 to 1,[illegible] in 1911, while the number of deaths rose from 1,[illegible] to 1,[illegible], an increase of more than [illegible],000. This increase in mortality is attributed chiefly to the extraordinary heat and drought which prevailed during the summer of 1911, and under which infants suffered with particular severity.

Almost a third of the deaths, [illegible] during the year, were of children under one year old, some 46,000 babies more than in 1910 succumbing to the heat. The death rate for children in their first year rose from 1[illegible] in 1910 to 19.2 in 1911. The general death rate, too, after a steady decline for a number of years, rose to 18.2 per cent. as compared with 17.1 in 1910. Summing up the statistics in another form the surplus of births over deaths per thousand of population was only 11.3 in 1911, as against 13.6 in 1910, and 14.9 for 1909. These statistics bring out also the fact that almost 10 per cent. of the illegitimate children died before reaching their first birthday.

STEAMSHIPS CREW COWARDLY SOUGHT SAFETY IN LIFEBOATS AWFUL SCENES OF TERROR

Women and Men Become Hysterical and Tore Their Hair as the Flames Advanced

London, Oct. 13.—Arthur Spurgeon, London Manager of Cassell & Company has sent the following story by wireless:

"At 6 o'clock Thursday morning a fire alarm was sounded. We were roused from our berths and told to go on deck, as a fire had broken out in the hold. As we assembled on deck life belts were handed round. We were told that the fire might soon be put out, but the Captain thought it wise that all the passengers should put on life belts as a precaution. The fire upset the children, who cried bitterly. There were many babies in arms.

Could See the Flames.

"The fire grew worse. We saw things blazing down below. About ten o'clock there was a cry to put out the boats. The captain behaved splendidly, so did the officers, who were British. I am sorry to say the crew, who were Germans and Belgians, behaved very badly. The people rushed about wildly.

Sailors Saving Themselves.

"The crew seemed to think that they ought to have first place, and instead of quieting them they made the panic worse. The first officer took charge of the first boat, but, although he wanted the women and children saved first, a majority of those in the boats were members of the crew. They lowered a boat and just as it reached the water it was smashed against the ship's side. The boat broke in two and all were drowned. Meanwhile others of the crew were attempting to launch a second boat. I cannot say who was in charge, but I know that after the chief steward had thrown some provisions into the boat he jumped in himself. There were more men than women or children in this boat.

All Was Confusion.

"There was a big sea running. The boat was broken against the ship's side and all were drowned. These two boats were amidship. Three other boats were were aft, were put out. The fourth officer was in one of them but I cannot say which. All was confusion. The ropes broke and the tackle jammed and the occupants were thrown into the water and drowned or killed.

"We saw rafts sent out from the Carmania, but nobody told us to jump. In fact we didn't know what the rafts were for. At 6 o'clock on Thursday night, the decks aft began to get hot. The decks got hotter and hotter, but we were too excited to feel the heat."

An Explosion.

"There was an explosion which threw up great quantities of blazing wood and red hot metal. Some were killed. This made the panic worse. After the explosion I thought I had better jump. I am a good swimmer. An English passenger and a member of the crew said they would come with me."

The Chateauguay Election

"What do you think of Chateauguay, Mr. Burnham?" asked The Times yesterday.

"I agree with The Globe," said our member. "That paper says, amongst other things, that the chief issues were fought out there, and we won. It is a striking victory. But I do not believe in too much party chuckling over these things. It is not so much that the party wins as that Canada wins. We must always look to that!"

CHATEAUGUAY VICTORY HELPS GOVERNMENT IN ONTARIO

Conservatives Eager to Keep Majority Where it Was in 1911—Near the 600 Mark

London, Ont., Oct. 13.—This place is the storm centre to-day of one of the hottest election campaigns ever fought out in East Middlesex. Both Liberals and Conservatives feel the importance of carrying the seat at all costs and they are straining every nerve to do it.

The Conservative majority in East Middlesex has generally been around 300. With reciprocity up before the electors at the last general election, however, this was boosted to 600 and the supporters of Mr. Frank Glass, the Conservative standard bearer are determined it shall not drop below that figure in the present bye-election.

"If we let the majority drop now, the Liberals will say we are losing ground. We have to do as well, and better, that is all there is to it," declared R. O. Smith, Conservative organizer to-day.

Chateauguay Victory Helps.

The Conservatives are highly elated over the victory in Chateauguay. It will prove a big help down here in East Middlesex. Everybody will want to get in line now, is the way one worker puts it.

The great issue is the naval question. Feeling runs very high in the riding, as was shown by the enthusiastic reception given to Hon. W. T. White at Ilderton. Major Sam. Sharpe will be in the thick of the fight this week, having returned today.

To-night Hon. T. W. Crothers and Donald Sutherland, M.P., will address a mass meeting at Dorchester, while H. R. Morphy, M.P., and Oliver Wilcox, M.P., will be the speaker at the Chelsea Green meeting.

FELL 500 FEET INTO WATER, NOT INJURED

Capt. William Walb Got Into Difficulties With Bi-Plane—Machine Wrecked.

New York, Oct. 13.—While flying in a bi-plane from Hempstead Plains Long Island, to the Aerodome at Oakland Heights yesterday afternoon Capt. William Walb got into difficulties when over New York bay and fell with his machine a distance of 500 feet into the water. Capt. Walb was uninjured, except for shock due to submersion. The bi-plane was wrecked.

The aviator who is said to be a former officer of the German army was making the trip to Oakwood Heights to take part in the aeroplane race around Manhattan Island today.

KING AND QUEEN MENACED.

Suffragettes Make Mad Rush for Carriage—Police Prevent.

London, Oct. 13.—Suffragettes made a frenzied rush for the royal carriage bearing the King and Queen from a London music hall on Saturday night, shouting, "Women are being tortured in prison." The police intercepted them and the crowd handled them roughly.

Stung.

Two ladies who had just been introduced to each other at the reception had exchanged a few conventional remarks. Then the young one remarked: "I can't imagine what ails that tall blonde man over there. He was so attentive to me a little while ago and now he won't look at me."

"Perhaps he saw me come in," answered the other woman. "I'm his wife."

GOOD WORK BEING DONE AT RICE LAKE

Fine Channel Being Cut at Mouth of Otonabee River.

The work being done this year by the Engineering Department of the Trent Canal will be a boon to steamboat men and shippers on Rice Lake waters. During the period of low water, boats have had all kinds of trouble in forcing their way from Rice Lake to a distance of a couple of miles up the Otonabee river. A dredge was put to work during the latter part of the season by Superintending Engineer Grant and a channel cut ranging from about 75 to 175 feet wide and from eleven feet deep. The work is under the personal supervision of Mr. E. G. Cameron, civil engineer, who evidently knows what is required and how to accomplish it.

Now that a real start has been made we hope to see the work of clearing a good channel all the way from Rice Lake to Peterborough. A good deal of this work might easily be done in the winter, especially where currents keep the ice from forming to any depth.

NOVEMBER SESSION IS UNLIKELY

Liberal Headquarters at Ottawa Threaten Protest—Mr. Pelletier's Comment on Election

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—The opinion has been expressed in some political circles that, in view of the Government's success in Chateauguay and the decided probability of its carrying the other elections now pending, the session of Parliament may be called next month.

Inquiry to-day in high circles, however, elicited the reply that this is very improbable. The Cabinet as yet has not finally decided the matter but in the case of a November session it is always customary to summon it before this. The probabilities still point to Parliament being called for the week after New Year, and the session should terminate easily by the end of May.

Pelletier's View.

The view of the French-speaking wing of the Borden Cabinet on the result in Chateauguay was expressed in an interview to-day by Hon. L. P. Pelletier.

"For months and months," he said "the Liberals have been shouting that the Province of Quebec awaited the earliest opportunity to emphatically condemn the Government. Now here is a country invariably Liberal which returns a Conservative after Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the fight his fight. If the general elections the Liberals demanded had been held, the Government would have swept Quebec like the other provinces. The result is an endorsation of our naval policy and a condemnation of the Senate's action."

Threaten Protest.

It was stated at Liberal headquarters here to-day that a protest will at once be entered against the return of Morris, alleging corrupt practices on his behalf in Chateauguay.

BLACK HAND IN NEW YORK

Blamed for Shock Which Made the Earth Tremble.

New York, Oct. 13.—Despite the recent round-up of Italians suspected of being responsible for most of the bomb outrages committed in New York, the East side was disturbed today by one of the most terrific explosions in years. An entire block was shaken and almost every pane of glass throughout the block was shattered. The grocery store of Candelo Gatto was wrecked. Gatto said he had received several blackhand letters recently, but had ignored them. Two hundred and fifty persons were driven from their houses by the explosion.

$10,000 DAMAGE TO STOCK AND MERCHANDISE

Early yesterday morning a Grand Trunk freight train, No. 10, which travels between Lindsay and Belleville, left the metals this side of Best's Station, owing to the rails being crowded out. The metals were torn up for a considerable distance, and traffic was blocked for nearly five hours. When the smoke and dust cleared it was found that some 12 cars had piled themselves up on the rails and scattered their contents for half a mile. The damage to rolling stock and merchandise is estimated to amount to about $10,000. The train crew escaped uninjured.

MR. CYRIL MAUDE
The Eminent English Actor-Manager, at The Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Oct. 27 in THE SECOND IN COMMAND.

ELECTRICAL EXPERT WILL BE SENT TO PETERBOROUGH

The Dominion Railway Board met in Toronto yesterday, and among other questions was the request for an order from the city compelling the C.P.R. Telegraph to remove their telegraph poles off George street. It is generally understood that these interfere with the paving operations. The Board allowed the matter to stand until the question is investigated more thoroughly.

Mr. Angus MacMurphy, solicitor for C.P.R., said the company would be willing to put the wires on the buildings if something more than a verbal consent could be obtained. This was not forthcoming. They objected to putting in small sections of their lines underground for the reason that the practice was extremely dangerous, but they would consider putting their leads underground throughout the city.

Mayor Bradburn and Solicitor Hall were not prepared to accept any alternative, so an electrical engineer will be sent to investigate the difficulty.

The C.P.R., before the same Board, obtained permission to construct a track to the freight shed in the yards which would run across King street, and were allowed to change the alignment and grade of the other tracks across the same street.

We don't know where we're goin' but we're on our way.

REV. DR. SULLIVAN TO SPEAK HERE

Former Roman Catholic Priest to Address Mass Meeting in the Opera House Here.

Rev. Joseph Sullivan, D.D., of Olivet Baptist church, Montreal, will deliver an address in the Opera House here, under the auspices of the Protestant Federation, on Sunday afternoon next, commencing at three o'clock. The subject of Dr. Sullivan's address will be "The History and Meaning of Protestantism."

Dr. Sullivan was formerly a priest of the Roman Catholic Church, a fact which will no doubt enable him to deal with the subject in a more than usually interesting manner.

There will also likely be a second mass meeting in the same place, in the evening, when addresses will be delivered by Dr. Sullivan and a number of Ministerial delegates to the Baptist convention which will be in session here from the 15th to the 21st

FOUND NEW ARCTIC CONTINENT

It Is North of Siberia, and is Mountainous and Uninhabited—Evidently of Volcanic Origin

The newely found land extends in an narrow strip from about 60 miles north of Cape Tchelyus Kin, also known as northern Cape the northern termination of the Asiatic Continent, to 81 degrees north.

St. Michael, Alaska, Octl 13.—The Russian flagship Taimyr, and its consort, the Waygatch, which constitute a Russian polar expedition, under Commander Wilkitsky, which left Vladivostock June the10 of this year reached St. Michael, storm bound, October 9, and brought to that port news of the discovery north of Siberia on August 21, in latitude 81 north longitude 104 east, of a new, uninhabited mountainous land, possibly a continent. The expedition landed with difficulty, raised the Russian flag, and took possession in the name of the Czar. Commander Wilkitsky christened the new land "Nicholas Second Land."

Commander Wilkitsky says the shore of the new country where the expedition landed and along which the vessels traveled is rocky, with high abrupt cliffs and inter or peaks, formed evidently from volcanic activities.

The expedition saw much evidence of the presence on the land of reindeer. Many walrus were seen and bird life was plentiful. A number of polar bears also were noticed. The vegetation on the new land, Commander Wilkitsky says, was but scant, and there was much snow.

THE POSITION OF IRELAND IS TOTALLY IMPRACTICAL OPINION OF IRISH NATIONALISTS

Redmond Says That He Will Never Consent to Give Ulster Her Freedom

London, Oct. 13.—Mr. John Redmond, Irish Nationalist leader, brands as "totally impracticable" Hon. Winston Churchill's proposal to exclude a portion of Ulster Province from the operation of the Home Rule bill.

"No section of National opinion in Ireland," said Mr. Redmond at Limerick, "ever suggested such a plan or will tolerate it. No responsible leader of the Irish Unionists advanced the idea as a means of settlement, but merely as a means of wrecking the Home Rule bill. Irish Nationalists will never assent to the partition or mutilation of their nation. Ireland is a unit. We will never assent to any proposal creating a sharp dividing line between Catholics and Protestants. The idea of two nations in Ireland is to Nationalists an abomination and a blasphemy. Ulster is as much a part of Ireland as Munster."

Referring to the statement of Mr. Churchill that the Tories could repeal the Home Rule bill if it is passed and they return to power at the next general election, Mr. Redmond said:

"If they think they could with ease and impunity violate another national treaty they know very little of the Ireland they would have to deal with to-day."

The Quebec Press and the Hierarchy

Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, has forbidden the Roman Catholics of his diocese to read the newspaper Le Pays, edited by Mr. Langlois, M.L.A. Mr. Langlois has been severely criticising the lack of educational facilities in the Province of Quebec, and from time to time has joined issue on some other subjects with his grace of Montreal.

The article elsewhere deals with this matter fully. After reading it, the public will be able to draw its own conclusions.

JACK JOHNSON TO STAY IN FRANCE

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Jack Johnson, negro champion heavyweight fighter, has become a naturalized citizen of France, according to a letter received here by a negro friend. As a consequence the Government will order forfeited the $30,000 bonds given in the white slavery charges which will be called here to-day.

In the letter Johnson stated he was doing well in vaudeville. Next week he said he will open a nine weeks' engagement at Vienna. My home hereafter will be Paris.

SOCIAL EVENING AT ST. PAULS CHURCH

Last evening the Young Peoples' Guild of St. Paul's church, entertained the students of the Normal School to a social evening. Mr. W. Hill, president of the Guild, occupied the chair. The Rev. Pogue addressed a few words of welcome to the visitors. As is known, some 150 Normal students are in training in the city and it can be safely said that practically this number partook of the hospitality of the Guild last night. After Rev. Pogue had welcomed the students, a musical programme consisting of both vocal and instrumental selections were rendered, and met with the hearty approbation of all present. Mr. Keys, principal of the Normal School, gave a short address. Renditions among others in the musical programme may be mentioned, violin solo by Miss Mary Logan, which was most warmly received, her talents as a violinist being generally known, and two pianoforte selections by Miss Adams, who has lately come to the city from Belleville. Her accomplishments of mastery over the keyboard, called for continuous applause which rang heartily from every corner of the room. Mr. Logan also gave an interesting presentation.

After the musical programme had been completed, a luncheon, provided by the young people was served, and enjoyed.

St. Paul's has ranked among one of the first to provide a night's entertainment for the Normalites and needless to say their hospitality was greatly appreciated.

If Tea and Coffee Don't Agree
Use
POSTUM

A prominent physician says:

"If, on discontinuing coffee, you feel tired, languid, and 'out of sorts,' the coffee had better be forever discontinued, for you are on the verge of inebriety."

Thousands of people have taken warning and proved what was the cause of their headaches, biliousness and nervousness. (Tea contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

A great many former tea or coffee drinkers, feeling the need of a hot drink with meals, now use

POSTUM

A rich, nourishing food-drink, with a delightful, snappy flavour. Postum is made from prime whole wheat, and a small percent of New Orleans molasses. Contains no caffeine or any other drug.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum requires fifteen to twenty minutes boiling to bring out the rich flavour and food values.

Instant Postum requires no boiling, but is made instantly by stirring a teaspoonful of the soluble powder in a cup of hot water and adding cream and sugar to taste.

Drink it instead of tea or coffee,

CARE OF MILK AND CREAM

It is impossible to produce clean milk and cream unless the cows, stable, milker, utensils, and separator are clean.

To wash milk utensils use, first, cold water for rinsing; second, warm water containing a small quantity of good washing powder for cleaning; third, boiling water or steam for sterilizing.

Use a metallic strainer; it is practically impossible to keep cloth strainers sweet and clean and free from bacteria.

Skim the milk as soon after milking as possible, and cool the cream at once.

Skim a cream testing from 35 to 45 per cent.—the richer the cream the better it will keep. By skimming a rich cream, more skim milk is left at home for feed, and there is also a smaller bulk on which to pay express charges.

Do not mix warm, new cream with cold cream until it has been cooled.

Keep the cans of cream in a tank of cold water until time of delivery.

Wash the separator thoroughly after each separation.

Deliver the cream to the creamery or cream station early in the morning.

Deliver the cream not less than three times a week during the summer, and twice a week during the Winter.

Protect the cans of cream from the sun by covering with canvas or with a wet sack while on route.

YOUNG GIRL ORGANIST

But Eleven Years Old, Yet She Has Won Distinction

Miss Eva Chapman, an eleven-year-old girl living at South Side, Bishop Auckland, Durham, has been appointed organist at St. Saviour's Church in that town. Miss Chapman's abilities as an organist are remarkable for one so young, and she has in addition won many musical distinctions. She betrayed her great musical gift at a very tender age, and developed a passion for the art.

Beginnings of Paraffin

Petroleum was produced in a small way in California very early in the history of the country, in fact, long before it was invaded by the army of gold-seekers. Mr. C. Morrell, a druggist in San Francisco, is commonly credited with being the first to attempt the distillation of kerosene from crude petroleum. This was in 1857, but several years prior to that Andreas Pico made illuminating oil from petroleum which he obtained in the Newhall region in Los Angeles County. This oil was burned, so it is said, in lamps in the Mission San Fernando.

"Play up, Ireland"

When the jury at Dublin Sessions list of previous convictions, mainly from Christopher Woolfe, at Dalymount, on the occasion of the International football match, a purse containing $55, the Clerk read out a long list of previous convictions, mainly in England and Scotland. Scott said he came from England. "And at the match," said the Recorder, "you were shouting 'Play up, Ireland'—trying to distract Woolfe's attention while you took his money." Scott was sent to prison for one year.

FANS LIKE BASE STEALERS

All the Managers Are Out After Speed Merchants

Baseball fans like clever pitching, delight in plenty of slugging, enthuse over sensational fielding, but enjoy no feature of the game more than the art of base-running. Nothing excites the fans more than some bit of daring on the base lines. What could be more thrilling than a cleverly executed steal of home, with the winning run of the game.

Speed, properly converted, is the main asset of every successful team and the crying need of every club that is in the rut. A team that always needs a bunch of hits to get only a few runs is a club that will not be at all dangerous in the long run. It is the team that is always taking chances on the bases, the club that makes its opportunities, that generally cuts in on the world's series melon. When a baseball club is going badly inject a little speed into the aggregation and it will usually take on renewed life and energy at once.

A TINY REPUBLIC

No Woman Has Set Foot in It For Five Centuries

The newest of all European countries is far and away the tiniest. Its name is Mount Athos, and it came into existence when the Ambassadors of the Powers decided that, however else the Balkan question was settled, Mount Athos was to be an independent holy republic.

It is a mountain twice as high as Ben Nevis, near Salonika, and is certainly unique among the countries of Europe in the fact that no woman has set foot in it for five centuries. When, some years ago, the Queen of Roumania announced her intention of visiting it, the rulers of the holy mountain threatened to commit suicide if she persisted. The new republic, which has a little sea-coast of its own, holds another record. It is the only State in Europe whose national income is obtained solely by selling crucifixes, rosaries, amulets, and similar holy objects. As Mount Athos contains twenty-one monasteries, the export is quite a large one. The least-known of the other pocket countries of Europe is San Marino, in the heart of Italy. It also is a mountain, surrounded on three sides by perpendicular cliffs. It possesses nearly a hundred castles with an army of about one man to each castle. The last time San Marino was at war was when one General and twenty-three men solemnly marched out to assist Napoleon, who received them with full military honors. A little principality in Austria, Liechtenstein, has nominally been at war with Prussia ever since 1866. At any rate, peace has never been made.

FIRST SHOTS AT A CARIBOU

J. T. Studley Fired Seven Times in Vain Because He Had "Buck Ague."

What the "buck ague" is like is described in "The Journal of a Sporting Nomad," by J. T. Studley. The author's first attempt against the caribou resulted in humiliation. He tells that Johnny, his Indian guide, suddenly dropped like a stone into the wet grass and muttered "Stag," and there, sure enough, strolling along the front, was a fine caribou. "I sat down, resting my elbow on my knee, waiting until he should put in an appearance on my side of the rock. I had the rifle to my shoulder and at last the grand beast walked into view, not more than 100 yards away. He stopped, looking about him, and I drew a bead on his shoulder. Useless! The rifle wabbled all over the place, and for the life of me I could not keep it still, nor hold my breath. My heart was in my mouth and all the time the rifle trembled and shook. The caribou moved on a few paces and I determined that if I meant to shoot at all I must obtain better control of my nerves. I still covered him with the sights, or thought I was doing so, and I pulled the trigger on the beast that was standing broadside on, with his head turned from me.

"I was using a 500 Winchester Express, and it was the work of an instant to pump another cartridge into the chamber and fire again. Still no move on the part of my target. He faced the other way nonchalantly, listening with interest to the echo of the rifle in the distant canyons. I was getting desperate now and could hear the Micmac muttering all sorts of imprecations behind my back, which only made things worse. I fired five more shots at that caribou as he stood as though carved in wood, persevering until he turned off calmly into a belt of timber.

"This story is an absolute fact. I would not have credited it had I not been the one to make such a fool of myself. My feelings can be more readily imagined than described—I could have cried with vexation and shame. Johnny took the rifle, looked it over, patted it as though he would demand of it whether the fault lay with it or the user, and I tried to make excuses to myself for myself."

Coach and Four Wedding

A wedding couple began their honeymoon with a drive in a coach and four through London, which came up especially from Redhill. The bridegroom was Lieutenant Percy Dunning, Royal Munster Fusiliers, while the bride was Miss Mona Chaplin, only sister of Mr. Bertie Chaplin, the well known Sussex amateur cricketer. The ceremony took place at Marylebone Church, where a number of the bridegroom's comrades formed a guard of honor. Lieutenant Dunning is well known in sporting circles, while the lady is a leading player in the Sussex county hockey team.

TYPHOID "VACCINATION"

New York is agitating anti-typhoid "vaccination." In view of the recent epidemic on the East side, the health commissioners earnestly advocate such a step. If the Empire state were to make it compulsory, other states would doubtless follow suit.

Inoculation for typhoid has practically stamped out the disease in army and navy. House physicians and nurses of practically every large hospital are thus immunized. No prudent voyager to the tropics is without it. The anti.toxin is harmless and confers immunity for at least three years.

With typhoid vaccination universal, the disease could probably be stamped out. Not only would this method be far surer, but also less costly than the elaborate water and dairy inspections.

Where typhoid and small-pox differ is that the patient with the latter is a menace to the community. Smallpox is one of the most contagious diseases. Public safety demands vaccination therefor. Typhoid is not transmissable if simple precautions are observed. Typhoid inoculation, though a long step toward a Utopian goal of disease prevention, is not imperative.

The difference is significant. A strong prejudice exists against vaccination todayf In the case of typhoid it would be sufficient to defeat the enactment of compulsory inoculation.

THE DEATH PENALTY

It is a question for debate whether the death penaly acts as a deterrent to murder, says the Hamilton Herald. Are there more murders in the State of Michigan according to population than there are in New York State? In the State of Maine capital punishment was abolished in 1876, restored in 1883 and again abolished in 1887. Capital punishment was abolished in Michigan in 1847; in Rhode Island in 1852; in Wisconsin in 1853.

In many sections of the United States public sentiment is so averse to the death penalty that it is extremely to secure the conviction of a person charged with a capital, and thus many guilty persons escape all punishment for their crimes. In Kansas the death penalty was for many years practically suspended through the refusal of successive Governors to sign the death warrants.

Among European nations Holland, Italy and Portugal have abolished the death penalty. In Belgium it has not been administered in nearly fifty years. In France, after a cessation of fifteen years, the guilotine was used in 1909 to execute publicly four murderers—one at Parus, three at Valence. There is no doubt that the death penalty is losing favor with the people.

Every Weak Throat Quickly Strengthened And Bronchitis Cured

Grand Results Follow the Direct Breathing Remedy, Which Cures Without Drugging.

The country is fairly wild over the wonderful recovery that throat sufferers are making every day with Catarrhozone. From ocean to ocean come letters telling of rapid recoveries and cures when the complaint was chronic and long standing. It's a brand new principle upon which Catarrhozone works—not a single dose of medicine to take—nothing to upset the stomach or spoil digestion.

You can breathe through the Catarrhozone Inhaler medicated air that is full of healing, soothing balsams, full of piney antiseptic essences that resemble the air of the pine woods in the Adirondacks. The piney vapor has a truly marvelous action on weak throats. It brings strength and health to the bronchitic, stops that hacking, irritating cough, prevents hoarseness and difficult breathing. You can't find anything for weakthroated people on earth more beneficial than Catarrhozone. It means heaven on earth to the man that has had bronchitis, catarrh or throat irritation. You will realize this the first time you use Catarrhozone, which is a scientific preparation specially designed for diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Get the large size, it lasts two months, costs $1.00; medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

ONTARIO'S GREATEST ISSUE

The Struggle Between an Archbishop and an Editor in Montreal and Other Things Show What's Coming in this Province

Liberty of the Press.

A remarkable document was read in Roman Catholic churches in Quebec three Sundays ago. His Grace Mgr. Bruchesi, archbishop of Montreal, in a mandement, forbids the reading of the newspaper Le Pays edited and published, by Mr. Godfrey Langlois, M.L.A., for St. Louis division, who has become prominent in the public life of Quebec by his advocacy of educational reform and the betterment of the position of school teachers, and especially compulsory attendance at the schools.

Le Pays, as stated in the episcopal document, was warned a year ago by the archbishop that the direction of the paper was displeasing to the episcopal authority, and it is understood that Mr. Langlois had several interviews with Mgr. Bruchesi on the subject.

The mandement, which is the 104th issued by the present archbishop, reads as follows:

"Paul Bruchesi, by the grace of God and of the Apostolic See, Archbishop of Montreal.

"To the secular and regular clergy, to the religious communicants, and to all the faithful of our archdiocese, Salutation, peace and blessing on Our Lord,

"Our Very Dear Brethren: More than a year ago we gave to the editors of Le Pays a solemn warning, which you have not forgotten, and which terminated in these terms:

" 'We hope that you will listen to our appeal, and that they will change their methods as well as their language. We conjure them, in fact, to place their pens and their talent to the service of a better cause; that they may remain faithful to our old religious and national traditions; that they respect the church, its dogmas, its preceptsi its discipline, at well as those who are depositors of its authority. By so doing they will cause us great joy; whereas if they do otherwise they will force us to discharge towards them, in order to protect the souls of our people, a duty painful, no doubt, but before which our conscience will not hesitate an nstant.'

"They have, however, continued their deplorable work, and consequently oblige us to have recourse to painful measures, which we would have wished to avoid."

The mandement, after further recital, makes direction to the people, closing:

"Considering, therefore, that Le Paye is of a nature to gravely injure religious interests, and to cause a real harm, especially to the young; in virtue of the power inherent to our espocopal charge and of the power which we hold from the Holy See; having only in view the welfare of religion and the saving of souls, the holy name of God invoked, we formally interdict the reading of this newspaper by all the Catholics in our diocese.

"The present mandement will be read in all the churches and public chapels where Divine service is held, the first Sunday after its reception.

"Given at Montreal under our sign and seal, and the countersign of our chancellor, the twenty-fifth of September, one thousand, nineteen hundred and thirteen."

The Editor's Reply.

Mr. Langlois is apparently determined to put up a fight, at least as long as he can financially stand it. We quote an interview with Mr. Langlois, published in The Montreal Gazette:

"I consider this interdiction as an unjustifiable attack on the liberty of the press," said Mr. Langlois. "Mgr. Bruchesi has judged it prudent to abstain from indicating the motive for which he has interdicted our paperi but the cure of St. Louis de France clearly attributed this interdiction to our campaign against the 'sheep' and to our hostility against the law which excludes French-speaking Protestants from the St. Jean Baptiste Society. This cannot have been done for religious motives, as I affirm in a categorical manner, that we have always manifested the most profound respect towards the Church, that we have never written a line or a word against the principles or the dogmas of the Church. It has always been a rule in the office of Le Paye not to discuss religious questions. Besides there are many other questions to debate which are within our jurisdiction, that we should not have to invade a domain which is not ours.

"If Mgr. Bruchesi interdicts Le Paye today it is because he wants to stifle our work of reform and paralyze our increasing influence with the leading classes. What he does not want is to see the newspapers and public men acquire the habit of thinking for themselves.

"I protested in the Quebec Legislature and in Le Paye against the iniquitous law which places French-speaking Protestants under the ban of our race, and which makes the state declare that you cannot be a French-Canadian unless you are a Catholic. Mgr. Bruchesi has not forgiven me for having taken the part of French Protestants.

"I asked French-Canadians to abandon the sheep as a national emblem and to bring into the battle of life more virility, more independence, more force. Monseigneur does not wish us to touch the sheep. It is, forsooth, not a question concerning which free discussion may ensue.

"Mgr. Bruchesi is discontented with the vigorous campaign which we carried on for the purpose of demanding that Laval University divest itself of its significance and put forth efforts to rise to the height of the great and fruitful work which is being carried on by McGill.

"Monseigneur could never relish our crusades against mediocrity in educational matters, the insufficiency of the school program, the incompetency of the school mistresses, and against the great number of illiterate persons found throughout our provinces, any more than His Grace could see with pleasant eye the battles which we carried on in favor of obligatory education, uniformity of school text books, or the creation of a minister of education.

"Therein lies my only crime and therein lies the causes of the interdiction which has been launched against our paper."

"And what you do?" Mr. Langlois was asked.

"I am determined to face the music if the friends of Le Pays and the partizans of liberty of speech will stand by me and give me their aid. I will take note of the material effects which will follow upon this mandement. I shall, of course, seek redress before the courts and with my friends! I will arrange matters in such a way that the matter will be pressed right to the Privy Council.

"My personality is as nothing in this battle. It is liberty of opinion, liberty of thought and liberty of the press which must triumph."

The above extracts are of vital concern to the people of Ontario, says The World. A determined and organised effort is going on in this province, and in Quebec, to establish the French-Canadian system of sectarian schools in Ontario. The bilingual movement is but another name for this effort. It proceeds by steps, not in any broad program, but persistently. The school regulations of the province are defied in some of the French townships in Eastern Ontario. The claim is made that the French language has equal rights with English in Ontario. The Ontario Gazette of this week announces incorporation of L'Association Canadienne Française d'Education d'Ontario, "to promore the intellectual, moral, physical and general development of the French-Canadian in the Province of Ontario." This is the legal establishment of the movement. A determined effort is under way to break down the English public school system in Eastern Ontario and to substitute therefor the Roman Catholic system of Quebec and to enforce it by means of a solid or block vote wherever it can be established. And there are men in politics in Ontario and Canada who see a chance to get into power by the situation that is hereby created!

Furthermore, we have now a French Roman Catholic bishop at North Bay in this province. If Archbishop Bruchesi can issue mandements against a newspaper editor in Quebec who seeks improved public education we may soon have the same in Ontario! Are we going to drift into that condition of affairs and are we to have the inferior system of education of Quebec established in this province?

The World places these facts without one word of prejudice against our French-Canadian fellow countrymen; but we do assert that English is the language of this province, that all our public schools must be English and nothing else and that we are not willing to have established in this province the system of cursing -- editor who advocates the better education for the people. We believe we also speak the views of many English Roman Catholics, clergy and laymen, in this matter.

EAT CABBAGE, FISH, SAUSAGE, NEW BREAD

No Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or Upset Stomach if you'll take "Pape's Diapepsin"—Try This!

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

POET'S CORNER

Readers are invited to contribute to this column. Matter to be either original or otherwise.

A PRAYER.

Father, at the close of day,
Hear me when to Thee I pray,
Give me strength and grace to grow
Strong and gentle here below,
Teach me the art of being kind,
And to the faults of others blind,
To bear the burdens of the cross,
And grieve not over earthly loss,
To love my neighbor, speak no ill,
In every trial be calm and still,
To help and cheer along life's way,
Some fellow-creature every day,
To help the poor and needy one,
To say Thy will, not mine, be done;
To soothe the sufferer's every pain,
That tortures body, soul and brain;
To follow ever love and truth,
Like the fair and gentle Ruth.
O, Father, hear Thy suppliant child,
And guide me o'er life's desert wild.
Until in heaven loved and free,
My soul reposes safe with Thee.

JUDGEMENT RESERVED IN BILLINGTON CASE

Mrs. Alice Billington was charged at the Police Court yesterday with ill-treating her niece, Edith Payne. Mr. McElderry appeared for the accused and Crown Attorney Wood, assisted by Mr. Goodwill appeared for the prosecution.

Through her counsel, Mrs. Billington elected to be tried summarily, and pleaded "not guilty."

Mr. G. Cochrane, local agent for the Children's Shelter, described how on the night of the 9th, he received three telephone calls to 545 Sherbrooke street, and when he arrived the little girl was washing dishes in the rear of the house. He asked her about the alleged ill-treatment, and informed Mrs. Billington that he was going to take her away, and investigate the case. He took the girl to the Shelter, and was present when Dr. Amys examined her.

Edith Payne, the little girl in question was next called, and described how she was sent to the store to get some goods, and as she was rather a long time gone, her aunt gave her a beating, but waited till the following morning, when her uncle (Mr. Billington) had gone to work. She described how she had been tied to the bed by her wrists, and had been beaten by a strap, about three feet long, and an inch or an inch and a quarter wide.

Dr. Amys, called, said he examined the wounds on the child at the Children's Shelter, and these he would judge had been inflicted by some flexible apparatus. The marks were very much injected and very red. He then read to the court a list of the marks that he found, and these were numerous, being for the most part around the upper part of the body.

The defence alleged that the child had been punished for telling lies, and Mrs. Billington denied that the child had been whipped without its clothes on.

Several witnesses for the defence all said that they had not seen the little girl ill-treated.

After all the evidence had been taken, Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment indefinitely, giving the custody of the child to the Children's Aid Society.

It may be mentioned that Mrs. Billington has been before the Court before for whipping the child.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 5 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

ARMF AND YOUTH

Sir Ian Hamilton's Pamphlet on National Training

General Sir Ian Hamilton finds fault with the present method of teaching boys because it engenders too much individualism—the direct result of the competitive examination. "Excess of individualism," he writes, "becomes a disruptive force, rendering co-operation impossible, and it is this excess of a thing, good in moderation, I am tilting against when I ask you if we might not fairly try and reinforce the public-spirited, patriotic side of school life." Secondly, every citizen should have a conception of the State in peace and of the every-day duties of a citizen, and also a conception of the State in war and his last ultimate duty. If this conception can be clearly stamped on the youth of the nation, a living force will be created. General Hamilton vigorously attacks those who insist on drill, scouting, etc., being merely physical exercises with no bearing on real war. This, he says, "amounts to a deliberate rejection of the finest idea that can be put into a boy's head, the idea that each male citizen holds his life only in fief for his country." Why not let us be honest? Let us look things in the face and press for compulsory cadet training in all schools, public and private—such is the General's plea.

With regard to the State in time of peace, this remarkable pamphlet contains the following suggestions:

A course of military training for all boys as the best antidote to excess of individualism. The cadet corps a part of our school curriculum giving cohesion to the nation.

Military training giving definite shape to a sense of citizenship now vague and formless. The cadet corps serving as a constant object lesson in the subservience of the boy to the group—of the group to the company.

The necessity, as a first step, of being honest with ourselves and with the boys. A halt to be called in the practice of pretending that cadet corps are aiming at nothing more serious than physical drill.

When the State is in danger the youth of the country should be induced voluntarily and in the face of all men to place their lives at its disposal. "As the Church confirms a boy in his religion," runs an eloquent passage, "so should the State confirm the youth definitely in citizenship, or permit him definitely to abjure his political rights. No compulsion. Leave him his old-age pension. But do not let a male vote, that is, take his share of governing a country, when he has in anticipation, refused deliberately to shed in its defence one drop of the thin, ungenerous fluid imagined by him to be blood."

MUSIC and DRAMA

GRAND OPERA HOUSE, SATURDAY NEXT, OCT. 18th, MATINEE AND NIGHT.

The success of Harold Bell Wright's novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills," made into a play by its author in collaboration with Elsbery W. Reynolds, is proving just as big on the stage as in book form its does in the book stores.

The story of the play is based on a somewhat dramatic plot of mystery. An unknown comes into the Ozark mountains and because of his clerical bearing and readiness to officiate for the regular pastor of the mountaineers a portion of his disguise is penetrated. The mountaineers who live so much to themselves are willing to let the man live the life of a partial recluse. He makes friends with one family and volunteers for the place of Shepherd. In this guise he attempts to expiate the wrong-doings of his son who several years previously had come into the mountains and wronged one of the young women. Her father has vowed deadly vengeance on the betrayer of his daughter, but he has disappeared, leaving no trace of his whereabouts. It is generally supposed that he is dead. The good Shepherd wins the love and respect of the mountaineers, though at one time his life is endangered by a lawless band of "whiskey runners" who suspect he is a revenue officer.

There are many dramatic episodes in the play, but its strength lies in the unfolding and development of its characters. The Shepherd is a most impressive figure, mentally and physically. The young woman who is the heroine of the story is untrammelled by the conventions of the town and has good red blood in her veins. With the aid of the shepherd she polishes her mind so that she becomes a young woman of culture and refinement. Then there is the young mountaineer whose love is honest and sincere and who downs the champion bully and strong man of the mountains in a marvelous contest of strength and endurance. Then there is the uncanny youth who wanders like a will-o'-the-wisp across the mountains and is the means of finally bringing happiness to the shepherd and restoring the good name of the mountaineer's family.

There is much "atmosphere" of the hills pervading the play. And in making the production, Messrs. Gaskill and MacVitty, the producers, it is said, have supplied some beautiful and realistic stage pictures.

MOTHER! THE CHILD IS COSTIVE, BILIOUS

Don't hesitate! A laxative is necessary if tongue is coated, breath bad or stomach sour

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that it's little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Mason in the Pulpit

How a man passed as a curate and preached from the pulpit was described at Cardiganshire, when William Emlyn Jenks, aged about thirty, from Carmarthenshire, a mason, was charged with having obtained lodging from Thomas Thomas, and with stealing various articles of clothing from John Davies. In each case he represented himself to be a curate at Ammanford, and gave the name of Harries. On a Sunday afternoon he conducted the service at Dihewyd Church. The sermon was based on the text, "The wages of sin." He was committed for trial.

Russian Proverbs

Choose a woman with your ears, not your eyes.

Heaven sends us walnuts, but does not crack them.

The man capable of making a fortune in a year deserves to be hung twelve months earlier.

You should not [illegible] if you are afraid of [illegible].

Charge of [illegible]

Four solicitors at Ammanford were stated to have been duped by George Sullivan, otherwise Murphy Finnegan, a hawker on tramp, who was committed for trial on charges of obtaining money by false pretences. It was alleged that he represented that he had been knocked down by a motor car, and asked each of the solicitors to act for him in a compensation claim, and they all gave him money when he told them he was penniless.

HIS WINNING BATTLE

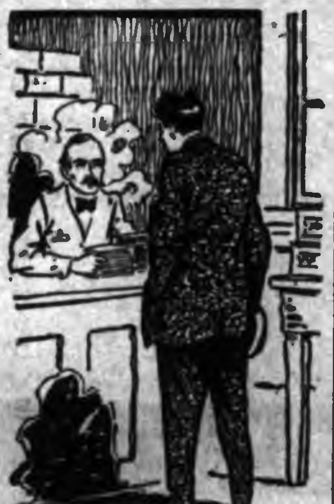
Being a Story of the Struggles of a "Down and Out."

By HAROLD CARTER.

Bonner sat at the long table in the room of the Griffin Mailing company, addressing envelopes. On each side of him and across sat others of his caste, their fingers dexterously cooperating with that subconscious portion of their brain which habit had trained to its task. The movements were systematized and all to the end that a few more envelopes might be addressed during the ten hours allotted daily. The eye read the address unconsciously, the right hand wrote it, the left hand shifted the written envelope to the pile of those finished, and the same hand movement, on its return, brought down a clean, unaddressed envelope for the pen. Bonner could write twelve hundred a day, which netted him a whole dollar—and that meant a fair living at the hotel.

Just now grumbles were running round the table, for a series of four-line addresses instead of three had come into being, and that would mean less money for the day's work. But Bonner was not grumbling. Instead, while he wrote unconsciously, he was watching the girl with the fair hair who, at another table, was busily sealing the envelopes with sponge and water-well. He had noticed her during the entire four days that he had worked for that particular company. The girls on each side of her chewed gum, patted their hair and indulged in badinage, reminiscences, when not checked by the curt commands of their boss, and snickers. But none of them cast so much as a look at the wretched men at the other table. These were below contempt; they were professional addressers—less than men. Not one of them could earn a living wage for a wife.

But the girl with the fair hair seemed of a different mold. She was quiet and refined; she worked—how hard she worked! Bonner had walked home with her the evening before.



"I'm Sick," Said Bonner, Humbly.

She lived alone in a mean room in a meaner tenement, for which she paid a dollar a week to a hard-faced landlady, and she coughed incessantly. She was working to get the money to go west, where the clean air would cure her. She had seventy dollars saved by two years of toil, and she needed a hundred. Would she gain it before it was too late?

Bonner had forty-nine dollars. His room cost him a dollar and forty cents weekly, and he lived on food snatched at cheap lunch counters. Once he had been a civil engineer; then he gave way to the drink passion, a hereditary disease. He had addressed envelopes for two years; he found the labor one which permitted his thoughts to roam unchallenged and he had become the automaton that all addressers grow to be. He saved his money because he knew that soon the dreadful craving would clutch him by the throat again.

He had felt the premonitory symptoms that day. He knew that he could as well escape the sequence as a lamb can escape from a coyote. He put his pile together and took it up to the desk.

"Well?" said the boss curtly.

"I'm sick," said Bonner humbly. "I've got to go home. Can I have my money?"

"Nope. Get out!" said the man at the desk.

Bonner was a larger man, but the servility of his trade was stronger than his manhood. He turned away, fingering his hat. The man called after him:

"Hi! Come around Saturday and you'll get what's coming to you. How much have you done?"

"Four hundred and nine," said Bonner meekly. That meant forty cents at a dollar a thousand, but the Griffin company paid only seventy-five cents. There were wretches who would work for that. As Bonner went out he saw the girl's eyes fixed pityingly on his own.

Three hours later Bonner stood on the same block, fighting madly against his overwhelming passion. He had never fought so hard, but he knew that he could resist no longer. He pulled out his money and counted it. Something came out of his pocket with the bills. It was an address list which he had taken with him from the mailing room. His eye wandered down it. Suddenly he started; into his half-numbed brain memory came stealing: the name was that of Mrs. Charles Sayles, residing in a fashionable quarter of the town.

She had been his first sweetheart seven years before. They had been engaged; everything seemed rosy when the fatal obsession gripped him. He had fought a desperate, losing fight. He had gone to her and confessed. Edith Harrington was a good woman, but she could not marry a dipsomaniac. She released him and later married Charlie Sayles, his school chum, now one of the rising men in their profession.

He flung the paper from him with a curse and turned back toward the saloon. Then he found his way barred and looked up into the face of the fair-haired girl. She had stopped impulsively and now stood before him, her hands outstretched.

"What is the matter?" she asked. "You are ill?"

An agony of remorse swept over him. He turned away into the empty yard of a factory and she followed him.

"Listen!" he said fiercely. "I am not ill—only fighting with my personal devil—the drink devil. You don't know what a devil that is. It gets you by the throat and gnaws at you and fills your brain with evil and your mind with misery—until you have yielded. Take all my money." He thrust the bills into her hand. "Take it and go away and be cured. The money will save your life and I shall always remember that."

"O!" she cried impulsively, "we are both fighting losing battles. You, too! I know! I know you were suffering when I saw you in that room."

"Losing" battles. What if he should fight again, fight to win, as he might have fought if Edith had stood by him! A sudden resolution came into his soul and nerved his will to steel. He took her by the hands.

"Would you stand by me to the end, girl, if I fought to win?" he asked, and she nodded bravely.

"Then," he said triumphantly, "let us fight our battles together. Not here, but in the west, where one has a chance to live, or one can die under the broad sky—as men and women should die or live. Will you?"

Suddenly the dirty factory yard had become an ante-chamber of heaven.

DREAMS TRACED TO MEMORY

Scientific Explanation for What Is Referred to as Phenomena Now Accepted.

Almost all scientific observers agree that the materials of which dreams are made are memories of past experiences of the individual. Curiously enough, the memories that occur most frequently are those of the previous day and those of early childhood. The former class are to be found in every dream, and are probably an essential condition to its formation; the latter (recollections of childhood) seem to be of even greater importance, since they contribute much to the hidden meaning of the dream.

In many cases where the incidents of a dream seem to be entirely unfamiliar it has been shown by careful investigation that they correspond to actually experienced events that have escaped the memory of the waking self. Delboeuf records an interesting example of this. In 1862 he dreamed that he found two lizards in the snow. He took them up, warmed them, and placed them in a hole in a wall, together with a small fern, which he knew they liked to eat. The name of the fern seemed in his dreams to be Asplenium ruta muralis. Later on in his dream he saw two other lizards come and eat the remains of the fern, and then a whole host of lizards coming to the wall in a long procession which covered the entire street. On waking he could not remember ever to have heard the name of the fern in his dream, although he discovered that a fern called Asplenium ruta muraria really existed. Sixteen years later, however, he happened to be turning over the pages of a friend's album of dried flowers, and to his surprise came across the very fern, with the Latin name written underneath in his own handwriting. He then remembered that in 1860, two years before the dream, he had met the sister of this friend, and to please her had written the Latin names under the various plants in her album at the dictation of a botanist.

Fifteen years after the dream he also discovered the source of the lizard procession in an old illustrated paper, dated 1861, which as a regular subscriber he must have seen. Innumerable cases of a similar nature are on record, and go to show how remarkably heightened the memory may be in dreams. They also warn us not too readily to believe that incidents in a dream which seem entirely new are really so.

Showing Earth's Formation.

Boring for oil affords an opportunity to gather a rather intimate knowledge of the interior of the earth, as just developed in Pennsylvania, where a bore has reached a depth of 4,000 feet, and will be driven fully 500 feet farther. At 4,140 feet a fine grade of lubricating oil was found, in 30 feet of sand. The oil was good, but not in great quantities. It is of a grade worth about $4 a barrel. From 4,400 to 4,600 the men drilled through hard salt, and just below that they found more oil, but in small quantities. Now they are again in the limestone.

HAIR OF YAK TAILS

Brings Ten Dollars an Ounce as Commercial Commodity

Among the many animal products imported for a wide variety of purposes from foreign lands is white hair. It is of various sorts and has a wide range in value. White hair of the Syrian goat, known as Asiatic white hair, comes from Syria, Persia and Tibet. The body hair of the Syrian buck grows to sixteen inches in length, the beard to twelve inches; but in a lot of 15,000 or 20,000 pounds there might be found less than 25 pounds of 16-inch hair. All the lengths are utilized.

The long white hair of the Syrian goat is as fine as human hair, in place of which it is used for some special purposes, principally for the making of theatrical wigs and beards. To prepare it for these uses it is put through various washing processes and is combed to free it of all foreign substances and to straighten and smooth it. In this first finished state it is put up for market in little straight rolls or bundles. It is also sold in partly manufactured form, made up into curls and weaves of various shapes and sizes.

LONDON, ONT.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Breakwater at Kincardine, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Wednesday, October 29, 1913, for the construction of a Breakwater at Kincardine, Bruce County, Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of R. J. Lamb, Esq., District Engineer, Windsor, Ont.; J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster at Kincardine, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS.
Secretary.
Department of Public Works.
Ottawa, September 30, 1913

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—46653.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the 31st of December next for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated on the Metagami River in the District of Temiskaming.

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of 40c. per cord for Spruce, and 20c. per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario,—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

HER GREAT MISTAKE

Believed for Years That a Loyal and Loving Husband Was Untrue.

BY SELINA ELIZABETH HIGGINS.

"I can't take them, Mrs. Smith—please do not ask me. I know you are just the finest cook in the world, and I know your good, kind heart, too, but they so remind—remind me—" and the speaker burst into tears, and bowed her head upon the plain but snowy clean kitchen table, as if her heart would break.

Her neighbor reluctantly took up the round, pyramidal package she had just brought over. Where its pinned newspaper cover was half open, the white, tempting crust of a pumpkin pie showed, crowned with a dozen or more rich, brown, flaky doughnuts.

"Don't misunderstand me, Mrs. Smith," said Sarah Ritchie, drying her tears. "If you only knew—"

"I know all about it, dear," answered the kind Samaritan, tenderly. "Don't speak of it again. I do wish, though, that you could come over this evening. We are going to have a little company. It is just the season for cheering up, you know."

"I have some very important business tonight," said Sarah. "It is about the property, and I have to see Lawyer Jones."

"Well, dear, don't fret too much," urged Mrs. Smith in a sisterly way. "I know your cross is a hard one, but you must always count on us as true, willing friends."

Sarah Ritchie, left to herself, sat looking mournfully out of the window at the snowy landscape. "Pumpkin pies and doughnuts" were prosaic themes. All the same, they opened afresh old-time wounds. There had been a time when Sarah, queen of a home, had been famous for thriftiness and excellency in her domestic life. Then there had come a jarring break, and the golden cord of mutual love had snapped in twain.

Briefly told, this was the tragedy of her life: She had married Alfred Ritchie, the bookkeeper in the small hardware business her father conducted. There was a happy year. Then, one day, her husband disappeared. It was known that he went away with the young lady clerk to a distant city. A deficit of five hundred dollars was found. Sarah's father was ill at the time. He died without knowing that his business was on the [illegible]. All that was left was the home in which Sarah now lived, and that mortgaged.

Before the funeral an express packet came containing five hundred dollars, no name, no explanation. The following week Alfred Ritchie reappeared in the village. Sarah refused to see him. He wrote her a letter, begging for an interview. Sarah wrote back to him, forbidding him to ever cross her path again.

What could she think but the worst? She learned later that Alfred had taken charge of a grazing farm one hundred miles distant; like herself, leading a lonely loveless life.

Sarah tidied up the place, as was her wont, and the little place was hospitable and neat looking when Lawyer Jones arrived.

She had not seen him since her husband had so strangely gone away.

"I sent for you, Mr. Jones," she said, "because the mortgage on the house here is due. I cannot possibly pay it, but I can keep up the interest if you will renew the loan."

"I have a surprise for you," replied the lawyer. "I hardly know how you will take it, but—the mortgage has been paid in full."

"By whom?" exclaimed Sarah, in startled wonder.

"By your husband, Alfred Ritchie."

"He is not my—" flashed out Sarah, and then, controlled the rising tide of resentment. "You tell me this!" she added, her lips compressed. "Under no circumstances will I receive help, pity or interest from the man who has wrecked my life's happiness."

There was a spell of silence. Sarah sat with heaving bosom, a suspicion of angry tears in her eyes. The attorney seemed thinking how he had best say what he had to disclose.

"Will you listen to a story I am at last authorized to tell?" he asked.

Sarah nodded, but with her emotion choked, her face not at all responsive.

"The girl who left the town the day that your husband did, as you know, was a distant relative of your father. Your husband had learned that she had married a wretch who not only would not support her, but influenced her to steal money from her employer, and send it to him. Briefly Alfred went with her to hunt up the wretch. He compelled him to care for his wife. He borrowed five hundred dollars from a relative to replace the stolen money. He could not publicly explain all this without getting the girl in trouble, and you refused to listen to his explanations. The girl died a month ago, and now he has just written me he is free to have the truth known. By patient labor, always loving you, he saved up the money to pay off the mortgage on your home."

"Oh, how cruel, how wicked I have been!" cried the overwhelmed wife. "How shall I make amends? Oh, tell me, I implore of you!"

And Robert Jones, good lawyer and true friend, told her, and almost at daybreak next morning Sarah was on her way to the herding farm where her husband had been leading his hermitlike life.

Sarah found the bleak place with its cottage in charge of a boy. He told her that Mr. Ritchie had gone away for a few days on important business. At once, with a joy that thrilled her tired heart to mighty devotion and love, she started in "to make things comfortable."

"I will stay here, oh, I must stay—if Alfred will only let me!" she told herself, as she scrubbed and cleaned and dusted. Then she set to thinking of the favorite dishes her husband used to like. She smiled as she recalled his ardent praises for her pumpkin pies and doughnuts.

Trailing through the snow, Alfred Ritchie approached his lonely home two nights later. He noticed that there was a light in the window. Then a sniff of unusual cooking crossed his nostrils. He pushed open the door.

Some one screamed—the startled Sarah—but not until the astonished husband had seen a kitchen table loaded with pumpkin pies and doughnuts, a famous steak frying on the comfortable looking stove, and the burnished tea kettle singing a merry song of welcome and comfort.

"Sarah," he cried, and his big, loyal heart spoke its earnest delight as he sheltered her in his strong, sheltering arms.

"Oh, Alfred, it is like heaven, all this!" sobbed the penitent Sarah a little later, as they sat in the soft, soothing glow of the burning logs in the great fireplace. "I wish never to leave this. A glad, true wife, I will only ask to care for you, and please you, and love you."

"And pumpkin pies and doughnuts all the year round," rallied Alfred gayly.

"Yes, all the time, dear, if you wish it," replied Sarah, humbly and gratefully.

"Only in a little better home," said Alfred. "I have been away on account of a legacy left me, by a relative. It means less toil and finer surroundings. We won't be too grand, though. There must always be your famous pumpkin pies and doughnuts on the bill of fare!"

AMAZING MONK

Fanatic Followers' Plight in the Snows of Russia

An Archangel correspondent sends a moving description of the wanderings of Moldavian peasants, who in midwinter followed the fanatical monk Innocentius more than 1,000 miles from the Podolia Government to the Muromsky Monastery, on the Omega River, where he was banished. Ragged, starving and frost-bitten, death threatened them all on the snowy wastes, when the Archangel authorities sent a force of rural guards to stop their march and arrest their leader, and telegraphed to the Red Cross Society urgently asking for medical aid. Some of the pilgrims had money in comparative plenty, for before starting northwards they had sold their belongings, but it was of no avail in the frozen wilderness. Their number was well over 1,000, including a great proportion of women and children. They were sent back to their homes by train in warmed vans. The correspondent witnessed the departure of one party from the station of Nenoksa. Frostbitten cheeks, ears, fingers, and toes were the rule rather than the exception. Nearly all the pilgrims were begrimed with dirt. Many women and children were in hysterics. The occupants of one van were squatted on the floor, praying with open Bibles before them. The correspondent questioned the pilgrims as to the hold which Innocentius had over them. Incredible as it may sound in the twentieth century, the following is the gist of the replies he received: The followers of Innocentius thought that Jesus Christ had appeared in the Omega region, and not in Palestine. He was seized there, but was taken elsewhere for crucifixion. "Alpha" and "Omega" in the "Revelation" of St. John designated Our Lord and Innocentius. They had been shown a picture of Innocentius portrayed as Jesus Christ with a nimbus encircling his head and a cross and chalice in his hands. The arrest of Innocentius only served to confirm their belief in his divinity, and they recounted how when the rural guards came to arrest him and one of the guards tried to fire a blank cartridge in order to intimidate him, his [illegible] had [illegible] them. A similar miracle had occurred previously at Balta, in Podolia, when a police officer insulted Innocentius and [illegible] him threateningly. Innocentius looked straight into his eyes and said solemnly: "Neither thy hand nor thy feet shall stir," and the policeman dropped down as though paralysed. On being confronted by the rural guards the pilgrims gathered around Innocentius and had to be dragged away before the monk could be arrested. The Vice-Governor of Archangel approached Innocentius. "Where are you going?" he asked him. "I am going to seek the new Zion," was the answer, and the crowd of pilgrims repeated in song, "We are going to seek the new Zion." When Innocentius was at Balta he attracted thousands of pilgrims to the local monastery by the power with which he was credited of casting out devils.

BY THEIR TEETH

New Method of Identification Better Than Bertillon

At the present time the police departments of Europe and America are seriously considering a system of criminal identification by the teeth, advocated by Dr. Richard Grady. Each cadet, on entering the academy, is examined by Dr. Grady to ascertain the condition of his teeth. Every irregularity is charted, and the peculiarities of each tooth duly noted. The chart is then carefully preserved, and should one of the cadets at any time be killed or mangled so that ordinary body marks might become unrecognizable, identification by means of Dr. Grady's card index is always possible, providing only that most of the teeth remain.

It is contended by Dr. Grady that if such a system were applied to criminals it would prove even more reliable and successful than any other system of identification. It is pointed out that thumbs and fingers may be covered or their lines altered by means of acids; scars can be imitated; birthmarks may be removed, or so changed as to become unrecognizable, but the man who had a noticeable peculiarity of the teeth—noticeable, that is, to the careful dentist who makes a cast of the individual's mouth, upper and lower jaws, and makes a careful chart therefrom—cannot change the record unless he has every tooth removed, which is a thing few criminals would have the forethought or fortitude to do.

Youth at the Treasury

Many Chancellors of the Exchequer besides Mr. Lloyd George have occupied that office before reaching fifty. Addington and Pitt were both under fifty. Robinson was only forty-five at the end of his term, while Goulburn was forty-six. Peel relinquished this office at forty-seven, and Baring at forty-five. When Disraeli had his first short experience in 1852 he was forty-eight, and Mr. Gladstone was only forty-three at the time of his first Budget. Ward Hunt went out at the same age, the present Lord St. Aldwyn completed his first term at forty-two. On the whole, youth has reigned at the Treasury, though Canning, Lowe, Stafford Northcote, Sir William Harcourt, Childers, and Ritchie had all passed fifty when they went there.

Hoards up Public Letters.

Arthur Wheeler, a postman, who had a singular mania for hoarding up letters belonging to the public without apparently tampering with a single one, was charged with stealing 376 letters, postcards, and packets at Farnborough. Packets of letters were found in his kitchen, bedroom, and coal cellar, and in his clothing. Some of them bore dates three years old. An official of the General Post Office said a similar occurrence happened at Christmas, 1907, when he returned 250 letters to the authorities. He was bound over for one year.

His Health and Mine

My rich and childless neighbor's yacht,
they say,
Looks like a ship of some trans-ocean line,
A tall girl travels schoolward every day—
The girl is mine!

My neighbor owns a limousine that goes
Two score or more of miles per hour—that's fine!
Here comes a brown-eyed child with freckled nose—
The child is mine!

This side the rose-hedge at my neighbor's bound
There stands a wicker cart of common line,
In which a baby sleeps all snug and sound—
The babe is mine!

GIFTS TO ENRICH CANADA'S MUSEUM

Lock of Queen Victoria's Hair And Other Articles Reminiscent of Royal Personages

Canada's historical collection under the direction of Dr. A. G. Doughty, Dominion archivist, is to be greatly enriched by a gift from Mrs. E. M. Mastin, of Stratford-on-Avon, whose father-in-law, Stephen Mastin, was for 60 years a page in the Royal household of the Duchess of Kent and of the late Queen Victoria.

Mrs. Mastin proposes to bestow, for the benefit of Canadian museums, her collection of rare objects given to her father-in-law by Queen Victoria and other members of the Royal household.

The collection includes: A life of the Prince Consort, in five volumes, with an inscription in the handwriting of Queen Victoria; an album with photographs of the Queen and family, including the late Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and the present Queen as a child; an album with the last photograph of Victoria and another inscribed by herself; a lock of hair of Queen Victoria at the age of ten; an Indian shawl given by Queen Victoria to Mrs. Mastin's mother-in-law; royal playbills of a performance given at Windsor under the direction of the writer's father; a photo of the Prince Consort in Highland dress and another in private dress; a photo of Queen Victoria's half sister, the Duchess of Kent, Princess Alice and the Duchess of Albany; a blue Worcester dessert service of eleven pieces, given by the Duchess of Kent; three pieces of gold and royal blue china, the gift of the Duke of Albany; a china cake dish, the gift of the Duke of Edinburgh; a ring once the property of the Duchess of Kent, and one of her serviettes, marked; a foot stool worked in galoon and chenille, the last piece of work of the Duchess of Kent, a gift from Queen Victoria; a pair of blue and gold sleeve links, the gift of the Queen of Prussia (the German Empress Augusta) on the completion of Mastin's 50 years of service with Queen Victoria; a silk box used for sending wedding cake on the occasion of royal marriages, a silver medal of the Princess Christian and her husband; and two portraits of King Edward and his consort, taken soon after marriage, and framed in uncolored English oak.

Women's Ailments Caused by Neglect

Proper Treatment Will Quickly Bring Back Robust Health and Good Spirits.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of women's ailments. The blood becomes weakened and polluted—the nerves suffer and a run-down condition takes root.

Because of their mildness of action as a system regulator, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The kidneys quickly respond to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and the result is as you would expect—pain in the back and side, shortness of breath, and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate naturally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns.

Thousands of happy women say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, and finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers 25c per box, five for $1.00 postpaid The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Real Irish Shillelah.

Mr. T. O. Rush is the proud possessor of a real Irish blackthorn, which was presented to him by Hon. J. R. Stratton on his return from his trip abroad. The stick is entwined with a vine, and would come handy in a Donnybrook fair melee, being heavy and strong. It would not be healthy for anyone to tread on the tail of Mr. Rush's coat just now.

An Entertainment.

The anniversary services of the Gilmour Memorial Church were continued last night and took the form of a fowl supper, to which a goodly number sat down, and, needless to say, greatly enjoyed. An entertainment followed, and many renditions of vocal and other items were greatly appreciated by all present. A number of addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Webb and Rev. Mr. Conners and others.

Elected Grand Knight.

Unusual honour has befallen Mr. J. Harry Quinlan of the Prince Albert, Sask., branch of the Bank of Ottawa, formerly of this city. He has been elected Grand Knight of the Prince Albert Council of the Knights of Columbus, and is to be heartily congratulated, as few men of years so young as he, attain such a position. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs M. H. Quinlan, Charlotte street.

Low Water Elsewhere.

Peterborough power users have been complaining about the low water in the Otonabee river during the past season. They are not, however, as badly off in this regard as some of our neighbours. In Marmora, for instance, owing to the extremely low water in Crowe Lake it has been found necessary to cut off nearly all the street lights so that there will be enough power to light the business places and residences. The flour mill is unable to make flour, and the Pearce Co. are only able to run their mill.

To Protect Children.

By an amendment to the Children's Protection Act, parents may be fined if their children are found in public places after nine o'clock at night, and not accompanied by guardian or adult. The amendment provides that if a child is found in a public place unaccompanied, a constable or probation officer may warn it to go home or take it to the Children's Shelter. The penalty, the amendment provides for parents or guardians, is a fine of $1 for the first offence, and $5 for subsequent offences.

Railway Fares Higher.

The railway companies evidently have agreed upon less liberal holiday rates hereafter. Return tickets at one fare and a third are advertised for Thanksgiving time, the single fare rate being allowed on Thanksgiving day only. The change is accounted for by the enormous increase in holiday travel, and the difficulty of handling it. One result of the present restriction will no doubt be an increased agitation for a compulsory two-cents-a-mile rate all the year round.

Will Remain in Ennismore.

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, parish priest at Ennismore, will not after all go to Calgary. When Bishop McNally of that city, was here at the consecration of Dr. O'Brien, it was known that Bishop O'Brien, offered one of his priests to help carry on the work of the Catholic Church in the west. The matter was put to Father Fitzpatrick, as entirely optional, and he has decided that he will remain in his old parish.

Young Lady Missing.

The substance of a telegram from Syracuse to friends in Peterborough, is that the daughter of Mrs. H. A. Jobe, 500 Park street, may have been enticed away by white slavers, as she has been missing from her home in Syracuse for one or two days. Efforts by the police are being made to locate her, but so far without success. The young lady is well known in Peterborough.

A SWEATER COAT FOR THE BOYS IN THE WELL-KNOWN "PENMAN" MAKE 59c

Being a Purchase of Factory Overmakes, Valued at $1.00 and $1.25

THE PROBABILITY IS THAT AS SOON AS THE WEATHER BECOMES COLDER, or when he wants to go skating or tobogganing the boy will feel the need of a warm, close-fitting garment like these Sweater Coats. And this "Penman" line is one of the best purchases our Annex buyer has made in a long time, because the coats are all $1.00 and $1.25 lines, the heavy wool yarn of which they are made being most comforting in chilly weather, to say nothing of the durability of such a good class of knitted coat. About half of them are made with high button collar, the remainder being—some with reversible turn down collar and others with the V-shaped neck, so well adapted for wear beneath the boy's ordinary coat. There is an excellent selection of colorings, popular choice generally resting upon garnet and grey; grey with fawn or navy; and castor with brown. Your attention is directed to the Window Display on Monday evening and Tuesday, which will reveal at a glance the extraordinary purchasing power of 59c in the buying of these Boys' Sweater Coats.

Health and Beauty Hints

By Mrs. Mae Martyn

Grace: Certainly the brittleness of hair and your dandruff are dangerous conditions and should be corrected quickly by a proper shampoo. Get some canthrox from your druggist and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, then pour well. This makes an abundance of rich, cleansing lather, and rinsing leaves the scalp and hair wonderfully sweet and clean. These shampoos are very soothing to tender, itchy scalps and so invigorate the hair roots that a growth of glossy, fluffy, even-colored hair results. Canthrox shampoos are invaluable to the finest growth of hair and prevent as well as overcome all scalp and hair difficulties.

Mrs. X.: With a paste made by mixing some powdered delatone with water, you can soon rid the skin of every trace of hair. This paste should be left on the skin for two or three minutes, then removed, after which wash off the remaining delatone and you will have a clear, spotless, hairless skin.

[illegible]: I always use a crystos tonic for my eyes when they are weak, watery and inflamed. I buy an ounce of crystos from my druggist and put it in one pint clear water, then place two or three drops in each eye a few times a day until they are strong again. This eye tonic is also very good for granulated lids and will give a sparkle and delightful expression to dull, expressionless eyes.

Jessie: I made a splendid hair and scalp tonic at small expense by putting one ounce quinzoin into one-half pint water. Until I cured my head of dandruff I used to rub a little of this on the scalp frequently and it soon banished both dandruff and excess oiliness. This quinzoin tonic stopped the itching, burning sensation and made my scalp clean, healthy, fluffy and took on a beautiful lustre and rich, even color.

[illegible]: Your friend's suggestion to take the kardene blood cleaner and system tonic is excellent advice and you will find a course of this treatment will banish the run-down feeling as well as the pimply condition of the skin. This old-time household remedy can be prepared at little cost by dissolving one ounce kardene in one-half pint alcohol (not whiskey), then adding one-half cupful sugar and enough hot water to make a full quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before each meal. The kardene is especially fine to clear the skin of pimples, blotches and sallowness, as well as to tone your system to the full health and strength.

Teacher: In your case the wrinkles and lines in your skin are probably caused by its extreme dryness. To remove them use this preparation which you can make for yourself, which will act rapidly and restore the softness and natural tone to the skin. Get an ounce of almozoin at the drug store and dissolve it in one-half pint cold water, adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this before retiring and leave over night. This will remove wrinkles, prevent crow's feet and make your face soft and velvety. Since it has removed my crow's feet I use to it to clear and whiten my skin.

Chubby: I reduced to normal by use of the parnotis treatment which was recommended to me several years ago by my family doctor, and when I found that it greatly reduced my weight and restored my youthful figure without the slightest inconvenience or ill effect, I began recommending it to my friends and readers. To prepare this treatment dissolve four ounces parnotis in one and one-half pints hot water, then take a tablespoonful before meals. You will find that when your weight is where you want it the flesh will be firm and the skin free from wrinkles.

Girlie: I have rejuvenated my complexion and again have the velvety rose-tint skin of my girlhood. I stopped using powder and now use this simple, inexpensive lotion: In one-half pint witch hazel or hot water dissolve four ounces spurmax, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This lotion dries quickly after being applied and is invisible and it will impart to the skin that youthful purity and clearness that it is impossible to obtain any other way. It is excellent for chaps, cold sores and to protect against fall winds and dispels the oily, sallow, [illegible] condition in a very short time.

Monday next will be observed as Thanksgiving Day.

Cheer up, the best is yet to come. We haven't had Indian summer yet.

At the Police Court yesterday David Henry, charged with vagrancy was remanded for a week.

The recent showers have subdued the bush fires in the northern portion of the county, which are still smouldering in many places. A high wind would rekindle them again.

Bears are very bold this year, and are invading the barnyards of some of the settlers in the back townships, no doubt being driven out of the forest by bush fires.

Next Sunday will be observed as Children's Day by the whole of the Anglican Church throughout Canada. Arrangements are being made to observe it in the local churches.

The Kirkfield lift lock was shut down for the season yesterday. Its contemporary in Peterborough will be in operation until the water freezes over.

The 25th annual convention of the Baptists of Ontario and Quebec, will commence in this city to-morrow evening, at 8 o'clock. It is expected that 350 delegates from all parts of the two provinces will be present. The city will welcome the delegates.

WEDDING BELLS

Carr—Brightman.

The marriage was quietly solemnized on Saturday last of Miss Mildred A. Brightman, daughter of Mr. Thos. Brightman, to Mr. Edward T. Carr, of this city.

The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. James Rollins of St. Andrew's church. The couple were unattended. After a wedding trip to the United States Mr. and Mrs. Carr will reside in the city.

Killen—Scollard.

O'Connor—Scollard.

For the second time this season, a double wedding has been solemnized at Ennismore. On October 7th last, the two youngest daughters of Mr. James Scollard, Miss Ettie and Miss Fanny, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. James Killen, and Mr. Patrick O'Connor, respectively. Both contracting parties are residents of the township. Miss Angela Scollard played the Lohengrin wedding march, to the strains of which the brides entered the church on the arm of their father who gave them away. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick.

The young ladies and their husbands are held in high esteem by all who are acquainted with them, and among heaps of good wishes will take up their residence in the city.

Peterborough Man Starts Again.

Word was received here yesterday that Mr. Richard Nicholls, formerly of this city, but who has conducted for the past year a drug store in Stratford and who was burnt out a week ago, will rebuild the premises and start business again. It will be remembered that Mr. Nicholls formerly operated the Princess Theatre in this city. A week ago a fire arising from a pile of paper in the rear of his shop, completely gutted the store with a loss of about $4,000. There was no insurance, but Peterborough people seem, Phoenix like, to rise in the face of adversity.

FOUR HUNDRED LIVES LOST IN AN AWFUL MINE DISASTER HEARTRENDING SCENE AT MINE

About 500 Were Brought to the Surface Alive by Rescue Parties Up to Noon--Police Keep Crowd Back

Cardiff, Wales, Oct. 14.—More than 400 Welsh coal miners perished, it is feared, by fire and afterdamp in the Universal Collery near here to-day. A terrific explosion shattered the works shortly after 930 men had descended the pit. It was at first stated that the day shift was composed of 740 men, but later the larger figure was given out by the officials. About five hundred were brought to the surface alive by rescue parties up to noon, and the managers of the mine then expressed the opinion that there was no further hope for the remaining four hundred below.

Death List 418.

At 5 p.m. it was conceded by the mine officials that 418 miners in the west galleries of the mine were probably doomed to death. The fire that followed the explosion had spread then to the in-take air shaft, cutting off the entombed survivors from fresh air.

At that hour all of the living miners had been taken from the east shaft of the Universal.

Police Kept Crowd Back.

The officials of the mine found it necessary to call a detachment of police to keep back the women and children who had crowded round with the vain hope of obtaining some news of their relatives, while the mine managers, with the tears streaming from their eyes, replied to all enquiries: "There is little hope."

Most of the rescued men presented a pitiable appearance. Some of them were not expected to live, and nearly all of them were suffering from burns and shock or the effects of the afterdamp.

A Terrific Explosion.

The day shift of 930 men descended the shafts in the cages at five o'clock. An hour afterwards a deafening report brought the inhabitants in the vicinity of the mine, running to the pithead, where they found the ventilating and hoisting machinery at the top of the shafts had been blown to atoms by an explosion of great violence, and a man who had been working twenty yards away had been decapitated by the force of the blast.

"Thirty five rescue parties of miners belonging to the night shift were soon on the scene making preparations to enter the mine in an endeavor to save their comrades. The fiery reputation of the mine, however, gave little hope that any of those below could be rescued alive.

Scores Huddled Together.

An entrance was found however, by way of an adjacent shaft and on descending in this manner the rescuing parties came across some scores of men huddled together in portions of the mine where the ventilation was still good.

Soon 327 living miners had been gathered together and taken up the shaft with the bodies of six of their companions, who had been killed by being dashed against the uprights supporting the galleries by the explosion.

NO ONE TO WEAR LAURIERS SHOES LIBERAL CHIEF IS FORCED TO STAY

Hon. Mr. Pugsley, it is Known, Desires the Honor, But May Lack Support

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 14.—As a result of the overwhelming defeat of the Liberals in Chateauguay, a conference of the Liberal leaders will be called to have a heart to heart talk over the political situation, to draft a new platform and to discuss the question of leadership. It is well-known that Sir Wilfrid is anxious to retire and it is expected that his resignation will be laid before this meeting. However, whether it will be accepted is doubtful. There are plenty of ambitious lieutenants anxious to succeed him and who are quite convinced they could fill his shoes, yet none of them are outstanding enough or strong enough to secure the leadership. The result will likely be that Sir Wilfrid despite his desire to retire will continue in the leadership.

Hon. William Pugsley is the most aggressive of those aspiring to the Liberal leadership. During the long fight of last session, Mr. Pugsley was the virtual leader and it is generally admitted that the obstruction to the Naval Bill would never have been pursued to the length it was if it had not been for the tactics of the ex-Minister of Public Works. He has also the added advantage of not having taken any part in the Chateauguay election.

LAND CAMPAIGN IS OBSCURED BY THE HOME RULE QUESTION

Question Agitating London is: Will Mr. Asquith Throw Over Mr. Churchill?

London, Oct. 14.—Canada, with its limitless lands seeking settlers, may well be puzzled at just what Mr. Lloyd George's speech at Bedford means. Even some Liberal papers have ventured to call it dull and uninteresting.

It was too technical, even for the British voter, but showed the Asquith Government's firm determination to attempt a better lot for the agricultural laborer, farmer and tenant of Britain.

To the Canadian it appears to be a desperate bid to prevent thousands leaving the Motherland for Canada Australia and South Africa. It seems an attempt to create a reflex of the wonderful migration which has taken the best British agricultural laborers overseas, and seems aimed almost directly at emigration.

Cannot Overshadow Home Rule.

The Chancellor was advertised before Saturday as launching a programme which would rejuvenate agricultural England and Scotland and even overshadow Home Rule, but to-day Ireland is still predominant. All newspapers featured Mr. Redmond's reply to Mr. Churchill, that no compromise that means the exclusion of Ulster, is possible.

Even second hand stories of Volturno disaster take precedence. This partly is explained by the Liberal Liverpool Post:

"For the present Mr. Lloyd George contents himself with suggestions which ar epurposely general. At the opening stage no Government, contemplating a vast social change to be brought about by its own legislation, can be expected to define the details."

Briefly the Chancellor declared that British landlords were the worst monopoly that ever existed in the Motherland; his main points were:

Britain's land system must be recast. He did not explain how.

Better houses and pay and prospects for farm laborers.

Tenant farmers must have better security and compensation for improvements.

The State must have greater facilities for compulsory purchase of lands and valuations based on shooting and hunting right to be ignored.

THE ASPHALTIC PLANT

Has Arrived and Will Probably Begin Work To-day.

The asphaltic plant by means of which the street paving will be completed, has arrived in the city, together with a special type of roller, and various apparatus connected with the work. The plant us stationed at the extreme northern end of Hicks' siding at the corner of McDonnel and Bethune streets, and from this point the asphaltic mixture will be carted. Work will probably start this morning. The method that will be employed, is to lay one inch of the asphaltic mixture first, and roll it; then, when it is sufficiently set the second coat will be applied and then citizens will be able to say: "Paved streets at last."

"PEN" SYSTEMS INVESTIGATED

$2500 a Year Surgeon Works About One Hour Each Day

Kingston, Oct. 14.—The prison stone pile supplied the basis for this morning's session of the investigation into the affairs of Portsmouth Penitentiary. Major Hughes, now inspector of penitentiaries, urged that this degrading form of labor be done away with as it is morally and mentally killing. Especially is it no place for youthful convicts.

The Major is now inspector of penitentiaries. From 1593 until March 1913, he was connected with Portsmouth Penitentiary here in several capacities.

"When a prisoner arrives what is the procedure?" Enquired H. A. Stewart, counsel for the commission.

"He is received in a s all room by the warden, who gives a receipt to the sheriff's officer. Then he is conducted to the chief keeper's department, where he is asked certain questions. A list is taken of every article the prisoner has on him, from his boots up. His cash and jewelry are transferred to the accountant for safe keeping. If his clothes are in too bad a condition to be kept they are destroyed, but never without the written consent of the prisoner. He is then taken in charge by two keepers, given a hair cut and bath and sometimes washed in creolum. He is then attired in prison garb."

The $2500 per annum surgeon looks over each newcomer. His work occupies about an hour a day.

Major Hughes argued in favor of putting the whole system under either the Federal or the Provincial Government.

BIG CONVENTION TO-DAY

Many Delegates Are Already in Town—Three Hundred More To-day.

The delegates to the Baptist Convention will arrive in the city to-day and will number between 300 and 350 from different parts of the Province of Ontario and Quebec.

The convention will hold sessions until Tuesday next. The address this evening by Mr. A. A. Ayres, the president, promises to be an interesting one. The public will be allowed to attend the different sessions.

NOMINATIONS IN E. MIDDLESEX QUIET

Conservative Speakers Elsewhere Ask Where Are Liberal Speakers These Days

London, Ont., Oct. 14.—Nominations in East Middlesex took place at Pottersburg at 12 o'clock to-day. The proceedings were very quiet, both candidates mutually agreeing that there should be no speaking.

Mr. Glass' nomination papers were signed by 36 representative men from the four townships. It was expected that Hon. Arthur Meighen would have been the speaker at the Byron meeting, but owing to the death of his law partner he was compelled to leave for the West.

Greater Water Conservation

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., accompanied by Superintending Engineer of the Trent Canal, paid a flying visit to the Mississagua waters a few days ago, and inspected the dams connected with them. Nearly all the lakes, streams and dams in Ontario are now in the custody and control of the Dominion Government, having been handed over to them by the Provincial Government. These splendid natural resources are capable of great usefulness in providing an ample supply of water for the canal. A number of new dams, however, will have to be built in order to bring them up to their full capacity of usefulness. Mr. Burnham, with his usual energy, will bring this important matter before the Department at Ottawa, with a view to having the necessary funds provided.

GIBSON GOES TO "PEN."

Toronto, Oct. 14.—"We didn't get any satisfaction. That wasn't the man".

T. H. Lennox, K. C. counsel for Charles Gibson who is to serve a life sentence for the murder of Rosenthal 19 months ago, admitted yesterday that they had no success when "Red" Wilson was taken to the jail on Saturday to be confronted with Gibson to see if he was the much-wanted witness in the case.

"We are not yet giving up hope that we may find him", continued Mr Lennox, but in the meantime Gibson will be taken to the Penitentiary. He goes to Kingston to morrow. I am going down for a final interview with him this afternoon".

CHEMICALS SET LINER ABLAZE

Kroonland Has Eighty-Nine Volturno Survivors on Board --Nears New York

On board the Kroonland, by wireless to Camperdown, N.S., Oct. 14.—Spontaneous combustion through the mingling of the chemicals which formed a part of the cargo of the Volturno, is the explanation given by the survivors from the burning vessel, who are now being conveyed to New York by the Kroonland, for the explosion which it is believed started the disastrous fire on the Uranium Liner which was responsiblefor the loss of so many lives last Thursday and Friday.

The Kroonland has on board 89 persons who escaped from the Volturno in mid-Atlantic, including Captain Inch and the wireless operator.

The boxes containing the chemicals the Volturno passengers believe, were smashed open by the rolling of the vessel and their contents exploded when mixed.

The Touraine's Story.

Paris, Oct. 14.—The Volturno disaster as viewed by those aboard the French Line steamer La Touraine, was reported doughly by wireless as La Touraine approached Havre today with 42 survivors reported on board.

A wireless message from the captain of the La Touraine said:

"We reached the Volturno at 10.30 o'clock at night. Wind and sea had fallen to some extent, but it was extremely dangerous to launch boats. We set out two light whaleboats and one larger boat. Both officers and men showed great zeal, but the sea was too heavy to manoeuvre the boats and the difficulties encountered were great.

"The Volturno was on fire forward and the passengers were grouped in the stern. Their cries of distress were maddening. We had to approach at the stern. The vessel was rolling and heaving very much, with her propeller out of the water. The rescue boats risked being crushed against the ship or invaded by passengers and overcrowded.

At 3.30 a.m. the sea was still very rough and we were obliged to take in our boats. (This apparently after the rescue of 42 passengers had been effected). At 6 a.m. the boats were put out again. The sea was dangerous, but it was then daylight. The other vessels, however, signalled that no one was left on board the Volturno."

Settlers from three of the middle western States are flocking to Alberta in great numbers this fall.

GARBAGE COLLECTORS AND INSPECTOR SPENCE AIR THEIR TROUBLES BEFORE PROP. COM.

Agreement Reached for Satisfactory Carrying Out of By-Law--Garbage Must be Out at Specified Time--Public Will be Served With Copies of Regulations

The city's Property Committee met last night. Chairman Alderman Duncan presiding. There were also present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Duffus, Wm. Langford, Jr., G. Walter Green and Sanitary Inspector Spence.

Sanitary Inspector Spence asked that the garbage collection contractors be only paid on his certificate. Several minor points of the by-law are not being observed by the collectors, and as he is held responsible by the city, Mr. Spence contended that he should have authority to withhold payment for collection unless same is done satisfactorily. The garbage is not being collected in proper receptacles with covers to them and get around sometimes too early to collect all the garbage. Then they do not replace the covers on the cans as specified in the by-law and complaints of incivility to citizens occasionally reaches him. Mr. Spence asserted that in some districts, the west end for instance, seven o'clock is a little too early for residents to have their garbage outside for collection this time of the year, and he had asked the collectors to get around somewhat later: this they had refused to do, which he thought was drawing the line a little too fine.

The contractors were present in their own defence. They admitted that they were not infallible and might miss a box once in a while, unintentionally. In the case of one complaint of their refusal to take a can of garbage, the same was mixed with paper, contrary to the by-law; many people are guilty of violating the regulations in this way, and some half fill their garbage cans with tin cans, and sometimes water, all of which entails a loss to the collectors. If the people will get their garbage out in the time specified the collectors promise good service. As to carrying the garbage through the streets in proper receptacles, they claim to have had the wagons made according to the Inspector's instructions with the best galvanized ron receptacles that can be made; they cannot keep the wagons covered while loading but do so when on the way to the dump. Too much water, however, is found in the garbage.

A conclusion was reached to make the best possible effort to have the system worked satisfactorily to the people, to the Inspector and to the contractors. The contractors offered to mail to Mr. Spence each morning the people they would like him to explain the regulations to, he to mail to them in turn each morning the complaints he has investigated. The public also will be served with copies of the regulations under which garbage and ashes are collected.

WILSON PARCELS FOUND NOT GUILTY ON CHARGE OF RAPE

Fall Assizes Open With Judge Middleton Presiding, A Light Docket in Numbers But Strong in Effect Presented

The Fall session of the High Court met yesterday afternoon with His Honor Judge Middleton presiding. Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, acted as prosecutor.

Among the visitors to the city, registered at the Oriental are Messrs. Dr. McKechnie, W. Hughes, R. Blomfield and T. H. Joyce, of Marmora, who it is understood are here in connection with the case to be tried of Northern Electric Co. vs. Cordova Mines.

Among other cases are that of Johnston vs. Armstrong, a seduction case for assessment of damages. It is said that the defendant in this case has disappeared. Mr. Kerr for the plaintiff.

Among the members of the bar present were Messrs. F. D. Kerr, D. O'Connell, G. N. Gordon, Mudd, R. E. Wood, and A. Grant, of the legal firm of Johnston, McKay, Dodds and Grant, of Toronto.

The Grand Jury which was empanelled comprises the following gentlemen: Messrs. W. Collins, (foreman)' J. Blewett, W. Coulthard, J. Carlisle, T. Hooper, A. G. Canaugthers, A. Cunningham, E. Desautel, E. Milburn, W. Oliver, J. Walker and W. Whitfield.

The first case tried was that of Hannah Ellis, who charged Wilson Parcels with rape.

The first witness was Hannah Ellis, complainant of Belmont. The part of the country where she resided was thinly populated. On June 26th she went to answer a message presumably sent by prisoner's mother, at 9 o'clock. She passed her brother and the prisoner's brother. Prisoner was on the side of a hill and asked her to wait for him. To Mr. Gordon, prisoner had been paying attention to her. She had kept company with him for four years. She had had improper relations with prisoner for years. She had only such relations with Parcels once since her child was born. On June 26th her brother said Parcels wanted her to go home with him. Her brother and the younger Parcels were digging post holes. Parcels made improper proposals and told her if he got her into trouble he would marry her. She tried to resist, but did not cry out. On July 3rd, she told her mother of the occurrence. Her mother said they would make Parcels pay damages. She saw Parcels once since the preliminary investigation. She did not smile at Parcels yesterday morning, but made a face at him.

Here some time was taken up by the opposing counsel, quoting authorities to determine the matter of evidence by prospective witnesses. Rosanna Ellis was to have been next witness, but was not then called.

Henry Ellis, a boy of possibly 18, a brother of Hannah, said on June 26th he was working on prisoner's farm. Prisoner went to the house with his sister.

To Mr. Gordon, his sister, that night, seemed to be in good spirits and cheerful.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

For the defence, Mary Parcels, mother of the prisoner remembered the 26th of June. Hannah Ellis came to her house. Hannah said she had to go home "as the baby would be cross." Wilson left with her, Hannah, towards the Ellis home. It was not her fault that Parcels and Hannah did not marry.

Wilson Parcels, the prisoner, who is a well set up young man of rather prepossessing appearance, went into the box. Hannah asked him to walk part way home with her. He declined, after walking part of the way as he had to catch a train. He denied the charge of rape, in toto, on Hannah Ellis on June 26th. He denied any improper connections with the girl that day. He admitted improper relations previously however.

In his address to the jury, Mr. Gordon explained fully the meaning of the charge as alleged.

Mr. Mikel for the prosecution, claimed as his main argument that the girl would not have come into court and told such a story unless it were true.

The Judge, to a casual hearer, seemed to charge strongly for the defence.

The jury after half an hour's absence brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

AN EARL'S DAUGHTER ON VIENNA STAGE

Takes Clever Dancing Turn in a Biblical Drama Entitled "Judith"

The one social topic of conversation in Vienna has been the appearance there on the stage as a dancer of Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, daughter of the Earl of Cromartie, and a niece of the Duke of Sutherland. Lady Constance appeared at the Volksoper, or People's Opera House, in the name-part of a drama entitled "Judith," which had been prepared for her from the Apocrypha. Tickets were eagerly snapped up, particularly in aristocratic circles. Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson was a constant and much-desired guest in the families of the Austrian nobility, which is known to be the most exclusive in the world. The drama of "Judith" is based on an incident supposed to have taken place during the Maccabean wars, after which Judith becomes a famous Jewish heroine. The music is extremely interesting, consisting of a number of old Assyrian and Hebrew melodies. There are five principals, a chorus of fifty voices and a ballet of twenty-four girls.

The performance, it is stated, was originally intended for London, but there were objections in high quarters, and to these Lady Constance is said to have given way.

To an interviewer who asked what induced her to take to dancing Lady Constance is reported to have said: "I am a Highland woman from Tarbet Castle, where, in my early childhood, I ran wild, and gave myself up to all sorts of sports.

"I am one of the best swimmers in England, and have three times carried off the Ladies' Silver Challenge Shield. I am also a first-rate salmon fisher, and am, above all things, a huntress.

"I have hunted in Africa," she continued, "with my husband, and on my own account, I have hunted and killed lions in Tibet. I went out after bears and steinboks.

"On my return to London I happened to see Isadora Duncan, the classical dancer, whose art has been admired everywhere. She made dancing all the 'go' among young Englishwomen. The craze took hold of me, too. I began to dance, danced in English aristocratic families with success, so I was seized with a desire to appear in public. But the very idea naturally shocked my relatives. I came to Vienna to dance, because Vienna is known to be an artistic city, of refined taste, and because here people's views are less straitlaced. All the aristocratic families know that I am going to dance, and yet my reception among them has been of the kindest nature."

"And why did you choose Biblical drama?"

"I am very fond of the Bible," Lady Constance replied, "and read it very much. The figure of Judith has always fascinated me as one of the most splendid female ones in the Apocrypha. I happened to pass the Great Portland street Synagogue, heard singing, and went in. The Hebrew melodies I had never heard before thrilled me. Then and there I was seized with the idea of dancing as Judith in a Biblical drama. I saw Searlisse, and got him to write for me the music to a Judith libretto."

Shaving Soap for a Boy

Is shaving soap a necessity for a boy? This was the problem propounded by the judge at Ashford County Court during the hearing of a claim by Henry Mummery, stationer, of Wye, respecting goods supplied to a student at South Eastern Agricultural College at Wye. Counsel replied: "The item of shaving soap occurs every fortnight." The Judge: "Young men are more particular nowadays. I know a friend who shaves three times a day." Counsel: "Perhaps the young ladies are more particular." The judge disallowed the claim, holding that the parents did not give authority to order the articles.

BEWITCHED BOXES

Thrown Overboard From Steamer But Jump Back on Deck.

The strange conduct of part of a steamer's cargo was described in the Commercial Court in respect of the loss at sea of a quantity of mineral waters. The steamer Hardy left Treport, having two tons of metallic sodium stored on the fore hatch upon deck. His lordship remarked that he recollected an experiment with sodium while he was at school. A small piece was placed in water, and, by catching fire and jumping about, it caused much amusement. It was stated on behalf of the plaintiffs that the sodium broke away from its lashings, and the water, getting to one of the cases, set it on fire. The captain of the Hardy was not aware of the nature of sodium, and played the hose upon the cases. The result was that the contents were also set on fire, and there was a series of explosions. Next the captain decided to heave the lot into the sea. This was done, but, to the surprise of himself and the crew, several of the cases jumped back on board. Then the hold caught fire, and the captain ultimately gave the order to take to the boats. The mate was drowned, several of the crew were injured, and the captain himself was badly burned. Very soon the ship broke her back and went down. It was the plaintiffs' case that the vessel was unseaworthy by reason of the sodium being carried on deck. For the defendants it was submitted that the vessel was lost by reason of the fire in the hold. It was denied that the ship was unseaworthy, and it was contended that the defendants were excluded from liability by reason of perils of the sea. His lordship gave judgment for the plaintiffs.

RECTOR AND HIS SERVANT

She Denied Saying He Had a Face Like a Hearse

There was some amusement at Newry Sessions on the hearing of a case brought by Charlotte Vance, domestic servant, against the Rev. H. M'Knight, Rector of Kilbroney, to recover $16, one month's wages. The defendant, it was alleged, reproved her for buying oil. She stated that after some words he told her to leave the house, or he would kick her out. He said she should be in gaol and she was a miserable-looking creature. She denied having said he had a face like a hearse or that it was like a funeral. The defendant said the girl was ill-tempered and quarrelled with his butcher. She called him names. He had no experience of suffragettes, but this lady looked very like one. His Honor dismissed the case.

AN INTERESTING RELIC

Part of Sir Isaac Newton's Apple Tree Preserved

Future visitors to London, who go to Burlington House to see the piece of Isaac Newton's apple tree which was presented to the Royal Astronomical Society recently need be troubled by no doubts as to its genuineness. Seldom, in fact, has a relic of such interest been so clearly authenticated as this bit of the apple tree that grew in Newtons' garden and the falling of the fruit from which suggested to him the idea of gravitation.

The tiny log, which now reposes in a glass case, is about two and a half inches in diameter and three inches in width. It does not look like the wood of an apple tree, but at Kew, where it was microscopically examined, its character was vindicated and it was proved unquestionably to be part of an apple tree. The story of the log is told in detail, moreover, by Charles William Walker, the member of the Royal Astronomical Society who presented it to that distinguished body.

"It is," he says, "a piece of the apple tree at Woolsthorpe, the home of Sir Isaac Newton. The history of this piece of wood and the way in which I came to have it is as follows:

"My father, Richard Walker, was born at Bradmere, Nottinghamshire, at the Manor farm there in 1907. He went to school when he was ten or twelve years of age to a clergyman at Stoke, Lincolnshire, named Pearson. My father told me that while he was at school there was a very wild wind storm one night, and that in the morning news came that Sir Isaac Newton's apple tree had been blown down at Woolsthorpe. The schoolmaster, Mr. Pearson, and several of the boys at once set off for Woolsthorpe, where Sir Isaac Newton's house was, and which is not far from Stoke, which is on the Lincolnshire side of Belvoir castle.

"When they arrived there they saw the old apple tree lying on the ground. It had been propped up all round for very many years, and every effort had been made to preserve it. My father said he did not know by what authority Mr. Pearson acted, but the schoolmaster obtained a saw from somewhere and sawed a good many logs of wood from the branches. My father got one of these pieces, which he always kept as being of great interest. Many times he was asked to part with it, but always refused. My father showed the piece of wood to me and told me all the circumstances under which he got it. There cannot be the least doubt that it came into his possession in the way I have described."

When Richard Walker died the little relic passed to the son, and it was long his desire to place the historic scrap of wood in a safe place.

FAMOUS DANCER DIES

She Married Unsuccessfully and Passed into Neglect

Claudia Cucchi, the once-famous dancer, from whose slipper the Czar drank a health, died in an almshouse at her native city of Milan. She took Milan, Paris, Vienna and St. Petersburg by storm. One of the Grand Dukes asked her to marry him. Cucchi married an Italian, Colonel Baron Zena, but the union was dissolved, and she then returned to Milan to rest on her laurels at her palazzio in the Via Capuliari, where her garden parties were famous among the nobility of the country. She married again, this time more unsuccessfully than on the first occasion. Her diamonds, worthy of a queen, gradually disappeared, the valuable presents received as mementoes from crowned heads and others were turned into cash, and at last the woman who had been very wealthy found herself compelled to start work again as a dancing mistress in a small way. Her coffin was followed to the grave by one solitary mourner.

Nun's Will Suit

It was stated during the hearing of a Probate suit at Liverpool that the plaintiff, Miss Katherine Perry, who for thirty-two years was a nun in the Convent of Notre Dame, Liverpool, was expelled for visiting her sister, the testatrix, who was on the point of death.

Overthrown by a Draught

A singular accident befel John Caldwell, fifty-seven, employed as a watchman on the Boyne Viaduct at Drogheda. The draught created by an express train knocked him off his feet with so much violence that he sustained a compound fracture of one arm.

Famous Relics Found

Two valuable Roman relics—the famous pacifidion talisman, fashioned out of a very thin plate of gold, and a golden fibula or brooch—which were discovered nearly a century ago, but have been missing for many years, are now in the possession of the town clerk of Carnarvon.

Remains 3,000 Years Old

The Vale of Conway Antiquarian Society engaged men recently to excavate a cone-like mound or hillock near the Old Turnpike, Llangerniew road, Wales. An urn was unearthed, which on being opened was found to contain the dust and bones of a human being, who, it is conjectured, existed some 3,000 years ago.

AN ARMY'S BATTLE AGAINST DISEASE.

The United States Army has won several notable victories over death. Its surgeons and volunteers cleared the Panama Canal Zone of yellow fever and made a healthy place of a pestilential swamp where de Lesseps' enterprise cost 20,000 lives, and it has done similar wonders in Cuba and the Phillippines.

The latest achievement is to abolish typhoid fever from the arm a fact that is backed by proofs. Twelve thousand men were sent to the headquarters of the Second Division at Texas City last February, and there has been no case of typhoid fever among them. For this the anti-typhoid fever serum and the sanitary condition of the camp are responsible.

It has been found in Texas that a field hospital can be conducted with as high a percentage of recoveries from operations as the best city hospital can show. Including medical and surgical cases 1052 patients have been admitted to the Texas City field hospital since last February, and there were ninety-three operations of a sort not usually attempted outside of regular hospitals, which included nineteen operations for appendicitis. No infections have resulted, and not a surgical case has been lost.

This proves that the army of the United States has become one of the greatest agencies for health.

MOTOR ACCIDENTS.

If there is one lesson that is from time to time brought vividly to our minds it is that which teaches us that automobile speeding on city streets is a dangerous crime. Every-day, in one city or another, people are being killed or maimed by careless and fast driving of motor cars.

Peterboroughs is not exempt from the effence. Indeed it may be questioned whether Peterborough is not a particular sinner in this respect. There are a lot of motors here compared with the size of the city. Many of them are newly owned and newly driven, and it is too frequently a new driver who wants to go fast.

From time to time our efficient police force make a campaign against gast driving, but the moment their eyes are turned away it begins again. One thing is noticeable, namely that there are a number of the oldest and best known drivers in the city who disregard the speed limits. These people are confident of their driving abilities. They think they are immune from accidents. They are mistaken. They are endangering their own lives every day. and what is just as important they are endangering the lives of others.

To them it may be pointed out that their example is bad on other motor drivers. They encourage reckless driving by that exampl As old and experienced owners and drivers ot is their duty to set a good example to otherst and to promote caution and care in the handling of motor cars by their own methods.

A motor accident is a terrible thing for the man who is driving the car. It leaves an indeliable mark on his. May it not be hoped that Peterborough drivers will unite in preventing, as far as possible, those accidents which have brought grief to other cities?

Old Folks' Colds Permanently Cured

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certain- which was recommended to me by C. L. Preuss, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada. ly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatments is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous surlining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN

The office of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance in Toronto is a busy place at the present time. The fall and winter Field Day Campaign has beggun. The Alliance is supplying speakers for an average of one hundred Sunday services at which the movement for the suppression of the liquor traffic is forcibly advocated.

The staff, of more than thirty clerks, is busy attending to correspondence and other details, in addition to the men who constitute the office and Field Secretary staff.

Up to the present time campaigns looking toward voting on January 5th have been launched in forty-eight municipalities. Of these places one is a city, thirteen are towns, fourteen are incorporated villages and the remainder are townships. There are eleven of the forty-eight which have not before voted upon the question of Local Option; there are ten in which majorities were polled against Local Option in former contests; there are twenty-six in which Local Option by-laws were defeated by the three-fifths requirement; and there is one in which a Local Option by-law was carried, and subsequently quashed upon a technicality. The list of the places is as follows:

PLACES NOT BEFORE VOTING.

Towns—Brockville, Prescott and Wiarton. Villages—Jarvis, Marmora and Springfield. Townships—Dunn, Marmora and Lake, Ross, Russell and Tiny.

MAJORITIES AGAINST LOCAL OPTION.

Towns—Tillsonburg. Villages—Delhi, Merrickville, Morrisburg and Woodbridge. Townships—Alnwick, Bayham, Bexley, Mara and York.

DEFEATED BY THREE-FIFTHS.

City—Sault Ste. Marie. Towns—Arnprior, Aylmer, Barrie, Cobourg, Meaford, Napanee, Oakvillee, Picton and Thessalon. Villages—Bradford, Burlington, Grand Valley, Kemptville, Port Perry, Port Rowan and Sutton W. Townships—Albermarle, Flamboro W., Flos, Georgina, Gloucester, Kitley, Puslinch, Scarboro and Tay.

THE QUASHED BY-LAW.

The municipality in which a Local Option by-law was carried and subsequently quashed, is Bastard and Burgess.

All these contests have been brought on by the temperance party. Others may be promoted, as the submission of a by-law in a municipality may be compelledby a petition of twenty-five per cent. of the electors filed with the municipal clerk on or before November 1st.

The liquor men may also, by similar action bring on a repeal contest in any municipality in which a Local Option by-law is in force if three years have elapsed since the last vote on the question. It is therefore probable that the total number of contests will be much in excess of the forty-eight set out in the foregoing list. There is going to be a lively fight.

EFFECTIVE, ECONOMIC COMPLEXION BEAUTIFIER

(Julia Orff in The Clubwoman)

One reason I strongly recommend mercolized wax is that it really takes the place of several different cosmetics, saving time, patience and expense. It is better than any cleansing cream, better than any massage cream, and better than any rouge, for accomplishing the results for which such articles are used. As the wax actually absorbs an old, faded or discolored cuticle, a little each day, the underlying skin which gradually appears, is clearer, softer, healthier-hued and more youthful than any cosmetic made complexion. Spreading on a thin coat of this wax at night, washing it off mornings, in a week, or so produces a marvelous transformation. Just one ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, will do the work. There's nothing better to remove freckles, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, blotches, pimples or blackheads.

For wrinkles and loose, saggy skin, I invariably recommend a face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties.

PHYSICIAN'S CAREER

Sir John Williams Had to Hoe His Own Row

Sir John Williams, Bart., president of the National Library of Wales, who subscribed a further $5,000 to the building fund now being raised has had a career that reads almost like a romance. The son of a tenant farmer in the hills of South Wales, he had to make his own way in the world. His father was also independent minister to the local congregation, and this led young John to think also of the ministry as a calling. Soon, however, he turned his attention to medicine, took his M.D. degree at London University and returned to his native Wales to go into practice. His ambition, however, took him back to London, and there he rose to be a recognized leader in his profession. He became physician to the Queen when Princess of Wales, and received his baronetcy in 1894, after the birth of the Prince of Wales.

Solway Firth Tragedy

Two Annan fishermen, Robert and Samuel Woodhouse, after two days weatherbound, left Maryport for home. There was a strong wind and a heavy sea, and a mile out a big wave struck the boat and washed Samuel, the younger brother, overboard. He was drowned before his brother's eyes. Robert, although overwhelmed with grief at his brother's sudden death, and in deadly peril himself, managed single-handed to run the boat up the Solway and obtain safety in Silloth Harbor. The drowned man was only twenty-two.

CRAZED MOTHER FLUNG BABE INTO SEA AS LINER BURNED

Arthur Hazelwood, Sailor on the Devonian, Jumped Overboard and Rescued Tot

Liverpool, Oct. 14.—On board the Devonian, which arrived to-day, were many remnants of families crazed with grief and terror at the great tragedy they had passed through.

Ernst Herrmann, a German passenger asserts that he was the first to notice the fire in the hold of the Volturno and says that the flames had even then made such progress that it was impossible to subdue them.

Among the rescued was a baby which the hysterical mother had flung into the sea. Arthur Hazelwood, a seaman of the Devonian, sprang overboard and rescued the mite.

Another pathetic figure was that of a girl of four, whose nationality even as yet is unknown. She stood among her fellow sufferers bewildered unrecognized and unclaimed.

Rotterdam, Oct. 14.—Captain Tinsley, the agent of the Uranium Line declares to-day that the reports of a plot against the vessel of the line published in Europe and America are absolutely untrue. He said:

"I never said a word to anybody relative to a letter having been received by the Company threatening to burn the ship."

London, Oct. 14.—The Volturno was still afloat on the afternoob of Sunday in latitude 47,37, north longitude 33,45, west, and there is apparently a possibility of the hulk yet reaching land. The The Companie was in her vicinity of quarter-past two on October 12, and Captain Bestron, in a wireless dispatch to the Cunard Company, says the derelict was then going southeast making about an knot an hour. Her hull appeared to be in good condition and liable to float indefinitely. A careful search was made by us for the missing boats La Touraine of the French Line, six hours later, continued the search but did not see any boats.

OUR CITY STREETS

Respectfully Dedicated to the Board of Works of the City Council

They took a little gravel,
And they took a little tar,
And various ingredients,
Imported from afar.
They hammered it and rolled it.
And when they went away,
They said they had a pavement
That would last for many a day.
But they came with picks and smote it,
To lay a water main;
And in time they called the workmen
To put it back again.
To run an electric railway they took it up once more;
And later put it back again.
Just where it was before.
They took it up for conduits
To run the telephone;
And then they put it back again
As hard as any stone.
They took it up for wires,
To feed the 'lectric light,
And then they put it back again,
Which was no more than right.
Oh, the pavement, full of furrows;
There are patches everywhere;
You'd like to ride upon it,
But it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome pavement,
A credit to the town;
They're always digging of it up
Or putting of it down.

A Boon to Humanity

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste Berume.

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1912.
To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.
975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from excess of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the sceptic public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL, and help suffering humanity.

SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, only positive cure for Diabetes. Price $2.00.

OLDEST LIVING CLOWN

Doughty's Successor is Harry Hemming, Birmingham

Now that poor old James Doughty has gone, the oldest clown is Harry Hemming, of Birmingham. Though something like 86 years of age, he is still vigorous, and retains many of the accomplishments for which he was so greatly admired. There are a few old playgoers who will remember his excellent fooling at the Moor Street and Prince of Wales Theatres, where he was styled "Birmingham's Favorite Clown."

CAT RETURNS DISTANCE OF SIXTEEN MILES

A story of the remarkable return of a cat to its old home comes from Kirkcaldy. A miner visiting near Dunfermline was presented with a cat. With his gift in a basket he walked four miles to Halbeath Station and travelled by train to Kirkcaldy, a distance of about sixteen miles. On the evening following its advent in Kirkcaldy the cat could not be found. Nothing was heard of it for some time, when a letter was received from the previous owners saying the cat had returned, and that they would not now part with it on any consideration. The cat, which had been missing for over twelve weeks, was quite plump when it returned.

BERLIN STADIUM IS ERECTED TO ACCOMODATE 30,000 PEOPLE

Elaborate Arrangements are Now Being Made in Berlin

For the 1916 Olympiad at Berlin the Stadium is erected on the racecourse in Grunewald in such a way that 30,000 spectators can so accommodated on seats, arranged in the form of an amphitheatre. The entrance to the arena and to the seats for spectators issues south of the public enclosure of the racecourse, through a tunnel bored under the course.

Outside the arena it is proposed to erect a place for water sports, consisting of a group of buildings, which will be closely connected with the Stadium buildings. The swimming tank will be bounded by dressing rooms, and refreshment rooms, the roofing of which—being the continuation of the arena stands and terraces—will provide seats for from 3,000 to 4,000 spectators for use during the water sports.

There are a cycle track and cinder path, and the rest of the arena, covered with grass, provides ample practice room for the various branches of sport. The football ground is in the centre of the arena, and the rest of the ground is available for hockey, cricket, discus, javelin and hammer-throwing, barlauf, etc.

The box for the Court and for guests of honor is placed above the mouth of the entrance tunnel. The buildings of the Stadium include rooms reserved for indoor sports (gymnastics, fencing, dancing, etc., resting and refreshment rooms, baths and douches) inside the racing enclosure. Here, as well as in the baths of the swimming tank, are rooms for medical measurements and examination of competitors. Ample accommodation has also been provided for the necessary dressing and other rooms. Athletes coming to practice will have at their disposal from thirty to forty beds in separate rooms at the Stadium, and in the neighboring Forest Restaurant on the racecourse.

MARQUIS HAS SEVERAL CLAIMS

A small party of friends was entertained at Eridge Castle by the Marquis of Abergavenny and Lord and Lady Henry Nevill. The Marquis, one of the oldest peers, has a claim to prominence for several things. First he is a Nevill, and a descendant of "Warwick the King-Maker"; he holds the patronage of twenty-four Church livings, he owns property in about seven counties, and is a founder of the famous Constitutional Club. Then he was at one time one of the greatest wirepullers in the Tory Party. Eridge has been held by the Nevills for nearly six hundred years, and the house was once described as being to medieval England what the Douglas was to Scotland.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
Tenders for the Installation or Completion of Electric Wiring System for the N. T. Ry. Car Shops.
Transcona, Manitoba.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked on the envelope: "Tender for Electric Wiring System", will be received at the office of The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, Ontario, until 12 o'clock noon of the 4th day of November, 1912, for the furnishing and installing of the Electric Wiring Systems required in connection with the equipment of the National Transcontinental Railway Car Shops at Transcona, Man., about six miles East of Winnipeg.

Plans may be seen and forms of tender and specifications obtained at the office of Mr. W. J. Press, Mechanical Engineer, Ottawa, Ont., and at the office of Mr. H. H. Finch, Assistant Engineer, Transcona, Manitoba.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders must be made on the forms supplied by the Commissioners, and that each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a Chartered Bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, for a sum equal to five per cent (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender.

The cheque deposited by the party whose tender is accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected, will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.
The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway.

ZAM-BUK

MRS. A. SAICH, of Cannington Manor, Sask., Writes:—"My brother suffered severely from eczema. The sores were very extensive, and burned like coals into his flesh. Zam-Buk took out all the fire, and quickly gave him ease. Within three weeks of commencing with Zam-Buk treatment, every sore had been cured."

This is but one of the many letters we are constantly receiving from people who have proved the healing powers of Zam-Buk. For eczema, piles, sores, burns, cuts and all skin troubles there is nothing like this wonderful balm. No skin disease should be considered incurable until Zam-Buk has been tried.

QUICK CHANGE ARTIST

Exciting Experience of Young American in Love With Mexican Girl.

By GEORGE CLAYTON.

As Lawrence Hale rode along the two miles of road which lay between his bungalow and the Senora Deep Level gold mine his thoughts were fully occupied with the girl who had come into his life so recently. Whether or not he loved her he did not know, not even now, when the kiss which she had given him still seemed to linger upon his lips. But that episode of the preceding day had certainly awakened strange emotions within him.

Leonora was a connection of Don Luis Obispo, of the neighboring hacienda. She had not been there when Hale had arrived, six months before, to assume charge of the engineering works. He had not seen her, never heard of her during many friendly visits to the ranch, until a month before. Then, unexpectedly, she had come out from the house upon the veranda, where Hale and Don Luis were drinking coffee together.

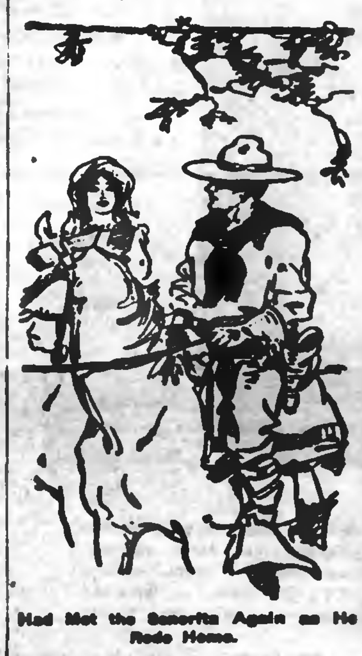
"Senor Hale," said the Mexican, "allow me to present you to my cousin, Senorita Leonora." But "cousin" might have meant anything in the Mexican dialect, from "niece" to "friend."

Hale had bowed and the senorita had smiled charmingly. He had discovered that she had been educated in a Paris convent; she had just returned to Mexico, and was spending a few weeks with her connection, Don Luis.

They had met frequently, and ever Hale had fallen more and more under the influence and charm of the senorita's flashing black eyes, her alluring ways. If she had set herself to make a conquest he knew she could have done so. But their friendship had been, on the surface, formal, until a week previously, when, calling at the hacienda, he had encountered her alone upon the porch.

"Senor Hale," she said, "my cousin, Don Luis, has gone to Mexico City and my aunt has arrived to be my chaperon."

Almost upon the words a hideous, withered old crone came hobbling out upon a stick.



Had Met the Senorita Again as He Rode Home.

"Senor," continued the girl, "permit me to present you to my aunt, Senora Maria Obispo."

Hale bowed over the old lady's hand and she mumbled at him. She seemed to him the most hideous old woman whom he had ever seen.

"Now, senor," continued the girl, "I must say adieu. You must not return. Don Ramon," she paused, "is very jealous of you."

Hale knew Don Ramon slightly—an elegant, brainless youth of a near-by hacienda, who affected a fine taste in saddles and silver spurs.

"I am ashamed to tell you this," the girl continued, "but those are my relative's orders. As you know, the rebels are threatening this region, and Don Ramon has obtained a captaincy in their forces. He threatens to burn the hacienda if you come here again."

So Hale went, and thereupon, because it had grown impossible, his love grew stronger. And on the preceding day he had met the senorita again as he rode homeward.

A group of Mexicans were lounging round the door of the mine offices, but the mine was not running. As Hale dismounted the mine foreman, Haggerty, came out.

"Mr. Hale, you may as well go home," he said. "The mine won't run for many a day to come."

Hale looked at the impassive foreman and the jabbering Mexicans and guessed the truth.

"Strike?" he asked.

"Yep," answered Haggerty briefly. "Don Ramon's in the hills with fifty men and he's sworn to put us out of business unless we hand out ten thousand pesos."

Hale grinned. "I guess he's sore on me for private reasons," he said. "I'll bring my grip over by four o'clock. So long!" And he turned his horse back toward his isolated bungalow in the valley.

He dismounted at the door of his abode, tethered his horse, and walked into the [illegible] which had been set for him. Don Ramon was waiting inside, with twenty Mexicans, and all their rifles were leveled uncomfortably upon his stomach.

Don Ramon removed his hat and made a sweeping bow.

"Senor," he said, "welcome. Will you accompany me upon a visit to our friend, Don Luis' house?"

"I shall be delighted," answered Hale. "When do we start?"

"At once, Senor Hale," answered the youth, and sent for the horses, which had been tied in a clump of brushwood three hundred yards distant. When they had arrived Don Ramon held Hale's stirrup, until he was in the saddle; then he mounted his own horse, and accompanied by the Mexicans, they clattered away toward the hacienda.

"Where is Senorita Leonora?" he demanded.

"She is gone!" muttered the crone. "She rode out toward Sonora early this morning and has not returned."

Don Ramon ground his teeth. "When will she return?" he asked, and the old woman burst into a storm of excited jabbering, which Hale could not follow.

When she had ended the Mexican turned to him.

"Senor," he began, quietly enough but gradually working himself into a fury as he proceeded, "you are doubtless glad that Senorita Leonora has escaped. But you do me an injustice, for my love for her is too deep to permit me to do her injustice. My wish is only to shield her in these troublous times that have come upon us. I am particularly anxious to protect her against you."

"Don't trouble yourself," said Hale curtly.

"It will be no trouble," said Don Ramon, snarling. He turned to one of his men. "String a rope over the tulip tree," he said.

The man ran for a rope and presently came back with it. He flung it over the tree and tied one end into a noose. The old crone watched from the veranda.

Hale looked at the rope and at the Mexican. In that second he was calculating his chances. He was unarmed; he could, at the best, hope for nothing but death by the bullets of the rebels instead of by hanging. Should he plead for his life, or for an easier exit?

"Senor Hale," he said, "though you view death coolly, life is, undoubtedly, as sweet to you as to any other man. You have a chance to save yourself. As I have said, I do not want to harm you—I only wish to protect my kinswoman. You shall go free and unharmed—if you consent to marry the Senora here."

"Damn you, go on with your hanging," shouted Hale.

The Mexican looked toward the rope and spoke a word. Two men stepped forward and, seizing Hale, began leading him toward the tree. The noose was placed round his neck. Two others seized the loose end of the rope. They looked to Don Ramon for the signal.

The old woman rushed forward, screaming frantically, fell on her knees before Don Ramon, and pleaded with him. Don Ramon did not give the expected signal.

"Senor," he said to Hale, "surely you will not disappoint my excellent kinswoman by refusing her suit! Your chivalry alone should prohibit you from so ungentlemanly an action. Come, Senor, I give you thirty minutes to decide. Speak with her in privacy, listen to her plea, consider whether life be sweet, or whether death be sweeter." He came nearer. "She is eighty-four," he whispered. "She won't live long. Senor Hale, I shall hang you greatly against my will, for the American government's arm is long. Be wise!"

He issued a sharp order and turned on his heel. The soldiers forced Hale into the house and led him to the reception room. The old crone was conducted thither and the men withdrew, taking their posts at the door. Hale and the old lady were left alone together.

They looked at each other. He saw the wrinkled face, the bleared eyes, half visible beneath the heavy lace mantilla which she had thrown over her head. She was singularly like her niece in build, perhaps a warning of what the Senorita would become in her old age. The caricature was horrible, and it made Hale shudder with disgust. To buy his freedom in such a way was impossible.

"Senor!" said a soft voice near him.

Hale started and turned around. It was the voice of the Senorita. He heard a low laugh behind him again and swung back toward the crone.

Before him stood the Senorita, the mantilla raised and thrown back, the bowed figure straightened, the flesh clear and youthful and firm under the painted wrinkles, the black hair just discernible beneath the wig of white.

"You!" stammered Hale.

"Si, Senor. Do you wish to change your decision?" she murmured demurely.

"But why—" he began.

"Ah, Senor, in these times an old woman fares better than a young one in Mexico. And yet I could not leave because—because I——"

"Because you loved me?" he exclaimed triumphantly, and clasped her in his arms. A moment later she had resumed her veil, and the old withered crone stood before him. Hale strode to the door.

"Senor Ramon!" he called. "I've changed my mind. I'm willing to marry this old lady! Where's Father Rufio?"

CARE OF FEATHERS

Use Only a Blunt Silver Knife to Curl Them

Feathers are not difficult to keep in condition; all that is required is patience; though this is the one quality that most women who adore feathers do not possess.

In the first place, if you are possessed of an expensively garnished feather hat, do not start out on a damp evening without a large chiffon veil. The veil may save you a substantial bill at a cleaning and renovating establishment. If the kitchen stove is alight when you return home sprinkle salt over it and shake the feathers over the heat. This will often restore them to condition with no further effort, but if they have become really lank and limp, they must be recurled. Take plenty of time and a thin, rather blunt silver knife—a small butter knife is a good instrument. Never under any circumstances attack a feather with a steel knife or the edge of a scissor blade. Each frond must be lifted separately and drawn slowly between the edge of the knife and the thumb. It should not take more than an hour to curl a long feather after one becomes expert, and short tips may be done in much less time. Do not, however, attempt to hurry the process by curling more than two fronds at a time. The result will be a stringy looking feather with ends all a different length and some of them straight and spiky. White feathers may be cleaned by dipping in a lather of white soap, rinsing well and then shaking well over a hot stove till dry. Afterwards proceed to curl the feather as above described.

A simple remedy for a broken-down arch is to slip an arch supporter into the shoe. If this does not suffice you should see an expert [illegible] for special shoe apparatus; or, better still, consult an orthopedic surgeon.

A nervous heart is one that, under any kind of excitement, or under the stimulus of [illegible] exertion, beats very rapidly or irregularly. Frequently tobacco or coffee is the cause. The remedy in such case is to stop using either or both.

BEAUTIFUL, BUT A DEMON

Venomous Snake Admitted to the London Zoo

A new resident has arrived at the London Zoo. He is a snake of the most venomous kind, and goes by the name of Bushmaster. He has a big, ugly head and a beautiful body, but just at present he is very sleepy, because he wants to change his skin. This is not the first specimen of the kind that has been in Regent's Park, but the new arrival is the finest that has ever come to this country. He has not shown his peculiar temper yet, but the keepers are dealing with him warily, for he has an exceedingly bad character. His birthplace was Trinidad, in the West Indies, and he is supposed to be one of the quickest moving of all snakes, as well as the worst tempered. Lachesis (for that is his scientific name) lives in swamps, plantations and forests, both on plains and on hills, and his females are ridiculously prolific. The young are produced by dozens at a time. They are ten inches long at birth, and are brought into the world in a state of viciousness equal to that of their parents.

INHERITED WEAKNESS

Statistics Proving in a Striking Manner the Truth of Heredity

Tuberculosis is an infectious disease. It is "caught" from some preceding case, though not in so direct fashion as measles. It is not directly inherited, like feeble-mindedness and some forms of insanity.

But a weak constitution which makes the individual easy prey for the tubercle germ is inherited; and this is an item too often overlooked in studying this disease.

An English investigator examined the families of nearly 1,000 convicts with reference to tuberculosis—convicts chosen because he had them in hand and could question them at pleasure. The student tried to find the relation—if any—between consumption in the parent and frequency of the same disease in the children. The figures given take account of the children surviving at the age of 14 years, the age when liability to tuberculosis first becomes great.

In families where neither parent had tuberculosis, only 3.12 per cent. of the children reaching 14 years of age were affected with the disease.

In families where the mother alone had tuberculosis, 24.47 per cent. of the children surviving to the same age were tubercular.

In families where the father alone had consumption, 24.79 per cent. of the children had contracted the complaint.

In families where both parents were consumptive, 27.50 per cent. of the children were affected.

Not all the amazing difference shown by these figures is due to hereditary weakness. Children of a consumptive father or mother are more exposed to infection than children of healthy parents. But after this allowance is made, there remains a surplus of cases in consumptive families which can be accounted for only by inherited weak health.

Playing With Live Cartridges

Reuben Rawlins, a boy living at Heath End, near Farnham, was seriously wounded by the explosion of a live cartridge. He and another lad were playing on Caesar's Camp, the training ground for Aldershot, when they found two live cartridges. Taking them home, they lighted a fire in a bucket and laid the cartridges on the top. As the fire did not burn very well one of the lads stooped down to blow it. Suddenly the cartridges exploded. Rawlins was so seriously injured about the head and face that he was taken to Trimmer's Cottage Hospital at Farnham in a precarious condition. The second lad escaped with slight injuries.

Not According to Plan

In his annual report to the Newport Education Committee Dr. H. E. Burgitt says that false information was attempted "a score times, notably as the child approached the leaving age, and was needed for household duties. Close co-ordination between the medical and attendance departments, however, invariably detected such cases. Still, there was often an apparent desire that speedy recovery should not take place in the cases of such children. "An illness such as ringworm is a stroke of fortune to their parents, because there is so much more time for work." One lad suffering in this way was too busy to attend the clinic for treatment, because he was delivering bread to the public. A couple of brothers, having contagious skin diseases, were purveying pastries.

HIS WELL LAID PLOT

Young Doctor Cures Patient of Hallucination While Winning a Wife.

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

Mrs. Susan Roberts was a chronic invalid. She knew it herself. She had influenced the more impressible of her friends with the conviction. As to her devoted but unfortunate husband, whatever his opinion he fully realized that she was making home life about as wretched and uninviting as it could well be.

What had started well and healthy Mrs. Roberts on the downward road to despair and dissolution, was the visit to the town of a quack. This irresponsible individual scattered a pamphlet describing his nostrums and dwelling gravely upon the dangers of "wasting away." Just at that time Mrs. Roberts had lost ten pounds. It was warm weather that had reduced her flesh, and when she began to worry over her fancied ailments she lost ten more.

Young Dr. Allen was called in. At the outset he told his patient that there was nothing in the world the matter with her. It was of no avail. She adopted all the languor and self-pity of a confirmed invalid. She mourned over the ultimate bereavement of her husband.

"If Lucy Day was only married off," she was wont to say lugubriously, "I would rest more easily in my grave from a sense of duty done."

Dear Lucy! the saving grace of the situation. She was pretty as a picture, and loved company and pleasure as well as any live healthy Miss of eighteen. She felt great gratitude, however, towards the aunt, who had taken care of her since she had been left an orphan. She had learned to take most of the household work on her own young willing shoulders when her aunt was well. When her fancied ailments came upon her there were added the duties of a patient, untiring nurse.

Lucy therefore had little time to think of beaux or parties. As to love, her practical life banished romance. It was true she had flushed and her heart beat a little faster when, in assisting Dr. Allen to prepare a bandage for her aunt, their hands met and he gave her a kindly smile. Later he had invited her to a local entertainment.

"I dare not leave my aunt, Dr. Allen," she said plainly. "Only make her well, and it would be a great pleasure to accompany you."

Dr. Allen looked at her as though he cherished the promise. Their friendly intimacy grew stronger after that, and Lucy was glad whenever the doctor came to the house.

One day Dr. Allen met John Roberts on the street. He had not called on his patient for several days, and he naturally asked her husband how his wife was getting along.

"Poorly, doctor, very poorly," replied John gloomily. "Declares the end is pretty close. She has lost fifty pounds" also, won't eat because it distresses her, and now she insists she is losing the use of her limbs."

"Indeed, how is that?" questioned the doctor.

"Fell over a chair and lamed her foot. It's pretty well bruised, but she says a foot doesn't count when her whole system is going to pieces."

A speculative look came into the doctor's face. He smiled slightly and his eyes brightened.

"See here, Roberts," he observed briskly, "we've got to circumvent that quack who put such nonsense into your wife's head."

"But how can we do it?" submitted John doubtingly.

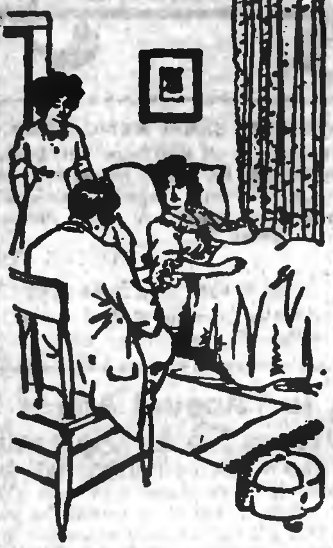
"The opportunity has arrived," pronounced the doctor confidently. "Somehow we have got to get your wife's mind away from her hobby. The bruised foot will do it."

"What do you mean?"

"This evening insist on calling me up, telling her you are worried about that foot, but don't let her know you told me about it."

"All right," agreed the pestered husband, but hopelessly.

Dr. Allen arrived at the Roberts home that night to find the invalid occupying her customary couch downstairs. He had to listen to a new list of symptoms. Mrs. Roberts declared that in walking about she had stumbled over a stool. She doubted not that she was losing the use of her limbs. The doctor finally got to the point of inspecting the injured foot.



Had to Listen to a New List of Symptoms.

The grave way his face drew down at once attracted his patient's attention. She became interested as he pronounced the mystic words "pedalic obstruction of the oblongata," then alarmed as he said seriously:

"This is a vital case, Mrs. Roberts. Your foot must receive the most careful treatment."

"Why, doctor," flurried the invalid, "it scarcely pains me."

"That may be due to the deadening effect of a local poison in the blood," advised the crafty and scheming practitioner. "I shall have to poultice and bandage it. You must not expose it to the air. If there is further discoloration, it may indicate a grave complication."

Dr. Allen opened the medicine case. He saturated a bandage with some specially prepared liquid. His face expressed some satisfaction as he left his patient worrying over all kinds of new trouble.

"We've got her mind on the foot," he whispered to Lucy as he left the house. "Keep it there and we'll outwit the 'wasting away' hallucination."

When Dr. Allen came the next morning and uncovered the bruised foot Mrs. Roberts nearly fainted away. It was black as ink to the ankle. Then there was a great ado. More scientific long-sounding words, renewed injunctions as to its care. Inside of two days Mrs. Roberts had forgotten all her wandering aches and pains. The doctor nursed her fears. He hinted at a possible operation.

"Doctor Allen, isn't it a little cruel to keep up this farce?" remonstrated the gentle-hearted Lucy one day.

"What! When I am satisfied that it will lead to your accepting that invitation of mine?" smiled the doctor. "Why, my dear little friend, your aunt is eating anything and everything to counteract 'the toxic influence of that oblongata,' isn't she? That's all she needed—good solid nourishment. She was simply on the verge of a nervous breakdown. When I get through with that foot she will be her old hearty self once more. Then——"

Dr. Allen looked meaningly—lovingly—at the brave little nurse, and Lucy's pretty pink ears tingled.

One day the doctor placed a metallic strip in the bandage around his patient's foot. When he took it out the next morning he dropped it into some liquid. It hissed and sizzled, as he intended. Some more scientific hocus pocus. Then he washed off the coloring and said the toxin was all out of his patient's system.

"You are a well woman—get weighed," he advised.

When Mrs. Roberts tipped the scales at 165 pounds, showing her loss regained and five pounds to the good, she screamed in joyful hysterics. Then she laughed, danced, and—no more wasting away!

Dr. Allen made a call—not professional this time—on his patient next day.

"Mrs. Roberts," he said, "you used to worry a good deal because Lucy wasn't married off, do you remember?"

"Why—yes," she admitted, wondering what was coming next.

"Well, I want to take her off your hands," smiled the doctor. "We are engaged, and that 'change' I ordered for you can include a pleasant shopping trip to the city, selecting her wedding trousseau."

An English authority on golf gives the following description of the golf course at Tientsin, North China:

"The course is 5,244 yards. Mud and sand greens, as it is impossible to grow turf good enough for greens. One of the most sporting courses in the far east. A large mud wall (20 feet high) with moat intersects the course and is utilized for hazards and elevated tees. Groups of Chinese graves, consisting of mounds of earth, sometimes ten to twelve feet high, piled over the coffin, which is laid upon the ground, form excellent bunkers. A unique local by-law permits the lifting of a ball from an open coffin without penalty."

Crofter's Tragic Death

A remarkable accident, resulting in the death of a crofter in the island of Harris, has been reported. Roderick MacAskill, a stalwart young man, was married last month, and resided with his father. Young MacAskill began to erect a house for himself, and while carrying a stone which weighed 3 cwt. he fell heavily to the ground, with the stone on his back. He was rendered unconscious, and before medical aid arrived he died.

Licenses for Boarding Houses.

Sanitary Inspector Spence has for some time introduced measures which have proved very beneficial to the city. Yesterday morning he recommended to the Board of Health that all boarding houses be licensed, also that they be governed by the Health Department. He pointed out that some boarding houses were a menace to the public health, referring particularly to the houses where numerous Italians were housed.

A Changed Verdict.

At yesterday's Assizes the case of Armstrong vs. Johnston came up. The defendant was not present. This case was one of for an assessment of damages for alleged seduction. The jury first, under a misunderstanding of their duty, brought in a verdict of $1200 for maintenance of the child and $300 expenses, the damages claimed being $3000. However, His Lordship sent the jury back, after explaining their duty. The afterwards brought in a verdict of $350 and costs of the court.

The Military "Shoot."

Thanksgiving Day, Monday next, will be a big day with the members of the 57th Regt., this being arranged for the annual shooting competitions. A number of prizes will be competed for, and the usual number of cups, etc. The men will leave the Armouries at 8 o'clock in the morning, and will spend the whole day on the ranges, lunch being served on the grounds. Among other trophies to be competed for are the Peck Cup, and the Bradburn Cup.

Runaway Boys.

On Monday evening last a young lad named Wethers, of Bethune Street aged about 16 years, and his companion, named Webb, a little younger, of London St., ran away from home and their mothers are in a state of anxiety concerning their whereabouts. Both lads were employed at the Canadian General Electric Co., and on Monday drew what money was coming to them. It is conjectured that they left on the 5.35 p.m. train for Toronto, but neither of them have any friends in that city. The local police were informed and the Toronto authorities notified, so it is expected that the lads will soon be located.

Potatoes Plentiful.

The family potato barrel will not fail in Ontario homes this winter, according to present crop indications. From this time forward the market for this product will open up, and the farmers gathering in the harvests will bring in unusually large returns of tubers. It has been estimated by the department of agriculture that 100,000 more bushels will be handled this year than in 1912 and the supplies of the last season were accounted somewhat a record. We understand the Thompson-Macdonald Co. have contracted for a large supply from the east, which will be retailed under one dollar per bag.

Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Gas, Bad Breath, mean Liver and Bowels need Cleaning.

Get a 10-cent box now

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels — you always get the desired results with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night; put an end to the headache, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, backache and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. No more days of gloom and distress if you will take a Cascaret now and then. All druggists sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Heating the Armouries.

The cold weather is almost on us, and will doubtless set in with grim reality and determination shortly. People will soon begin to think of lighting their furnaces and various other means of warmth will be resorted to. The general public of Peterborough do not know what a vast amount of fuel is used by some institutions and public buildings. The Armouries for instance burn a large quantity. For the past two or three weeks the cellars have been receiving their load, and there are at present not less than 110 tons of coal stored away for winter use. This amount last year was barely sufficient, as the fires were started on Oct. 15th, and continued until the cold weather had gone away. The caretaker informed The Times yesterday that the fires would be set going any time now. The heating in our local armouries is very efficient, by means of two large boilers which require the undivided attention of one man.

412th BARGAIN ANNEX EVENT | CRESSMAN'S | WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15th 1913

Being a Purchase of Factory Overmakes, Valued at $1.00 and $1.25

THE PROBABILITY IS THAT AS SOON AS THE WEATHER BECOMES COLDER, or when he wants to go skating or tobogganing the boy will feel the need of a warm, close-fitting garment like these Sweater Coats. And this "Penman" line is one of the best purchases our Annex buyer has made in a long time, because the coats are all $1.00 and $1.25 lines, the heavy wool yarn of which they are made being most comforting in chilly weather, to say nothing of the durability of such a good class of knitted coat. About half of them are made with high button collar, the remainder being—some with reversible turn down collar and others with the V-shaped neck, so well adapted for wear beneath the boy's ordinary coat. There is an excellent selection of colorings, popular choice generally resting upon garnet and grey; grey with fawn or navy; and castor with brown. Your attention is directed to the Window Display on Monday evening and Tuesday, which will reveal at a glance the extraordinary purchasing power of 59c in the buying of these Boys' Sweater Coats.

BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM

The C.P.R. Reducing the Danger of Accidents to a Minimum.

Safety first is an urgent consideration with [illegible] and the Canadian Pacific Railway is being no [illegible] in [illegible] its [illegible], designed to reduce the danger of accident to a minimum, if not to eliminate them altogether. The company has made a vigorous commencement in the equipping of the system with an automatic electric block signal. This is somewhat similar to the ordinary semaphore, which is a white iron or wood standard, some twenty-five feet high with a painted cross-arm for daylight purposes, and red, yellow and green lights for night use. The track is divided into blocks at the end of which is a signal. A train standing or running in given block, will set the signal in the block immediately behind it, against following trains—thus ensuring perfect safety from rear end collisions. This is the case in double track, but in a single track installation, the signals are so worked that a train in a block will set the signal against following and opposing trains—this making itself immune from the danger of either head-on or rear-end collisions. The C.P.R. now has these signals operating on its lines between St. John and Mattawamkeag; Montreal and Vaudreuil; Montreal (Place Viger) and Ste. Therese; Rumford Junction and Sudbury; West Toronto, Bolton, Islington and Streetsville Junction; Fort William and Molson; Stephen and Field (B.C.); Crow's Nest, McGillivray (B.C.)—the whole making a total of 638 miles.

The line between Montreal and Farnham is now being equipped as fast as the material can be put up.

The Easiest Way to Banish Those Ugly, Hairy Growths

(Toilet Talks)

Every well regulated toilet table should find room for a package of powdered delatone to be used for banishing hairy growths. To remove objectionable hair of face, make a paste with a little delatone and water and spread on hairy surface for about 2 minutes, then remove and wash the skin. This simple treatment is harmless and seldom requires a second application to remove every trace of hair. Any druggist can supply the delatone in an original package.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair Gets Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant At Once — No More Falling Hair.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

GIRL SHOOTS HER FATHER.

Wingham, Ont., Oct. 14.—Playfully pointing a revolver at her father, the nine-year-old daughter of [illegible] McDowell shot him dead. "Hold up your hands, daddy," said the little girl, the instant the cartridge exploded. Mrs. McDowell died about eight months ago and the three children of the family are now left orphans.

CONDEMNS SLASHED SKIRTS.

London, O., Oct. 14.—Mayor Graham in addressing the W.C.T.U. expressed the hope young women who wear a slashed skirt would yet arrive at a sense of what was proper. The union approved of the principle of women's [illegible].

HUERTA MAY BLOCK ELECTION

And if He Does the New President May be Only His Puppet

Mexico City, Oct. 14.—Release of all the deputies imprisoned by provisional president Huerta is looked for here to-day following his [illegible] yesterday of forty of those locked up at the time of his coup d'etat.

To-day Huerta is undoubtedly in full control of the situation here. His troops are under arms, to-day to overawe any attempt at resistance to his policies. Whether he actually plans to allow the national election is doubtful. If he does allow it, there is hardly a doubt that it will be perfunctory. He may squelch the election under a plea of public necessity and thus continue his own control. If he does not do so, the probability is that Manuel Calero will win.

Huerta is friendly to him and may, it is predicted, allow Calero to become President in name while Huerta himself retains the adherence of the army and the real power.

VIVID PEN PICTURE OF SEA TRAGEDY TOLD BY A WOMAN

Hysterical Women and Praying Men on Decks of All The Rescue Ships

New York, Oct. 15.—The supreme picture of the Volturno disaster came on Thursday night, about 9.30 o'clock, when the fire which until then had been confined below the steel doors, burst through the whole ship forward of the bridge. A mass of shrivelling flames leaped fifty feet in the air. The red glare outlined against the black sea, the black sky and the thick clouds made a brilliant picture, the half moon breaking through at intervals and casting her pale light on the glare and on the dozen liners grouped about.

The Carmania, in the foreground, was most brilliant; then came the Kroonland, a long line of faint lights. The lights of each ship were different.

Like Battleships Manoeuvring.

As the ships moved, the picture gave one the effect of battleships manoeuvring, with the tiny lamps of the lifeboats bobbing on the dark surface of the water, and an occasional blue signal from some lifeboat was answered from the bridge of one of the liners.

The Carmania's searchlight swept the scene through the whole night, picking out the small boats which were picking up survivors in the water. Collisions among the big ships were averted only by their splendid handling.

At 9.40 o'clock a tremendous explosion doubled the height of the flames, leaping from the deck of the burning ship. They set off two rockets on the Volturno, which rose high and gracefully through the air like an exhibition.

Hysterical Women—Praying Men.

On the decks of the Grosser Kurfuerst were groups of hysterical women and praying men. The flames burned high all night, gradually getting as far as the funnel. Then daylight came, sombre with dark clouds turning to scarlet, making another magnificent picture, with the fire sweeping back of the funnel to the stern, where some five hundred women and children huddled.

Suddenly the sea was alive with small boats and the whole crowd was taken off more quickly than seemed possible.

Our last sight of the Volturno showed the smoke back to the poop. The passengers were rescued just in time.

Mine Horror More Hopeful

Cardiff, Wales, Oct. 15.—Rescuing parties searching for the 400 miners still entombed in the Universal Colliery, where a terrific explosion occurred yesterday while 931 men were in the pit, got into touch shortly after noon today with a party of 20 men shut in by a fall of coal in one of the galleries. They signalled that another group of 15 of their comrades was closed in further along the gallery, but that they feared they were dead.

Altogether about 500 of the 931 men were rescued yesterday and to-day's discovery of further parties of living men gave rise to hope that the fatalities would not be so numerous to be accounted for.

PANIC CAUSES HORROR.

Lemberg, Austria-Hungary, Oct. 15—The fainting of a woman in a crowded synagogue at Chodorow, Galicia, to-night caused a panic. Hundreds of women rushed to the doors and sixteen were crushed to death. Scores were injured.

THREATENS BRITISH EMPIRE, BRITISH PEOPLE OVERBURDENED

Lengthy Appeal for a Conference on Maintenance of the British Navy

London, Oct. 15.—The Quarterly Review publishes to-day an authoritative fifteen-page appeal for the earliest possible conference, preferably at Vancouver, as a half-way house, for the discussion among partners of the Empire of the grave new situation threatening the security of every British State and conditions of the Empire partnership.

The writer, Mr. Archibald Hurd, explains the confusion the Canadian Senate's action introduced in relations of the Imperial Government and the Governments of the Dominions generally. The British taxpayer this year is paying 230 million dollars for the Empire navy, but the present standard of British construction which keeps in view practically only one naval power—Germany—is proving unequal to naval expansion in the Mediterranean, where Germany is allied to Italy and Austria; and to the new situation in the Pacific, where the balance of power is turning against our flag, but recently withdrawn from the outer seas under compelling circumstances.

British Heritage Menaced.

"Is it compatible with the dignity of England to recall Nelson's famous phrase, when hardly a single large armoured ship was ever seen in the Pacific or Atlantic, where the great fleets of Japan and the United States gather strength month by month. Every liberty and privilege cherished by all British peoples depend upon these peoples' reply to the renewed challenge now offered British supremacy. Unless British peoples consent to abandon in the meantime the heritage upon which rests British power and finance and the exercise of diplomacy which is vital to Canada and other Dominions relatively, as to the United Kingdom, then the Empire's defence must be jointly reconsidered from the standpoint of the whole Empire.

"The Admiralty can obtain as many officers and men in the United Kingdom as Parliament votes.

"Ships in practically any number can be built if the authority is obtained.

Unfair and Humiliating.

"The difficulty is that the financial burden is becoming too heavy to be borne by British taxpayers practically unaided.

"Including the Crown colonies, the overseas portion of the Empire have a revenue equal to ours; their whole population is about a third of that of the Motherland, yet they bear almost nothing like their share of the burden. The position is anomalous and unfair to the British taxpayer, particularly when millions are living on the borderland of poverty. It also is humiliating to the young nations overseas and to India. A conference should be called at the earliest moment to deal with these new and insistent problems, particularly as a fresh naval situation is rapidly developing."

PREMIER BORDEN TO WELCOME THE DUKE

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—Premier Borden and several members of the Cabinet will officially meet their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia on their arrival on Oct. 23, in Quebec, on board the Empress of Ireland.

The Duke sails from Liverpool for Canada on October 17, and will spend a year in the Dominion before his final return to England.

GREAT BRITAIN MUST NOW SQUARE THINGS

London, Oct. 15.—Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, has imposed on Sir Edward Grey, British Secretary of State for foreign affairs, the task of reconciling Great Britain's pro-Japanese proclivities with British Columbia's determination to enforce its decision to exclude Asiatics from its territory.

CITY BOARD OF WORKS IN REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION

Plans for Sewer to the Dickson Company's Property Will Go to the Provincial Board of Health for Approval --Street Repairs Authorized

The City's Board of Works met last night in regular business session Chairman Ald. Butler presiding. There were also present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Gillespie, McIntyre, Duffus and Anderson. The City Engineer was also in attendance.

Engineer Parsons reported that it would be practicable to pump sewage across the river, but he was not yet prepared with full information as to plans, pump, cost, etc.

Street Crossings.

A concrete crossing will be laid contingent to P. Connal's residence on Brock street.

A plank crossing will be laid across Water street, from Anson street, until such time as a concrete one can be built.

A concrete crossing will be laid on south side of Antrim street.

Catch Basin Wanted.

The Engineer was instructed to report on Ald. Langford's request for street grading for 200 yards above Smith street on Water; also a catch basin.

The request for a concrete walk on Maria street, from Mark to Burnham, was considered reasonable, but will probably be left in abeyance till next year.

To Repair Roads.

On motion of the Mayor, enough surface gravel from George street will be drawn to fill up the road on Park street, south of Lake, and other streets, the City Engineer to exercise his own discretion in the matter.

Ald. Johnston and Anderson's resolution that Dennison avenue be water-tabled and broken stone put on the street this year was voted down. Majority of the Board considered the broken stone needed more badly this fall elsewhere.

To Move Stand-Pipes.

The question of moving the street watering stand-pipe on Dennison avenue, and that opposite Mr. Pappas' residence on George street, was left in the Engineer's hands with power to act.

Sewer to Dickson Co's Property.

The City Solicitor reported that if the plans for the sewer to the Dickson Co's property are approved by the Provincial Board of Health, the city can issue debentures for payment of that portion of the work not chargeable against properties. These plans will be submitted to the Provincial Board of Health for approval.

Bonner-Worth Sidewalk.

Ald. Duffus reported that the Bonner-Worth people are anxious to get a sidewalk up to their factory. He thought some accommodation should be provided. A plank walk will be laid temporarily until conditions are

To Ald. Duffus, the chairman replied that the Engineer will look favorable for laying a concrete one. into the question of gravelling the east side of Rubidge street, north of Brock street.

Civic Conduits.

On suggestion of Ald. Duffus, the City Engineer will report on the feasibility of the city laying underground conduits to enforce the laying of all wires under ground. The several companies to pay a rent for using such conduits.

FILIPINOS THREATEN REVOLT TO GET INDEPENDENCE

Constabulary Director in Report Urges U. S. to Declare It Purpose Soon

Washington, Oct. 15.—Trouble with the Filipinos unless there is some declaration soon of the purpose of the United States to confer independence upon the archipelago is predicted in the annual report of Major H. H. Bandholtz, the director of the Philippine constabulary, made public to-day.

The report says that while the Filipinos would rather have the United States dominate the affairs of the islands than any other power, they want their freedom, and already there have been many rumors of an uprising, such as always in the past preceded actual outbreaks.

APPALLING LIST OF SEA FIRES IN PAST 15 YEARS

Seven thousand nine hundred and twelve lives were lost in twenty-four of the most important disasters to merchant vessels within the last fifteen years.

An average of one steam vessel has been destroyed or damaged by fire every day for the last seven years and a half, according to figures compiled at the Bureau Veritas of Paris, which keeps a complete register of maritime casualties.

Drom January 1, 1906, until June 30, 1913, 155 steam vessels were destroyed by fire, and in the same period 2,447 steam vessels were partially burned. The record of ship fires appears to increase each year; in 1906 there were 240 fires, in 1907 there were 266, the next year there were 349, in 1909, there were 313, in 1910 there were 355, in 1911 there were 424, last year there were 388, and in the first six months of 1913 there were 236.

175 DIED ON THE ERIE.

Among the known losses of ships by fire one of the first was that of the Erie, a lake steamboat, which was burned on Lake Erie on August 9, 1841, with a loss of 175 lives. On November 21, 1847, the steamer Phoenix was burned on Lake Michigan, with a loss of 240 lives. On August 24i 1848, the American emigrant ship Ocean Monarch, from Liverpool for New York, was burned off the coast of Wales and about 200 souls were lost. Another steamer on the great lakes the Griffith, was burned on Lake Erie on June 17, 1850, with a loss of life of 300 persons.

TRAGEDY ON ST. LAWRENCE

The transatlantic steamship Amazon was burned off the Scilly Islands on January 24, 1852, with a loss of 100 lives. A year later, on February 16, 1853, 140 persons were killed in the burning of the Independence off the coast of lower California. A St. Lawrence River steamer, the Montreal, on her way from Quebec to Montreal, was burned on June 26, 1857, the death toll being 250 persons.

471 LOST ON STEAMER AUSTRIA

The most appalling accident of its kind up to that time was the burning in midocean of the steamer Austria, bound from Hamburg to New York. Four hundred and seventy-one persons lost their lives in this disaster. The Great Lakes again came into the list on April 9, 1868, with the burning of the steamer Sea Bird on Lake Michigan, in which 100 lives were lost. On October 27 of the following year a Mississippi river steamboat, the Stonewall, was burned just south of Cairo, Ill., and 200 were killed. A disaster of practically the same proportion as that of the Austria occurred on December 6, 1874, when the Cospatrick, a ship in the emigrant carrying business, was burned at sea and 470 persons were killed.

AN EXCITED SUFFRAGETTE JUMPED ON KING'S CARRIAGE

Clung to Moving Vehicle as Royal Party Were on Way to Wedding, and Tried to Throw Petition Before the King--Police Dragged Her Away

London, Oct. 15.—Suffragettes today attacked the carriage in which King George and Queen Mary were on their way to St. James' Palace to attend the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife.

One woman, bolder than the rest, jumped on the step of the King's carriage and attempted to throw a petition into the King's vehicle.

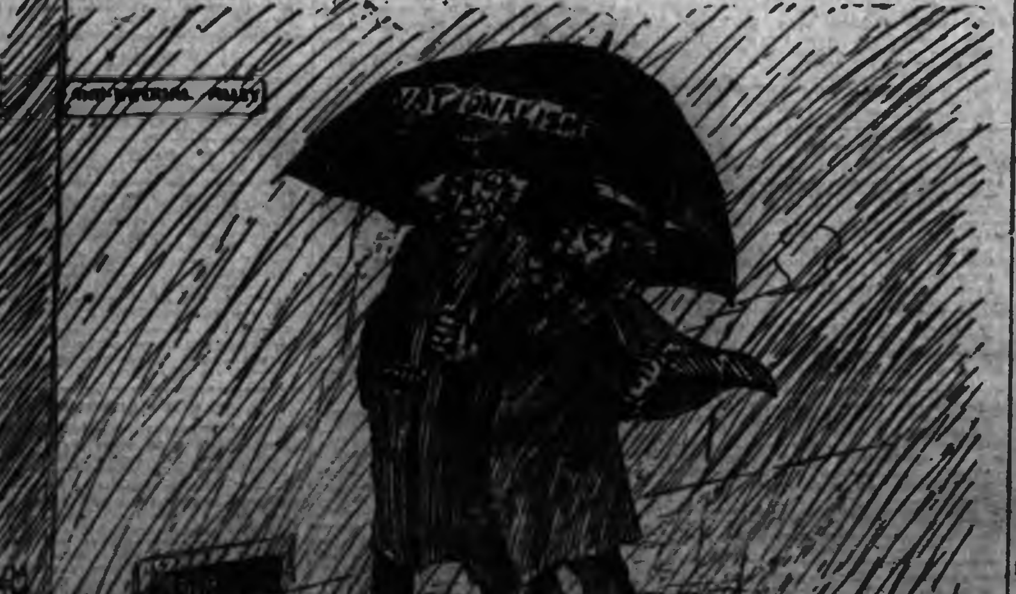
Police dragged her away and had difficulty in saving her from an angry mob.

"Give us votes for women," shouted the suffragette, as she clung to the moving carriage, with one foot on the step. She thrust the petition within the carriage, but a policeman grabbed her before she could drop it.

Other militants succeeded in throwing copies of the "Suffragette" into the carriages in which Queen-Mother Alexandra and the Queen of Norway were riding.

A huge crowd followed the suffragette who attacked the King's carriage as she was dragged to the nearest police station, and several attempts were made to mob her, but the police succeeded in driving off the hostile throng.

GOING THE SAME WAY.



SIR WILFRID—"Glad I've caught up with you, Bourassa."

BIG BAPTIST CONVENTION IN MURRAY STREET CHURCH IS HELD

Two Hundred Delegates Welcomed by Ald. G. A. Gordon Acting for the Mayor, A Most Interesting Evening Spent by an Immense Audience

The big Baptist Convention of delegates from the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, held last night in the fine new Murray street Baptist church, which was crowded to the doors, was a grand success. The proceedings included a song service conducted by Rev. H. Bryant, of Lindsay; devotional exercises by the local popular pastor, Rev. Mr. Webb; a solo by Miss Dorothy Allen of St. Paul's church, and other interesting features.

There were about 200 delegates present and some 60 more are expected to-day.

Ald. Gordon, acting Mayor, delivered an eloquent and well received address of welcome to the visitors. Ald. Langford also gave a short but well worded address, as did Mr. A. A. Cameron of Ottawa. The chair was very ably filled by Mr. A. A. Ayres, Pres., of Montreal. The president, in his address spoke of the church and the world. He referred to baptism 50 years ago and of the world's progress. He showed the great influence the church has had both rich and poor. He said sermons on theological questions have ceased to grip the souls of men in this 20th century. The church should be working and no idlers in it. Business men should take hold of church methods. The speaker also referred to the duties of parents. He then spoke of the value of moving pictures in the Sunday school. Few Baptists would be opposed to Church Union, provided no sacrifices of principle are involved.

SITUATION IN MEXICO GROWING MUCH MORE SERIOUS EVERY DAY

United States May be Forced to Declare War Against Mexico

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—Nelson O'Shaughnessy, U.S. Charge D'Affaires, was requested by telephone to call at the Mexican Foreign Office last night immediately after the conclusion of the Cabinet meeting, which had discussed the two communications from the United States Government. These, it is reported, contained a warning against the Mexican Government permitting harm to come to Mexican deputies imprisoned by order of Gen. Huerta, and referred, also, to the unconstitutional situation brought about by the forcible dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies.

The American Charge went to the Foreign Office and remained there some time, but afterwards declined to say anything on what had occurred.

Mobilization at Mexico.

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 15.—It was reported last night from Federal sources that Government troops have withdrawn from Guaymas Sonora to take part in a mobilization at Mexico.

From constitutionalist sources it was learned that the insurgents had occupied Empalme, a suburb of Guaymas, upon the withdrawal of the Federal troops.

Mexican Diplomat Worried.

Washington, Oct. 15.—The Spanish Minister to Mexico has called a conference to-day of the entire diplomatic corps in the Mexican capital to discuss Huerta's decree of dictatorship. Advices to that effect reached the State Department early to-day from Charge O'Shaughnessy.

Germany Waits U.S. Move.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—The German Foreign Office is following new developments in Mexico very closely, at the same time adhering to its attitude of allowing the United States Government an absolutely free hand in settling its policy without extraneous advice.

The suggestion put forward by some Mexican newspapers that Ambassador Gerard is faced with difficult negotiations in regard to Mexico is unfounded.

NORWOOD FAIR THIS YEAR WAS MOST SUCCESSFUL YET

Immense Crowd Visit the Ground and Enjoy a Unique Display of Exhibits and Splendid Races

The annual fall fair of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society, held yesterday, in Norwood, exceeded all previous efforts. The fair grounds were admirably adapted to the purpose and great enterprise was visible everywhere. The ideal weather brought out immense crowds. Farmers from all parts of the county were in attendance as well as many visitors from the city. There were scores of automobiles within the grounds. Norwood is the heart of agriculture for East Peterborough, and the farmers surrounding that progressive village seem to take great interest in the success of their fall fair, and their efforts this year were crowned by the laurels of signal success breaking the record both in the number and quality of exhibits and attendance.

Among the special features worthy of note were the exhibits of six rural schools, held under auspices of the Department of Agriculture. The inside exhibit of fancy goods in the Armouries, fine arts, etc. The stock show was also above the average, and the poultry display was most excellent.

The races were well contested and created much interest among some 7000 people present.

How Stockings and Their Use Figure in Superstitions About Customs and Dreams.

Stockings figure in some curious superstitions touching old customs, especially those connected with marriage. Every one knows that there are actions both lucky and unlucky. Among the former it is commonly held that to put on any article of clothing wrong side out is decidedly a sign of good luck; but it must be done accidentally, and when the mistake is found out no change must be made, else the luck will immediately vanish. The idea is very firmly held about stockings, probably because it is more easy to make such a mistake in putting on a stocking than in donning other garments. It would be hard, indeed, for a woman to put on her dress or a man his coat or vest inside out without noticing what he was doing.

Sometimes folk are to be found who have improved upon the original notion or who have even reversed it.

Another superstition touching the use of hose is connected with dreaming. This is a Scotch notion. If a person be about to sleep in a bed that he or she has never slept in before, the certainty of dreaming can be assured by placing the stocking taken off the right foot under the head. Not only will the sleeper be sure to dream, but the dream will certainly come to pass.

Of the superstitions attached to marriage ceremonies, most people have heard of "throwing the stocking." This rite would hardly be regarded now as consistent with modern notions of decorum, but it was highly popular in former days. The ceremony was performed at the conclusion of the wedding day's festivities by young men and girls seated at the bed foot—the former having the bride's and the latter the groom's stockings—whose object in throwing the hose backward over their heads was to hit, if possible, the head, and especially the nose, of one or other of the newly married couple. A successful shot meant marriage at an early date for the thrower.—Tit-Bits.

FATHER O'FLYNN

Author of Words of Famous Song Would Divide His Glory.

During a lecture at the University College, of North Wales, on "Songs of Ireland," Mr. A. Percival Graves, the author of the famous song "Father O'Flynn," gave an interesting account of the origin of the song with which he thought his name was already too much identified.

When a clerk at the Home Office, Mr. Graves happened to be strolling across one of the London parks and the words of the song came into his head. Subsequently writing them out he sent them to the "Spectator" in which they were published.

Ten years afterwards they were set to music by Sir Charles Santley and when first sung scored an immediate success. But the public perseveringly ignored Sir Charles' collaboration in the song and have insisted upon recognizing Mr. Graves as its sole creator.

In many places he is known as Father O'Flynn, his own name being utterly forgotten.

The Lisburn Board of Guardians have granted 75c a week relief to a poor woman who was shown to have been supporting herself and child on tenpence a week.

V.C. Hero to Prison

At the Athlone Petty Sessions Wm. Lennon, an ex-soldier, who won the Victoria Cross during the Boer War, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment for stealing a parcel out of a cart.

Died in 101st Year

The death has occurred at Malone, Ireland, of Mrs. Margaret Johnston, in her 101st year. The deceased was the widow of the late Mr. John Johnston, Dunarvon, and was able to go about until a few days before her death.

Fatal End to Long Sleep

"Death from pancreatitis, accelerated by gas poisoning," was the verdict of a Belfast coroner's jury in the case of Albert H. Erwin, seventeen. The Erwin family, overcome by gas fumes, slept for forty-two hours, and the deceased died in his sleep.

Death of an Aged Admiral

Among the numbers of telegrams of condolence received by Lady Dowell on the death of Admiral Sir William Dowell, one from the King said:

"The King is so grieved to hear of the death of dear Sir William Dowell, whom he had known for so long, and he offers you and family his heartfelt sympathy in your great loss."

The late admiral was born in 1825, entered the Navy in 1839, and was in the fighting in Chinese, Japanese, and Egyptian waters from 1841 to 1882.

Irishman's Domestic Troubles

"My wife," he said, "or my waster, as you will, has been at me again. My son said he would kick my ribs in if I did not pay the rent, and she, my spouse, said, 'That's right, give him a kick.' As the poet says:—

Bathe my feet in boiling lead,
Or place me on a rack;
But save my life while I am here,
From yonder woman's clack.

Steeplejack Falls 130 Feet

Leonard Wilkinson, a Sheffield steeplejack, aged twenty-seven and unmarried, fell a distance of 130 feet while fixing ladders on a chimney stack and crashed, head first, into an iron door in the ground. Death was instantaneous.

Colony of Fenland Vipers

A colony of vipers has been discovered in the Ramsey Fen and Raveley district of Huntingdonshire. The viper, which was at one time plentiful in England, is the only poisonous snake now found in the country. Its bite is often very severe, but rarely fatal to man.

Two Deer Stalkers' Big Bag

A deer-stalking record was set up by two guests of Mr. Jersey de Knoop, the lessee of Kinlochewe, Sir Kenneth McKenzie's Ross-shire forest, which covers about 32,000 acres. The two sportsmen killed ninety-eight hinds in six days. On their best day they accounted for twenty-seven.

A Big Schoolboy

The village of Banton, Kilsyth parish, Scotland, has a schoolboy who, though only thirteen years of age, weighs 139 pounds, and is 5 feet 8 inches in height. According to results disclosed by the medical inspection of school children he is the biggest schoolboy in Stirlingshire.

Shipbuilding Revival

Maryport shipyard, Scotland, after being closed for over a year has been re-opened, having been taken over by Messrs. Jopson, West Hartlepool. Coasting steamers will be built, and employment will be given to between one and two hundred people.

ORIGIN OF LONDON NAMES

Some Interesting History and Some Shrewd Guesses.

The stranger who visits London, must often speculate as to the origin of this or that thoroughfare, or wonder how some of the curiously named streets he passes through came by their names.

The origin of Bishopsgate is not clearly known, but it is supposed to have been built by some famous prelate in or about the year 1200, and named after him.

It is a little difficult in these days to believe that the area about Charing Cross was no more than a little village in the time of Edward I. Opinions differ as to the first meaning of the word "Cross" attached to the name of this hamlet, but it is probable that it had the same signification that is to be discovered in other cases of the kind in London and the country. There have probably been crossroads here from time immemorial, but it is said that in the case of Charing Cross there was a more specific reason. Edward I. is stated to have erected a cross in memory of his queen on the spot where the statue of Charles I. was afterwards set up.

Piccadilly, if we may believe the usual explanation given for its curious name, was so called because the first person to build a house in that neighborhood was interested in "piccadilles," by which name the stiff collars or ruffs formerly worn were originally known.

The religious associations of Paternoster Row are still upheld by the present residence in that quarter of those who deal in publications of that order, but it is said that the place originally derived its name from the fact that it was the favorite haunt of the turners of beads or makers of "paternosters."

Similarly Lombard Street took its name from the Lombards and other foreign merchants who assembled there twice a day to dispose of their wares.

Crutchedfriars has monastical associations a monastery of the Holy Cross having stood there in days gone by.

Moving Wood Near Cardiff

Rain caused a landslide in the neighborhood of Llancarfan, near Cardiff, a large wood having moved such a distance as to make traffic between Lydmoor and Abernant impossible. Mr. Holder, surveyor to the Llandaff and Dinas Powis Council, stated that the wood moved fully 8 feet and the roadway was lifted 2 feet owing to the pressure.

Bell Ringing at the Arsenal

In place of the ten minutes' ringing of the bells at Woolwich Arsenal twice and sometimes three times day to call the men to work, there will be substituted for each ten minutes two periods of one minute each with an eight minutes' interval.

In Church in Disguise

A man named James Reid was sentenced at Sligo, Ireland, to three months' hard labor for loitering in Sligo Cathedral with intent to steal. The sacristan saw Reid in the gallery disguised by a false moustache, whiskers, and spectacles. Canon Dorley said Reid told him he was starving, and the canon offered him money, which he, however, refused.

Peer's Grateful Employes

Lord Ashton, at Lancaster, on his seventieth birthday, received an ornate casket and an illuminated address from 5,000 employes at his linoleum and cotton mills and paint works in recognition of his undertaking to pay their Insurance Act contributions and to supplement the benefits. Lady Ashton was presented with a diamond and pearl bracelet.

It was announced that each employe would receive three days' pay as a memento of his lordship's seventieth birthday.

To Bid for Historic Castle

For Castle, Ayr, which formed part of the thirteenth century church of St. John, and within which the Scottish Parliament met in 1315, the year after Bannockburn, to settle the succession of the crown, was offered for sale at Ayr recently, with a reserve price of $10,000, but there was no offer. At the end of the fifteenth century James IV. used to visit the church and make offerings at the altar, and during the Reformation John Knox preached from the pulpit. Oliver Cromwell, during his sojourn in Scotland, used the building as an armoury, and public indignation was so loud that the Protector proffered substantial monetary assistance (1,000 marks, Scots) towards a new church.

Ironing With the Feet

A writer in "The Wide World Magazine" says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flat-iron, only longer. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the man placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing-boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Judging by the news of the exciting times in Belfast somebody ought to try to extract the ire from Ireland.

Drum is the name of a new evangelist who has taken the field in the crusade against the devil, but he is connected with the Salvation Army, as his name might indicate.

It will be some time before the beneficial effects of the new tariff are perceptible, so there is no use craning your necks in readiness to dodge when the high cost of living falls.

Liberal stumpers in Chateauguay declared that their party was united on their naval policy. As the Liberals last session had a large and varied assortment of naval policies, and voted for them all, this proud boast seems to require some elaboration.

Canada is now able to borrow money in London at better rates than are obtained by any other of the British Dominions. The wise statesmanship displayed by the Government during the recent financial stringency has kept the credit of Canada as high as that of any country in the world.

A bill has been introduced in the U. S. Congress to increase the supply of beef by preventing the slaughter of calves. But the danger is that this legislation may be carried too far. For instance, some statesman may undertake to increase the output of fried chicken by making it a penal offense to eat eggs.

ONE LANGUAGE.

The other day an address of national significance was delivered at Edmonton by Hon. J. R. Boyle, Minister of Education for Alberta. He declared that there were no bi-lingual schools in Alberta and that none would be established. Outside of Galicians and Ruthenians they had not found it difficult to deal with the foreign population. But in some of the schools in the Ruthenian settlement teachers from Manitoba had been introduced. Mr. Boyle said that for the most part they were comparatively ignorant, with a poor command of English with inferior education and with no professional training. As soon, however, as the facts were reported to the Department of Education the dismissal of all such teachers was required and general submission to the order seems to have been secured. Mr. Bovle said the majority of the Russian people when not inflamed by agitators are willing to have their children instructed in English and that schools in Russian districts have even asked to have unqualified Russian teachers removed.

Mr. Boyle continued: "I do not agree with the idea advanced by many people that the large foreign population we have in this country presents very great difficulties educationally. That is not so. We do not require, in my opinion, any special type of school for these people. So long as we maintain a high standard for our teachers we will have no difficulty in managing these schools All that is required is intelligent well-trained teachers, and I think schools among the foreign population will prove to be as efficient as those among other classes of our people. I am not in favor of granting special concession to any race among our people. Where special concessions have been made in other parts of Canada they have been made in my opinion chiefly for political and not educational reasons, and the results, as a rule, have been disastrous from an educational point of view. Any citizen who enjoys equality before the law and justice in our courts, it seems to me, has no right to complain. It is the policy of the department to maintain a high standard for teachers, a uniform programme of studies, uniform text books, and a uniform system of inspection in our schools to the end that every boy and girl in this country will receive at least a sound elementary education."

This is the policy which The News has consistently advocated. It would have neither bi-lingual schools nor separate schools in the Western Provinces. It would teach only the English language and have only a national school system. The schools are the nurseries of a common nationality but with division of language and division of creed it is almost impossible to develop a common citizenship. In Ontario, where bi-lingual schools were established long ago it is not easy to abolish bi-lingual teaching absolutely. But we doubt if it was necessary to establish such schools, and certainly French teaching should be restricted. With the schools of Quebec we of the other provinces have nothing to do, nor are we animated by ill will towards French people. All we contend is that command of English is an asset to every Canadian citizen and that we do grave injustice to children who are deprived of an adequate knowledge of what is and must be the common language of the continent.

Headache Over the Eyes?
Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

NEXT SUNDAY'S LECTURE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Regarding the lecture in the Opera House next Sunday afternoon, (collection only), by Rev. Dr. Sullivan, ex-priest in attendance at the Baptist convention, let me say that Dr. Sullivan will speak on "Protestantism" which stands for liberty of thought. A man, according to Protestantism, is a whole world in himself, full of independence and responsibility and it is the realization or otherwise of this spirit of freedom and manly responsibility that makes him either a man or nothing. According to Catholicism, however, men and women are nothing, that is to say, their opinions count for nothing. The Pope alone counts. The Church of God itself is founded upon the Pope. Indeed, the Catholic motto is "No Pope, no church." Without a Pope, no church; with no church no God; no people but savages; not a world of light and intellect but of gloom and horror. The Pope demands absolute submission to his will accordingly or he puts his curse upon us. He is urging his demand with renewed vigor and determination. His forces are at work everywhere. If people do not take notice of the Pope's decrees in this respect it is not for want of effort on the part of his Holiness to impress them with the fact of his doing so. To be prostrate at the feet of the Pope is something no free man can ever be. This demand has been fought to the death before and will always be fought to the death by Protestants. The papal party and the Protestant party are just as determined as parties can be and they differ so radically that there can never be peace between them. Explosions of dissatisfaction and resentment occur volcanically in different parts of the world every day and a universal tremor shakes the whole world occasionally. Until victory rests with one side or the other there can be no peace for unfortunately there can be no compromise. The combatants are animated by the utmost fury. People who do not see these things do not see them because they are too lazy to see them, too indifferent or too self-interested. The question of the day is "Is the world to be free or Catholic?" and it must be settled.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A LINDSAY SHERLOCK HOLMES

Lindsay, Oct. 15.—In order to assist the police of Lindsay to run to earth the burglars who have been operating not only in Lindsay, but in Orillia, Picton, Peterborough, Gananoque, Belleville, Fenelon Falls and other places during the past two months, The Warder yesterday pursued a clue of its own account, and with no little result.

Saturday night burglars stole a horse and rig out of the sheds at the Little King Edward hotel. Diligent search was made for the missing outfit. The horse was located Monday morning standing in the yards of the Pym House.

While looking the outfit over and examining the buggy, a Warder scribe came across a roll of silver solder and two or three keys, which he handed over to the police. The Warder learned that during Saturday night or Sunday morning that the office of Mickle and Diament, mill owners at Fenelon Falls, had been ransacked.

The Warder scribe, knowing that silver solder was used extensively in repairing band saws, such as are used in saw mills, concluded that perhaps the solder was stolen from the Fenelon Falls office. Calling up Fenelon Falls it was learned that about the only thing missing from the office of Mickle and Diament was some silver solders.

MARY ELIZABETH MADE GOOD CANDY

She Began on a Small Scale—Now She's Worth Half a Million

Several years ago Mary Elizabeth whose other name is Evans, started to make candy for sale in Syracuse On a table she put her candies and a small wicker basket in which people put the money for what they took. People liked her trust of them and they did not ever take more candy than they were entitled to from the dishes on the unwatched table. They began telling other folks about the candy-table and pretty soon Mary Elizabeth was able to sell more candy than she could make alone in her little home. Then she hired assistants and opened a store with a real clerk in it. And now she has a candy shop on Fifth Avenue in New York City, another in Newport and still a third in Bermuda. And she won't take half a million dollars for her business.

VALUABLE TIMBERS

Graham Island, Pacific Coast, Abounds in Fine Poles

Five thousand poles for use on the telegraph lines along the Panama Canal were cut from Graham Island, Prince Rupert. This was the first of the Graham Island timber that found a market and indicates the development of an important industry as experts are agreed that nowhere else could trees be found more adaptable to the manufacture of poles in general and flag-staffs in particular. Some of the timber has not a branch for 100 feet up, while poles 6 inches at the butt and tapering to 4 inches at from 60 to 100 feet can be cut in any quantity.

LOVE MUCH.

(Published by Request)

Love much. Earth has enough of bitter in it;
Cast sweets into its cup whene'er you can,
No heart so hard but love at last may win it.
Love is the grand primeval cause of man.
All hate is foreign to the first great plan.

Love much. Your heart will be led out to slaughter
On altars built of envy and deceit.
Love on, love on! 'tis bread upon the water,
It shall be cast in loaves yet at your feet,
Unleavened manna, most divinely sweet.

Love much. Your faith will be dethroned and shaken,
Your trust betrayed by many a fair false lure.
Remount your faith, and let new trusts awaken.
Though clouds obscure them, yet the stars are pure.
Love is a vital force and must endure.

Love much. Men's souls contract with cold suspicion;
Shine on them with warm love and they expand.
'Tis love, not creeds that from a low condition
Leads mankind up to heights supreme and grand.
Oh, that the world could see and understand.

Love much. There is no waste in freely giving;
More blessed is it even than to receive.
He who loves much alone finds life worth living.
Love on, through doubt and darkness; and believe
There is no thing which love may not achieve.

IN THE CHINA SEA

On December 20, 1890, the British steamship Shanghai was burned in the China Sea, with the loss of 100 passengers and crew. The Abyssinia of the Guion Line, bound from New York for Liverpool, was burned at sea on December 18, 1891. The North German Lloyd steamship Spree came along just in time and saved 147 persons, passengers and crew. One sailor, who jumped overboard, was drowned.

Humor in Missouri

When Christine Nilsson made her concert tour in the United States in 1884, Sig. Brignoli sang with her. He caused much merriment when he came forward in a Missouri town to apologize for Nilsson's indisposition.

"Madame Nilsson ees a leetle horse," he said.

Noticing a ripple of laughter among the audience he repeated the statement that Nilsson "was a leetle horse, a leetle horse, a leetle colt."

the gallery brought down the house by remarking:

"Well, then why don't you trot her out?"—London Tit-Bits.

-- KEEP THE PUBLIC INFORMED --

THAT is the motto of the modern merchant. He knows his business will grow exactly in the proportion of his ability to make it useful to the public.

The better he can make himself known for character, for courtesy, for fairness in price, the larger will be the measure of his success.

The modern merchant believes in taking the public into his confidence.

He believes people are interested in the sources of merchandise, its purposes, its character, as well as its fineness and price.

He classes these things as legitimate news of his store.

He tells this new through the advertising of live daily newspapers, like "THE TIMES."

He feels it is part of his servic to keep the public informed.

NO MORE SEA-SICKNESS WHILE CROSSING THE CHANNEL

Passengers crossing the Channel in the new Belgian State steamers enjoy the delights of a sea voyage without the miseries of sea-sickness. The new steamers, Stad Antwerpen and Ville de Liége, which the Belgian Government runs on the Dover-Ostend route, are the first among the vessels plying between Great Britain and the Continent to be provided with an anti-rolling arrangement.

The arrangement, devised by Mr. Frahm, the engineer, consists of tanks fitted on both sides of the vessel as far as possible from her centre-line and communicating with each other. These tanks contain water, which is displaced under the influence of rolling. This water, which tends to flow to the lowest side, does not run at once from one side to the other, but "lags," so to speak. It will be understood, therefore, that there is always a greater bulk of water on the side of the vessel which is rising. Thus the effect of the weight of water contained in the tanks approximately balances at each moment the effect of the impact of the waves against the hull of the vessel, and thus prevents the rolling motion.

The results obtained on several vessels are remarkable. Rolling motion, which used to make the vessel incline to either side at an angle of from 10 to 20 degrees, is commonly reduced to 2 or 3 degrees.

Collapse of a Hillside

The side of a limestone hill at Porthywaen, near Oswestry, slipped and at least 200,000 tons of rock fell into the quarry. Below the crest of the hill there is a bow-shaped fracture, about 500 yards in length, and nearer the cliff face of the hill is a fracture 200 yards long. The face of the rock has been thrown back fifty yards by the fall. The landslip is attributed to the heavy rain.

THE TESTING OF EXTREME COLD

How it Feels at One Hundred and Fifty-seven Below Zero

In the course of a series of experiments with extreme cold, carried on at Berlin, Raoul Pictet, an investigator, inserted his arm, bare beyond the elbow, in a chamber refrigerated to a temperature of 157 degrees below zero Fahrenheit and kept it there for several minutes.

He suffered no permanent damage, but experienced a number of peculiar and painful sensations. The chief of these and the most trying was a feeling of pain in the bones of the hand and arm. The pain increased rapidly. It was located chiefly in the interior parts of the arm and was far less severe in the portions near or at the surface. The skin was purple when the member was withdrawn. In about ten minutes a violent reaction set in with violent burning sensation of the skin wherever it had been exposed.

DRINKING WATER AND CUPS

Where Does the Water in Public Places Come From

Concerning drinking water, no less than drinking cups, in public, one would think that nothing need be said, but one cannot take the shortest trip on boat or train without seeing how little heed is paid to the repeated warnings about these things. In the matter of the cups, there is no excuse—one can so easily fold a tumbler from a piece of clean paper; such cheap and satisfactory cups, to be used once and thrown away, are procurable in the stores; and it is so easy, anyway, to carry a little case in one's handbag containing a metal cup. But do people realize that boats pump their drinking water, very frequently from the polluted streams and lakes through which they run? And have you ever noticed the method by which a train tank is filled? Have you ever pictured the interior of that tank? If you once stopped to think about it you would surely carry your own supply of water, or go thirsty.

The Richest Woman

The richest woman in the world, Mrs. Hetty Green, of New York, owns something like one hundred million dollars.

Interest in England

Foreign investments brought Great Britain interest to the amount of one hundred and eighty millions last year.

THE WORLD'S INCOME IS SPENT BY WOMEN

The Welfare of the Family Depends on Her Ability to Handle Money

It is a fact long recognized by shrewd retailers and careful advertisers that woman is the world's spender. Her disbursements for family supplies are enormous. It is not the great industry, mercantile establishment or bank that puts into circulation the money that keeps the world going; it is the housewife. Remove her transactions from trade operations and stagnation would result. The industries, the mercantile institutions and the banks owe their prosperity to her. On the other hand, they are her conveniences. Perhaps she handles only a small part of the incomes of the very rich, but the incomes of the very rich are at once drawn from the concerns to which she either directly or indirectly gives her patronage, and are either directly or indirectly invested in the concerns that supply her wants. She handles the largest part of the income of the well-to-do. She handles practically all the income of the poor. The man works and earns, generally speaking; the woman spends. How well she spends is a determining factor in the welfare of the man, in the welfare of the community and the nation.

Woman is man's purchasing agent. Even with regard to matters of peculiar personal interest to himself, the man prefers that she conduct the dealings. It is an interesting discovery that women throng the men's furnishing departments of the big stores, that they are important patrons of the haberdasheries. Some men prefer to supply their own needs, and they do this generally in regard to clothing, hats and shoes. But in almost every other particular women do the buying.

Manifestly, then, it is woman, rather than man, the retailer and the advertiser is most desirous of reaching, and, manifestly also it is of the greatest importance that women shall know how to buy. Instinctively, they are better shoppers than men. Men are hurried, indisposed to bargaining, inclined to buy what they do not want and to pay more than they can afford for what they need. Women, as a rule, are keen, prudent, economical.

BLACK BATHROOMS

Peculiar Color Scheme Rests Tired Nerves

A Canadian lady who called to consult a London house decorator about her own home was told that smart people in London who suffer from jaded nerves and could afford to adopt any plan to soothe them were having their rooms decorated in black and white or black and gold. The result was said to be extremely restful.

"Some say there is a touch of decadence in this desire for black," said the decorator, "but I think that it is soothing to the nerves and in the present age of rush and hurry that is what we are all seeking. Black bathrooms are rather a novelty. We have just finished one which has a floor covered with a new asphalt-like preparation which is poured on, hardens, and can be scrubbed or polished till it resembles ebony. The woodwork and walls are black, with a ceiling of gold. The mirror is of black glass—quite a new idea, that—and in the centre of the room is a tub of black marble."

WOMAN INVENTED DETACHABLE COLLAR

Mrs. Montague Made a Separate Collar to Save Washing and Ironing

The detachable collar now worn by men the world round was the invention of a thrifty housewife 88 years ago. It is now certain that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the maker of the first detachable linen collar. Mr. Montague was engaged in the manufacture of fine shoes for women. He was a large man, very particular in matters of dress, and in those days before the invention of the sewing machine and before great public laundries were established, the making, washing and ironing of the shirts formed quite an item in the work of the household. Mrs. Montagu was resourceful, and in endeavoring to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which could be fastened to the neckband of her husband's shirt and washed and ironed separately. Before this time, when the collar was soiled, the whole shirt had to be washed, but by this device two or three collars might be used to one shirt. Acting upon the idea which had come to her, Mrs. Montagu went to the patch bag, selected a strip of white linen, which she cut and shaped to fit the neckband of her husband's shirt, sewed it, turned it inside out, and attached a narrow string of braid at either end to tie about the neck. This was the original string collar.

Mr. Montagu was delighted with the idea, and was proud of his new acquisition, which he displayed to his friends. Almost immediately requests came to Mrs. Montague from friends and neighbors to make separate detachable collars for them, and as she afterward stated, "the available material in the patch bag was soon exhausted, and I actually invested in a yard of linen." Being unable to cope with the increasing demand for the new creation, she was compelled to hire two or three women to sew the collars which she cut out. A sister of Mrs. Montague washed and ironed the collars. It was an easy step to adapt them to women's wear.

Thus, through the resourcefulness of a woman the modern detachable collar was evolved.

THE ALPINE CLUB

Many Women Members Make Good Climbers

Every summer some fifty or sixty men and women who are members of the Alpine Club of Canada camp and climb for two weeks among the peaks, passes, and glaciers of the Rocky Mountains. The Alpine Club has made some good climbers out of the brave woman-stuff in its ranks.

Some outstanding lady climbers are: Miss De Beck, Vancouver; Miss Fowler, Calgary; Mrs. MacCarthy, Wilmer; Miss Broadbent, Vancouver; and Mrs. Simons, Toronto. Miss Broadbent received her training in Switzerland. As Miss Normart, of Philadelphia, Mrs. Simons proved a climber of strength and considerable skill. Her husband thinks that, given favorable conditions, she could win to the high-top of Mt. Robson and back again. Mrs. MacCarthy and her husband, are New York people who settled on a farm in the Upper Columbia Valley near Wilmer. They are both excellently experienced in wilderness life. As Borrow would define it, they are the true children of the open air. And for a number of years they have been camping and climbing in the Rockies and Selkirks. Mrs. MacCarthy has advanced to the stage where she can take the lead on a rope over the glaciers. And she has even had first place on a rope up some of the mountains. Many times she has been "endman," which means "leader," when coming down again. Miss De Beck is the only other lady who has taken the lead on a rope. She has tremendous endurance.

Treating New Floors

A new floor should receive two coats of a mixture of equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine, with enough Japan drier to make it harden quickly. If the floor has cracks or uneven places anywhere in the open pores of the wood, these should be filled in with some sort of a "filler" of which there are many on the market. The mixture of turpentine with the oil causes the oil to soak much more deeply into the wood, and, by putting on two coats, with the help of the Japan drier, gives a smooth, well-filled finish which will take the wax polish very nicely.

Caring for the Gas Stove

Wash the burners of the gas stove systematically. If the burners are at all clogged with food stuffs or dust, one will not get the maximum of heat from the gas consumed, and the process of cooking will be considerably lengthened.

CLUB PRESIDENTS AND THEIR DUTIES

Some Hints For Women Who Have to Preside at Meetings

Some hints for the government of the president of a club—her self-government—which are of interest to any woman who is likely at any time to have to preside over a meeting, are given in the Woman Citizen as follows:

A president should rise when addressing the club, to state a motion, and to take a vote, to introduce anyone, and to offer a recommendation. During a discussion she should remain seated, for always, if she stands, it appears to hurry anyone who is taking part in a program or debate. She should avoid bobbing up and down. Better break a rule and remain seated than rise too often.

A president should never use the pronoun "I." She should refer to herself as "your president," "your presiding officer," or "the president of the ——club" (naming the organization). She should refer to herself even in this way only when it is unavoidable, and she should refer to the club instead whenever possible. She should of all things, be deliberate. Never rush. She must be calm, for she can never keep a meeting in order if she is herself in disorder. She should be prompt and businesslike. She should protect the club from the bores, and when the time arrives for adjournment she should say so, and if the club wishes to vote a longer session that is its pleasure.

A club president does not look dignified if she stands and taps and taps her table with her gavel to keep order. She should bring down the gavel as though she knew it was the symbol of the club's authority, gently and firmly, and if its mandates are not obeyed instantly she should use as much force as is required to attract attention.

There is one reward that all presidents are sure of, if they do all things the best they may—they learn a lot and they can go backward. They will always realize their development and that is a good bit in this world. After a couple of terms as president a member is just ready to enter upon her duties as a member of the organization. She has had the proper training and she is now ready to be a member.

LET IN THE SUNLIGHT

The Sun's Rays Will Keep the House Sanitary

Sunlight is one of the best family physicians, a doctor tells us. There should be sunshine sometime in the day in every room in the house.

Sunlight is the best cleanser the housewife can employ. Lack of sunshine-cleanliness produces house odors which though not always harmful are not pleasant. The quick remedy for these is a good sunning. Washing can only be done at intervals. Sunning is an easy daily process.

Sunlight is the best means of keeping bedding sweet. It will freshen books which have been packed away in damp places. It will make the mop stick and the dish cloth sanitary. It is one of Nature's chief aids to health.

If there must be dark rooms see that the kitchen and the bed rooms are not among them. The one is the center of the households' food supply. The other should keep fresh in spite of all the impurities given off by the body while sleeping.

The Useful Fireless Cooker

Experience alone will enable the housewife to make the greatest use of her fireless cooker. Directions are given with the utensil at the time of its purchase, and should be thoroughly mastered before beginning experiments; but even the most explicit of time-tables will not detail the exact length of time needed to turn out a perfect cake or roast. Such knowledge can only come from experience. Hurry is out of the question; but in the preparation of practically all foods requiring long and gentle cooking the fireless cooker is a wonder worker. Not only is the cost of fuel reduced to a minimum, but the food so cooked gains very highly both in quality and digestibility.

Sweet Cucumber Pickles

Lay small cucumbers in brine three days, then drain and lay in fresh water a day. Line a kettle with grape leaves and arrange the cucumbers in it in layers, scattering a pinch of alum over each layer. Cover with cold water and three layers of leaves. Fit a lid on the kettle and steam the pickles (without letting them boil) over a slow fire six hours. Drain the cucumbers, throw into cold water and when they are firm pack in jars. Fill the jars with boiling vinegar seasoned with a cupful of sugar to each quart, eight whole cloves, eight black peppers, six allspice and six blades of mace. Seal at once. They will be fit for use in three months.

THEY LIKE FARM LIFE

Titled Farmer Not Disappointed With Canadian Venture

Two members of the English nobility who are interested in farming in Canada and like it are Lord Somers and Mr. Clement Leveson Gower. Lord Somers is the present representative of an ancient title, and for over a year has been on his farm near Toronto.

"Quite up to expectations," said Lord Somers, when interviewed while passing through Montreal. "I like the life in Canada very much, and my venture promises to be successful. It is all I hoped for."

Mr. Clement Leveson Gower is a relative of the Duke of Sutherland, who has vast interests in British Columbia, and, like the Duke, is interested in the colonization and agricultural development there. Mr. Gower is a man of fine physique, and had a high reputation as a cricketer in the old country.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SALUTE BY WOMEN

French Ladies Want to Recognize Regimental Colors

The latest feminist movement is from France, where women are demanding, and in most cases taking, the right to salute the colors of a regiment as men salute them.

Of course, a civilian or other person in plain clothes should not salute the colors, but take off his hat to them, the salute being for those who wear official uniform. Obviously, however, a woman cannot be expected to take off her hat. A mere bow, say the leaders of the movement, is not sufficiently noticeable as a mark of respect, while a curtsey, though correct, is not always to be performed conveniently in a crowd.

Therefore, say the ladies of France, we will salute whenever men do. And why not?

Britain's Royal ladies always make a pronounced bow when driving past the colors of troops lining the streets, but a salute might be more convenient and prettier.

HAD TO RELY ON HIMSELF

None Supported the Young Man Who Proved He Lacked Self-Reliance.

There was once a young man who felt that he needed help. When he was poor in spirit and saw that he must needs prove himself he comforted himself by saying: "This is my own town and here are my neighbors and acquaintances. Their good will must bear me up."

And he leaned on them, but they were as a broken reed under him. They did not support him, writes Marguerite O. B. Wilkinson in the Craftsman. Then he said: "I will go to my best friend, who is a very powerful man. Surely he will carry me through."

But his best friend gave him only sympathy, and it was easy to see that by the very giving of that sympathy doubt was augmented. And the young man called his best friend a traitor and left him, for he could not win his support. And then the young man said: "I will go to those of my own blood, my family, and they will be my strong staff on which to lean. Surely they will not leave me in the lurch."

But though his family offered him much advice and a little money, they did not support him, nor did they encourage him. And he left them sadly. And, finally, because he could think of no one else who would be likely to help him, he sought out the Sage Who Never Slumbers and told his tale disconsolately. And he did everything that could be done for the young man, for he said:

"None will bear you up or carry you thought because you are not sufficient for yourself. Why should they have confidence in you when you have more confidence in them than in yourself? What else have you but yourself to guarantee your undertakings? Rely on your own strength, support yourself!"

A COAL MINER'S LUCK

He Won the $250,000 Prize in Hungarian State Lottery.

Albert Billingham, a miner, of Old Hill, Staffordshire, says he will go down the mine no more. He has no occasion to, for he was lucky enough to win $250,000 in a Hungarian State lottery.

Billingham left Old Hill about three years ago to take up the position of assistant foreman in the Namdang Mine, Margherita, Upper Assam, and while there he was persuaded to enter a Government lottery under the auspices of the Benke Bank, Buda-Pest. At the time he hardly understood the regulations, and, though he took the ticket, he thought no more about the lottery.

Three days before Mr. Billingham left India for home he received a letter from the promoters of the lottery giving a list of the prize-winners, from which he found that his number, 168,281, was the winner of prize money and a bonus which is roughly estimated at [illegible]. While on his way home, Billingham communicated with the Benke Bank, requesting that the money should be forwarded to him at Old Hill.

Before leaving for India Billingham was employed as a miner at No. 20 Colliery, Cradley Heath. He is very reluctant to answer questions as to what he intends to do with the money, but on one point he is very emphatic, that he will not again risk his life in a coal mine.

NEEDED A WOMAN

When She Came Business Picked Up and He Decided She Should Remain.

BY MILDRED CAROLINE GOODRICH.

"Business is bad, very bad," said John Moore to a passing townsman, and struck a still more dejected attitude in the doorway of his little store. He posed there, staring gloomily out into the fast darkening street, thinking how very bad was business, indeed, and wondering why he had ever brought his little stock of dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes and notions to Riverton.

"I would go to a real live, wide-awake town," he ruminated, "and here I am—trade dull, stock dead, and I don't seem to make many friends. Heigh ho! I suppose being a crusty old bachelor keeps away the ladies' trade. As to others, maybe I'm too slow and old-fashioned. Guess I'll close up. Hello!"

Starting to pull up the awning, the storekeeper's foot touched a moving human object crouched back in the hallway side entrance to the building.

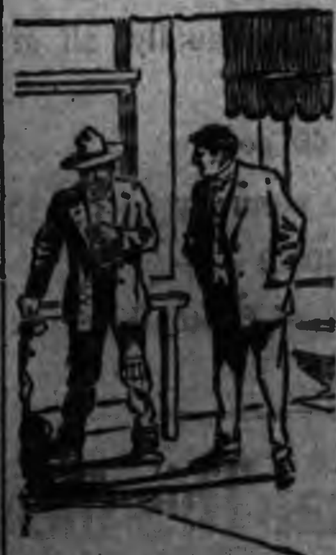
"Here, wake up!" called out John, with a frown. "What you doing there, anyway?"

"I'm not asleep," responded the faint, quavering voice; "and I'm here because I'm too sick and weak to go any further."

The speaker got to his feet with a painful effort. As he came more fully into view John regarded him closely.

"Oh, I see," he said, rather distastefully; "you are the man who was here a month ago, and got in trouble with a riotous crowd down at the tavern."

"That was me," assented the tramp, for such he seemed. "I was arrested. I hoped it was forgotten, for I came back here this morning to find work. I found out that people do remember. No one would employ me. Heartsick and footsore, I crept in here to rest—maybe to die. I don't know, for I feel pretty bad," and the poor fellow's eyes filled with tears.



"What Do You Want?"

"What do you want?" inquired John, a trifle harshly; "money, I suppose, to buy liquor."

The tramp reached into his pocket, drew out a folded paper and opened it so that his challenger could see what it was.

"A temperance pledge, eh?" remarked John, almost contemptuously. "And your name is Lemuel Price?"

"Yes, sir. I'm through with all that. I've been through with it for over a week. I've done it because I'd got low enough to beg hard earned wages from my motherless daughter.

"If stopping short is going to kill me, all right—at least I'll die sober."

The man was shivering as he spoke. There was a feverish flush to his wan face. He looked hungry. John Moore believed his story.

"See here," he said; "if it's a bed and something to eat, come with me."

When John had closed the store he led his pensioner to the neat suite of rooms he occupied behind the store. It seemed to brighten up the place to have company, even poor but grateful company, as Price was.

It was as a new man that the latter entered on the next day. John had fed him on nutritious soup and gruels, he had given him a comfortable bed. Out of his stock he selected a neat, seasonable suit of clothes, and the de-tramp went out on the street, clean-shaven and encouraged, to again look for work.

"If you don't make it," said John, "come back, and I'll give you board and lodging for helping around the store until you get something better to do."

Price reported that afternoon. He had found a chance to work as a teamster, he said, but, he added, he had decided first to submit a proposition to the storekeeper.

"All right, what is it?" asked John in his usual crisp, businesslike way.

"Well," replied Price, "I don't want you to be offended, but I've been trying to study out why you don't do more business than you do. You have got the stock. Other stores are just rushing. Saturday's, especially, the trade is big. You haven't got your share."

"I have realized that for some time," said John, bitterly.

"Now, I've been thinking up matters for your good, because you have been so kind to me," continued Price, humbly but sincerely. "I amounted to something once. Had a business and but for drink would have succeeded. If you will let me do a little advertising for you, I'll guarantee results."

Slow-going John Moore was dubious, but finally he agreed to try the experiment. The next day Price cleaned up the show windows. The next he repainted the front of the store in attractive colors. After that he brought a big brass bell and secured it on a standard over the store doorway with a chain running to the inside of the store.

Early Friday morning a sign appeared above the bell reading: "Every twentieth purchase free—announced by this bell."

Just at noon the bell rang. The excited customer, a farmer, was informed that his purchase would be handed to him free of charge. As he left the store John came rushing back to Price.

"Say," he exclaimed, "you'll ruin me! Why, that was a twelve-dollar overcoat!"

"Never mind," replied Price, confidently. "The average will come out right."

This proved to be true. Curious people came in, making only small purchases. The news got around town. The crowd kept up till midnight. Tired out, but elated, John reckoned up the gains of the day. Counting in the presents given, he was over fifty dollars to the good.

The next week Price had a new scheme, the distribution of a free paper cap to children, advertising the store. The rush kept up.

"Mr. Moore," said Price one evening, "the night business is better than the day. That is because you don't get the trade of the ladies. I've a new suggestion to make. You need a woman behind that dry goods counter. Let me send for my daughter, Martha. We can use the two empty rooms upstairs, and you needn't pay either of us a cent of salary unless we earn it."

So this came about. The result was magical. Martha Price, bright, modest, obliging, brought in the female customers in groups. The pleased old bachelor began to humanize himself with pleasant words instead of frowns. Fortune smiled upon him. In turn he smiled upon Martha.

"It's no use denying it, Price," he said to her father one day, "you two have managed to transform a crusty, self-opinionated, behind-the-times, crusty old bachelor into a real human being. As to you, I'm proud of you."

"Some good in the world after all, am I?" responded Price. "I'm so glad and Martha is happy as the day is long."

John Moore did some deep thinking the rest of that day. In the early evening, when Price was eating his supper, he went over to the counter where his daughter stood.

"Martha," he said, "I'm going to tell you something that I never told any other woman. Having had no experience, I must be rather plain and blunt."

"Yes?" murmured Martha. Her color heightened.

"I love you, and I want you to be my wife. Of course, a crusty old bachelor—"

"Don't call my father's best friend hard names," interrupted Martha sweetly. "I am only a poor girl, but if true love and devotion will satisfy you—"

Then it was his turn to interrupt—with a kiss.

A VERSATILE ARTIST

Herkomer is Also a Lecturer, Composer, Architect and Actor

Sir Hubert von Herkomer, who painted the portrait of Lord Morley for presentation to the Manchester University, is one of the most remarkable, as well as the most popular, men in the world of art. As a teacher he is almost unrivalled; as an etcher—an art self-taught in his case—he has won high praise; as a lecturer he has been extremely successful; as a composer of music he is, in the opinion of Herr Richter, "never commonplace, and nearly always original." The professor is also an architect, an actor, and a designer of new and remarkable stage effects. His picturesque house at Bushey was entirely designed by him. Professor Herkomer sold his first important picture, "After the Toil of the Day," for $2,500. His next big picture, "The Last Muster"—Chelsea pensioners at church—was sold for $6,150, and gained for the painter a French decoration.

Projectile's Gain of Speed

Experiments with improved instruments for measuring the velocity of projectiles have shown that the speed goes on increasing after the missile has left the mouth of the cannon. Leaving the muzzle with a velocity of 1,474 feet a second, a projectile has been observed to increase its speed to 1,600 feet a second within the first six feet. It is only after having travelled twenty-five yards that the projectile's velocity becomes reduced to the speed it had on leaving the muzzle. This is ascribed to the impulse of the expanding gas being felt for some distance beyond the cannon's mouth.

Misdirected Bravery

A farmer named Terry, of Ballymacart, Waterford, found a barrel on the sea beach which was filled with some liquid. He took the barrel home, and while examining its contents with a lighted match the liquid blazed up, setting fire to the room. The family at once rushed from the house, but the father, missing one child, made two gallant searches for the little one in the blazing building, sustaining dreadful burns all over the body. It afterwards transpired that the child who was missing was away from the house at the time.

Vigorous Health Restored To Run-Down Woman

SEEMED TO HAVE LOST ALL AMBITION, WAS PALE AND ANAEMIC

Made Wonderful Recovery When Dr. Hamilton's Pills Were Used.

"I was never actually sick," writes Mrs. Norman La Pierre, wife of a well known resident of Lebanione, "yet I never could get strong like other women. I ate well enough, but somehow rich and red blood I could never make. When I married I took great pride in my housekeeping, but it kept me tired all the time. Mrs. Lochness, my neighbor, looked well — she told me her health had been made up by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I only thought of pills as a physic, but now I know that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are more, for they strengthened my stomach, liver and kidneys—made me stouter and stronger, gave me such color in my cheeks as I never had before. I sincerely believe Dr. Hamilton's Pills should be used by every woman—that's why I write this letter."

No medicine invigorates and renews health and spirits like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Partridge Season Open.

Partridge shooting became legal yesterday. Quite a number of local sportsmen took to the tall timbers after those elusive birds. Why Pavements are Chipped.

The Times has been asked several times lately why the edges of the concrete pavements are being chipped off. In response to an enquiry made of one of the city engineer's staff yesterday, it was ascertained that this seeming piece of vandalism is pursued that the concrete work in connection with the new street pavement gutters may have a greater binding power than would be possible to the smooth sides of the pavements.

Local Man Injured, Now Home.

Ormond Cavanagh, son of Mrs. Cavanagh, London street, city, was badly hurt last week while practicing rugby with the team of the Woodstock College, which institution he has been attending since the opening of the season. In eluding a tackle, he broke the ankle bone. He was confined to the hospital for a week and has returned to his home here to recuperate.

Canadian Club.

The Canadian Club of Peterborough will hold its first annual meeting of the season 1913-1914, this evening in the Y.M.C.A. As has been previously intimated the speaker and guests of the evening is Mr. Charles McCullough of Hamilton, honorary president of the Association of Canadian Clubs. His subject is "Twenty-One Years of the Canadian Club Movement."

Doing Some Good.

Children can't run in bare feet any longer and must be shod. Other deserving cases must be looked after. You supply goods or money, and the Salvation Army will do the rest. Send it along right away—Ring 440.

Case Settled Out of Court.

The case of John Swanston, East City, vs. the Peterborough Canoe Company, has been settled out of court. The case constituted an action for damages to the amount of $2,000 against the Peterborough Canoe Company. It will be remembered that the plaintiff lost the sight of the left eye as the alleged result of negligence on the part of the company, by a needle entering his eye.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted on behalf of the plaintiff and Mr. D. O'Connell for the defendants.

A Strange Local Fleet.

A Times representative had occasion to pass "Burnham's Point" yesterday afternoon. Did you, gentle reader, ever size up the fleet of various kind of craft that line the shore near the Peterborough Lumber Co's mill? The boats there are used as individual ferries to convey workmen from the Peterborough shore to the point. They include boats and punts that might be direct descendants of the life boat used on Noah's Ark to a sample of Cleopatra's barge, whereon she lay making goo-goo eyes at Caesar.

Turtle Doves Turned.

It would seem that all marriages do not culminate in a continued series of "bread and cheese and kisses." This exception seems to have been the fate of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kearns of this city. Discord seems to have stalked rampant between the couple. Such at any rate is the story Mrs. Kearns told at yesterday's session of the High Court before Mr. Justice Middleton. She was plaintiff in a suit for alimony with her husband. They were married in Rochester, on Nov. 15th, 1910, before a Catholic priest. The net result was, by mutual agreement, an order for $100 per annum alimony, and costs.

They Held The Fort.

A former Peterborough man who is now engaged in a responsible position with a Toronto manufacturing firm, is spending a few days in the city. Talking with a Times representative yesterday this former local citizen spoke somewhat thusly: "You remember when the Scott Act was in force here? Well, one day I learned that a subpoena was out for men and two of my friends. I was then building a house on Simcoe Street. We got a supply of provisions in the attic and adjourned to that part of the unfinished building. We nailed down the trap door. A cop walked up and down the street all day looking for me to enter the building. When the case was over, we once more descended the ladder."

That C.P.R. Swing Bridge.

It is understood that work on the western section of the new C.P.R. bridge which crosses the Otonabee, will be indefinitely suspended. This is taken to mean that the present plans will be altered so as to provide for the construction of a swing bridge and thereby facilitate navigation on the Otonabee river. The eastern section of the bridge will be rushed through to completion. In the above connection it might be noted that a C.P.R. official informed The Times that if a swing bridge is placed the Dominion Government will have to pay for installation of the same as well as for its maintenance.

SALE OF CHILDREN

On Monday evening next, the local Salvation Army, with their proverbial enterprise, will inaugurate a new departure in helping along the friends of that most estimable institution. They will hold a sale of children, some 20 in number. The children are all guaranteed sound in mind and limb. It must not be inferred, by this sale, that the army is encouraging the methods followed previous to 1861 in the Southern States or practising white slavery. Still the children are to be sold. Monday night [illegible] how and why.

English [illegible] radial to [illegible] Stratford [illegible]

MOTHER! IS CHILD'S STOMACH SOUR, SICK?

If tongue is coated, or if cross, feverish, constipated give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mother can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Industrial Questions.

Mr. J. E. Kelso, President of the Kelso Laundry Co., Rochester, and President of the New York State Launderers' Association, gave the City's Manufacturers' Committee much valued information last night, as to how Rochester handles its industrial questions. He was introduced to the committee by Dr. Middleton, of East City, and his address included an outline of Rochester's policy in encouraging new industries.

Miner Gets a Month.

At yesterday's police court, William Wright was charged with having assaulted C.P.R. Special officer Weller whilst the latter was in pursuit of his duty. This is an indictable offence to be tried by the Magistrate. Officer Weller said at 10.15 he saw the prisoner stretched out asleep in the waiting room. He told prisoner he would have to produce a ticket or get out. The prisoner struck him in the face, threw him down and kicked him. He then got the handcuffs on Wright. Wright in the witness box said he was lying down in the waiting room. He comes from Queensboro, Ont. He is a miner by trade and was on his way from Eorwood. He did not know Weller was a constable. Weller did not tell him he was a detective. He had taken no drink in Peterborough. He denied kicking Weller. The prisoner was given one month in Castle Nesbitt.

A local citizen remarked yesterday, "If a mixing of chemicals caused the Volturno disaster, by jink, it must have been the mixings of drinks last night that cause this terribly heated head of mine!"

His honor Justice Middleton seems the most "human" judge Peterborough has seen for years. In fact his actions indicate that he is a man as well as a judge.

One query that is bothering the mind of local residents is how high the local coal coalition will boost the price of that commodity during the coming winter?

MUSIC and DRAMA

NINE PERFORMANCES

The announcement of the coming engagement to the Grand Opera House, for nine performances — 6 nights and 3 matinees, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, commencing Monday, Oct. 20, of May A. Bell Marks, supporting R. W. Marks, manager and proprietor Marks Bros. No. 1 Dramatic Company which opens with matinee Monday, Thanksgiving Day, will be appreciated by all the theatre goers as they will receive an attraction that is run on entirely different plan than the general line of those attractions. It is Mr. Marks efforts to elevate his attraction so as it will out-class all others and command the dignity and sphere of the dollar attraction and give his patrons a variety of productions that are so costly in mounting and costuming and settings that others dare not venture to follows in his stage which will make him the leader and be classed in a field by himself.

In organization, May A. Bell Marks was not satisfied to depend upon the word of man or woman, agent or manager, but devoted the summer in visiting all the principal cities; and there securing her supporting cast which she now has and which is one that can be depended upon as being the best that money can obtain. Mr. R. W. Marks also devoted much of his time in securing his plays and out of hundreds of manuscripts from which he had to select from he would only take those on a contract that would be absolutely under his control for a season, and in this way he knew that he had property that no others would present to his patrons.

Mr. Marks is somewhat of a crank on producing, as he is a great believer in exactness and gives particular attention to every effect from the biggest sensation to the most minute detail. In costuming there is not the smallest ribbon, flag or emblem that is not perfect and in all his accessories are more complete than an original production.

The plays that will be seen during the engagement will be sensational comedy-drama, a melodrama of intense interest, a story of city life, and a romantic drama. In all these plays May A. Bell Marks will be seen to great advantage as well as her supporting cast having equally as good chances. Dancing, singing, musical numbers, which are numerous, are nightly changed and interspersed during the action of the plays.

Seats on sale Friday at Box office. Seats reserved for matinee Monday.

THE TRENT WATERWAY NAVIGATION NOTES

Members of the Dominion Parliament Taking Deep Interest in the Conservation of Water in Lakes —All Dams Should be of Concrete.

Peterborough, Oct. 13.—Navigation was closed at Kirkfield Lift Lock to-night. The locks have been laid up for the winter. The dredge "Fenelon" is moving to-night from Balsover, on the Balsam Lake-Lake Simcoe Division to Lake Couchiching, where she will dredge until the end of the season. The tug "J. B. McColl" takes the dredge and dump scows across Lake Simcoe. The tug "Bob Hall" with a scow left to-day on her last trip to Kirkfield Lift Lock. She will take up a load of timber and bring down a load of cordwood. The tug "Bessie Butler" returned from Rice Lake last night, having finished buoying out at that lake. When down there they buoyed out the channel leading up to the new wharf at Keene. This is something the Keene people will appreciate very much, as they have been asking for that channel to be buoyed out for years. The tug "Harwood" left Kirkfield Lift Lock to-day for Beaverton with a scow for a load of coal to bring back to the lift lock.

Lakefield Dam.

The men under Mr. Wade are making good progress in repairing and putting Lakefield Dam in first-class condition. They will have it finished in about ten days, and the dam will be safe for at least five years.

Reservoir Waters.

The men under Mr. R. Miller, are making good progress repairing the dams at Squaw River. The reservoir dam at Bob Lake, County Haliburton, has been rebuilt this fall and Little Bob dam repaired. The dam at Kennisis Lake has been rebuilt. The work is finished.

While the weather for doing outside work this fall has been ideal and the work has progressed rapidly, it has been one of the driest seasons in fourteen years, and the amount of work that has been done up dams conserving the waters north during the past few years, particularly the past two years, has been of great benefit to navigation, lumbermen and power users. Certainly if these dams had not have been built the power users at this time would have been out of business. The work that is yet to be done in that north country, if the power companies wish to increase their power, or even maintain what power they have during the dry seasons like this one, will be much greater than what has been done in the past for the old wooden dams in that north country, which were built fifteen or twenty years ago, are beginning to decay and must be replaced with concrete dams.

These dams were originally built by the Ontario Government, and some six years ago were handed over by the Ontario Government to the Dominion Government, on the agreement that the Dominion Government would maintain them for the benefit of the lumbermen and navigation.

The bush fires this season, which have destroyed a number of old wooden dams in the north country, show the advisability that in future all dams, that possibly can be, should be built of concrete. It is the only protection against fire.

The members of the Dominion Parliament along this Trent system are taking a deep interest in the conservation of the waters, and the question of the ownership of surplus water for power purposes is brought forward now, whether the surplus water belongs to the Dominion Government or to the Ontario Government. This question will be decided no doubt, by the courts, and if the decision is in favor of the Dominion Government, the conservation of these waters will be pushed vigorously; and if the surplus water belongs to the Ontario Government, it will be controlled by the Hydro-Electric, who will certainly have all these dams in the north country built and the water conserved as soon as possible.

The regular minimum flow of the Otonabee River should be at least one hundred and thirty-five cubic feet (135,000 cu. ft.) per minute, and it is no dream to state that for very small expenditure on the back waters this minimum flow can be obtained.

THE NEWEST BATTLESHIP TO NOW BURN OIL: TESTS WILL THEN DECIDE NAVAL POLICY

"Queen Elizabeth" Launched is Heaviest Vessel Afloat From a British Naval Dockyard

Portsmouth, Eng., Oct. 16.—A novelty in the way of battleships, the Queen Elizabeth, carrying an immense armament and using oil instead of coal for her motive power, was launched at the Royal navy yards here to-day for the British navy.

The new vessel, whose keel was laid on Oct. 21, 1912, is of entirely fresh type and the details of her construction have been kept secret.

It is generally believed, however, that her armament is to consist of ten 15-inch guns mounted in pairs in barbettes, while her secondary armament of 4-inch or 6-inch guns is also to be placed behind protective armor. This is a big advance over the armament of her predecessors.

Economy in Weight and Space.

Under ordinary circumstances, the carrying of such a big battery would imply a considerable increase in displacement, but this has been obviated by the utilization of oil fuel for the engines in place of coal. The substitution of oil tanks for coal bunkers means great economy in weight and space and in this way it has been possible to increase the offensive and defensive armament and at the same time keep the size and displacement of the warship within limits.

Should the oil fuel in the case of the Queen Elizabeth prove successful all large warships of the British navy will in future use it. The Queen Elizabeth therefore is somewhat of an experiment.

The new vessel was not quite a year on the building ways and will be ready for service in less than two years from the time her first keel plate was laid. Far more work was done on her before launching than is usually the case in battleships. Her launching weight was about 10,000 tons and she was the heaviest vessel ever sent afloat from a building slip in any of the British naval dock yards.

PRINCE ALEXANDER TO COMMAND HERE

London, Oct. 16.—It is expected today that Prince Alexander of Teck, a brother of the Queen, will command a Canadian Cavalry Brigade. I understand the suggestion is approved in higher circles. Prince Alexander, whose wife is Princess Alice of Albany, and is aged 39, is a Major of the 2nd Life Guards, late Captain of the Hussars and the Royal Horse Guards. He served with distinction in Matabeleland in 1896, was mentioned in despatches and got the medal for South Africa in 1899-1900; was mentioned in despatches and received the Queen's medal and five clasps, and the D.S.O. He engaged in the relief of Kimberley, was at Paardeberg, Poplar Grove, Dreifontein, the relief of Mafeking and Colesberg.

100 NURSES ARE NOW FOR ULSTER

Winnipeg, Oct 16.—After discussing the Ulster situation the Ladies Orange Benevolent Association decided to raise a corps of 100 fully equipped nurses to accompany the Winnipeg Orange Regiment, if it should be called to Ulster.

ULSTER WILL SURELY FIGHT

This is the Opinion of Mr. Henry Henderson, Who Recently Returned from a Visit to Ireland

Mr. Henry Henderson, of Norwich, Ont., who, with Mrs. Henderson, is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. A. W. [illegible], returned a short time ago from a visit to Ireland, where he spent several weeks enjoying himself. Mr. Henderson is one of Canada's "grand old men," who although up in years, is still young in all that goes to make life worth living. In June last he decided to pay the land of his birth another periodical visit, and accordingly packed his grip and started. He arrived in Ireland in due time, and was greeted everywhere by with words of welcome by his hosts of friends.

IRELAND IN A FERMENT

Mr. Henderson spent the most of his time in Ulster, and is in a position to speak authoratively of the condition in that locality regarding Home Rule.

"Lots of people who discuss Home Rule know as much about it as I know about the moon," said Mr. Henderson. "The fact is that Ulster is terribly in earnest, and should the government insist on passing the bill, blood is sure to flow. On the 12th of July, I happened to be in Belfast, and I saw the biggest possession of Orangemen that probably ever took place in the history of the world. There was said to be over 100,000 men in line—all drilled in military style. These men are said to be equipped with modern rifles, and are certainly in earnest. My opinion is that there will be no Home Rule, for the simple reason that all through England and Scotland men are arming to assist their friends in Ulster in their war against the measure. Do not misunderstand the situation: Ulster men do not want to fight, but I am persuaded they will never surrender. They are like the Quaker farmer who refused to raise his hand against any man, but who, when a burglar attempted to enter at his window, held a revolver at his breast and remarked, "If thee comes any further, friend, thee may do thyself harm."

ULSTER IS BITTER.

Sir Edward Carson said that never was there a time when Ireland had so much to lose or was so certain to lose it as the country must, if this bill was not resisted, for the moment Home Rule was established Ireland's financial credit, due entirely to English influence, would go.

THE "MINORITY" RULE

Mr. Henderson said that the Ulster men claim that as regards the cry against Ulster, that they want the minority to rule, is absurd, since Ulster men paid 70 per cent. of the taxation of all Ireland, and yet, it is claimed, had no more than five per cent. of the representation. They further claim that the Home Rule bill had been thrust through various stages by the influence of paid agitators, and Ulster men had never been allowed to have a glimpse of it beforehand. They firmly believed that Parliament in Dublin, with John Red-

RITUAL MURDER TRIAL UNCOVERS BRIBERY STORY

Kiev, Russia, Oct. 16.—Evidence was given to-day at the resumption of the trial of Mendel Beilis for the murder of the boy, Andrew Yushinsky, in 1911, by Vera Tcheberiak, the mother of the murdered boy's play fellow. She declared that the woman Malitsky, who occupied a room above that the Tcheberiaks, had denounced her owing to a quarrel during which Madame Malitsky was struck by Madame Tcheberiak.

The witness also recounted her relations with the journalist D. I. Brazul Brushkovsky, who, she said had told her that her husband would lose his position in the post office, unless the pair assisted in the discovery of the murderers.

Madame Tcheberiak swore that she was offered $25,000 to take the guilt on her own shoulders.

KING AND QUEEN'S FAREWELL TO GOVERNOR

London, Oct. 16.—Following the Royal wedding the King and Queen visited Clarence House and took leave of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught prior to their departure for Canada to-morrow. The King leaves for Newmarket to-day.

NOISE OF VIOLIN DROWNED SOUND OF FILING STEEL AND THE CONVICT ESCAPED

Probe Into Kingston Penitentiary Affairs Uncovers Strange Tale of Watchmen

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 16.—How a convict, through the friendly connivance of another inmate of the penitentiary had effected his escape from his cell in March, 1912, was described to-day to the Royal Commission by ex-Nightwatchman John A. Smith at the resumption of the investigation into Dr. J. W. Edward's charges against certain officials of Kingston Penitentiary held inside the penitentiary.

This escape, according to the witness was only "verbally" reported to the Minister of Justice.

Mr. Smith described in detail his visit to the cell of the escaped prisoner, one Baptiste Chartrand, in company with the Deputy Warden and of seeing a dummy stretched out on the cot. The prisoner had sawed through the bars of his window and descended to the ground by means of a rope made from his rug.

Caught Two Days Later

Thereafter the fugitive had secreted himself in the chimney of a nearby building in [illegible] position he was located two days later. The witness charged that the Deputy Warden's neglect was largely responsible for the prisoner's escape. The fact that a convict in an adjoining cell was given the privilege of playing a violin, according to the witness was helpful in effecting the escape.

"The other man could saw through the bars," he said, "while the violin was being played to drown the noise."

The witness had been suspended for this incident and he claimed that he was in no way responsible. He declared that the Deputy Warden's neglect in not inspecting the bars of the cell according to regulations was the main contributory factor in the escape being effected so easily.

Happier When Intoxicated.

The witness declared that he had smelt liquor on the breath of the Deputy Warden. On such occasions he said that official was always better tempered.

Examined by Mr. N. A. Stewart, K.C., counsel for the Commission, Deputy Warden O'Leary admitted that he made no report of the suspension of either Guards Smith, or McConville.

NOVA SCOTIAN TO SUCCEED LAURIER, HON. G. MURRAY NOW UP

Reorganization of Liberal Party Under Way Since Chateauguay Disaster

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—There is a widely circulated story in Ottawa to-day that the Liberals in the reorganization of their party which is now proposed, following the disastrous defeat in Chateauguay, have asked Hon. George Murray, Premier of Nova Scotia, to drop out of Provincial politics and out into the Federal arena as leader of the Liberals in Nova Scotia.

He will be chief lieutenant of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and will be successor when he retires.

The retirement will come as soon as Mr. Murray has secured a sufficient grasp of Federal politics. This is apparently the only solution of the present difficulties of the party, as it is frankly admitted that none of the present lieutenants in the House are of timbre sufficient to warrant their appointment as leader.

Mr. Fielding Not in Line.

It is pointed out that the decision of Hon. W. S. Fielding to return to the editorial chair means that he is through with active politics and in the future will exert whatever influence he may have with the party through the medium of editorial columns of the Montreal Telegraph. This leaves two men who are supposed to aspire to the Liberal leadership in Nova Scotia, A. K. McLean and E. M. Macdonald. The undisguised hostility of Mr. McLean towards the militant attitude of his party on the naval question is thought to have irreparably injured his chances in that direction, and the prospect of his defeat in Halifax next election practically eliminates him from the running.

Macdonald Hated in the West.

Mr. Macdonald on the other hand, while a good organizer, is not regarded by his confreres as the man to pronounce the final word for Liberalism in Nova Scotia, and because of his protectionist tendencies he is particularly distasteful to the low tariff and western wing of the party. Thus, it is argued that Mr. Murray is badly needed at the present juncture.

BRITAIN DEPENDS ON THE FRENCH FLEET

London, Oct. 16.—If some Liberal newspapers are well informed, the Government is considering the navy estimates for the coming year. "Unless there is a sudden or unexpected change in the Canadian political conditions", says the Daily Mail, "the three Canadian dreadnoughts cannot now be ready by the date when the Right Hon. Winston Churchill has declared they will be absolutely necessary for the world wide defence of the British Empire. At the same time the enormous additional program of Germany's Mediterranean allies has passed beyond the region of prophecy to the land of fact. The British Government is now, though without openly admitting the fact, trusting to the French navy for defence of all the Mediterranean interests [illegible] the [illegible], but the point has been reached where the whole strength of the French navy will be required to that task. Assistance must be forthcoming from the British Navy, but ships to give that assistance cannot be spared from the North Sea, unless the British program is materially increased.

ARRIVAL OF ROYALTY AT QUEBEC INFORMAL

Ottawa, Ont. Oct. 16.—There will be no official reception for their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia upon their arrival at either Quebec or Ottawa.

This was officially announced today. Their arrival is purely an informal one. Their Royal Highnesses will arrive at Quebec on or about [illegible] [illegible]. Lieutenant-Colonel Farquhar, Military Secretary, gave out this announcement.

THERE IS BUT ONE LIGHT ON SMITH STREET BRIDGE AT PRESENT

"Looks as Though the City Was in the Hands of a Receiver," Remarked Ald. Green Last Night—New Lamps to be Put Up at Once

A joint meeting of the City's Fire, Water and Light Committee and the Property Committee met last night. Ald. Geo. Gillespie presided. There were also present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Buller, Langford, Duffus, Green, Anderson and Duncan.

The Mayor and Chairman were authorized to act in regard to arranging for an incandescent light at the head of Water street, and the transposing of a light in East City.

It was agreed that the Peterborough Light and Power Co. should not be charged for arc lamps not burning on moonlight nights. The company, under agreement with the city, is not committed to furnishing light on moonlight nights. For the past twelve months or so, however, the company has been doing so free, consequently there can be no claim against them for lamps out during such periods.

But One Light on Smith Street Bridge.

Ald. Green said that the Smith street bridge is in a shameful condition for want of light; to any person coming across the bridge it looks as though the city was in the hands of a receiver; there is but one lamp and globe in condition to-day. The lamps on this bridge have been broken by boys as fast as they have been put on. It was agreed that the lamps shall be renewed at once.

Old-Time Health, Eating Grape-Nuts

"I had been sick for 10 years with dyspepsia and a lot of complications," wrote a Western woman.

"An operation was advised, change of climate was suggested, but no one seemed to know just what was the matter. I would had three days in the week and got so thin I weighed only 88 lbs. No food seemed to agree with me.

"I told my husband I was going to try some kind of predigested food to see if I could keep from this fatigued [illegible] hunger.

"Grape-Nuts and cream was the food I got and nothing has seemed to satisfy me like it. I never feel hungry, but have a natural appetite. Have had no nervous-spells since I began this food, and have taken no medicine.

"I have gained so much strength that I now do all my housework and feel well and strong. My weight has increased 8 lbs. in 8 weeks and I shall always eat Grape-Nuts as it is far "pleasanter than taking medicines." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

FLIM-FLAMMERS WORK OLD DODGE AND STILL AT LARGE

Slick Strangers Swindle Two Steamship Agents and Cigar Man—Made Other Calls and Got Little

Louis Gurofsky, $20.
Capt. Melville, $20
The Oak Cigar Store, $10.

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Above are proceeds, so far as known, of a few hours' operations on the part of two very bold flim-flam artists for whom the police are now scouring the city.

The men, who are described by their victims as an Englishman and a companion, with a Hebraic cast of countenance, were at work yesterday among steamship agents and places where English or foreign monies are exchanged.

At the Melville Agency.

Just at the noon hour they called at the Melville agency at Toronto and Adelaide streets and asked for the equivalent in English gold for a fifty dollar bill. The clerk called Mr. Hector Melville, who found that he had only £9 15s 6d in British exchange. The men accepted the remainder in Canadian money, but proceeded to haggle over the rate charged for exchange, finally deciding that they would take back their fifty dollar note. They then left the place.

Meanwhile Mr. Melville had retained the money in his hand, and it was not until he placed it on the counter to check over that he discovered he was four sovereigns short.

Capt. Melville, upon hearing of the incident, called up a number of other firms in the same line of business, and found that at least in one instance, that of Mr. Gurofsky, Queen street west, that he had been [illegible]. In Mr. Gurofsky's case the men had asked for Russian roubles, and in this case they got away with $20.

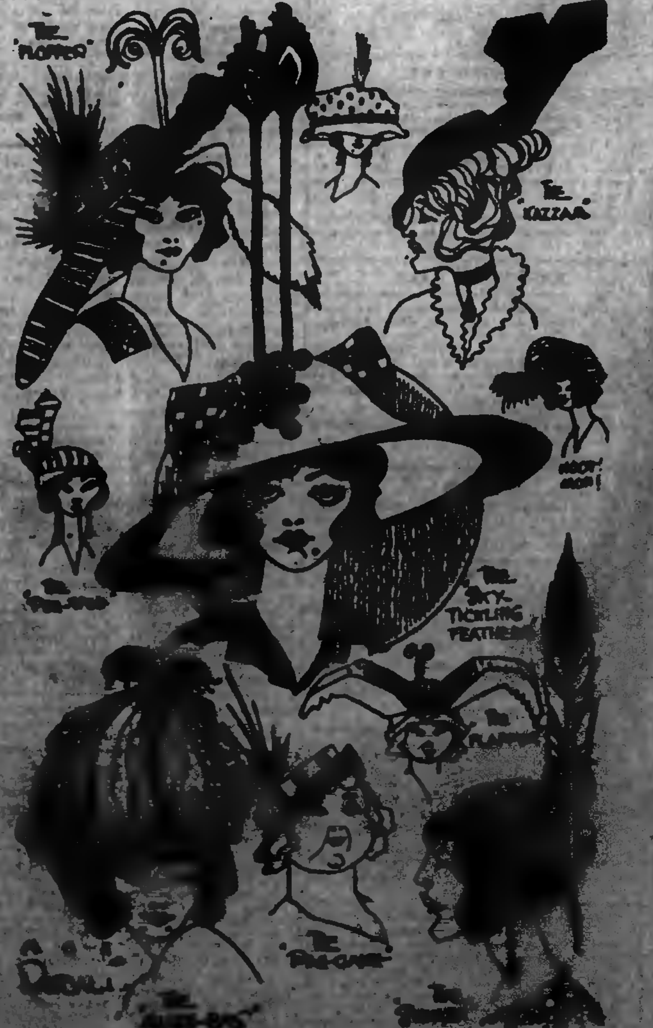
CANADIAN CLUB HOLDS ITS FIRST MEETING THIS FALL

Mr. McCullough of Hamilton, Founder of Canadian Clubs Gives an Interesting and Inspiring Address at the Y. M. C. A.



[illegible], you can always tell a woman by the [illegible] she wears; that's what the artist [illegible].

Last night the local branch of the Canadian Club held a session in the big bill ard room at the Y.M.C.A. In the absence of the active high officers, Past President Morris occupied the chair.

Mr. Holdsworth of the Y.M.C.A., asked a blessing.

Mr. Morris explained his position as chairman in the absence of the vice-presidents, who were out of town. He spoke briefly regarding his visit to Hamilton on Canadian Club business. The next annual meeting of the Canadian Clubs will be held in Vancouver. There will be special trains. The meeting will be early in November. He then introduced Mr. McCullough, "founder of Canadian Clubs."

Mr. McCullough, of Hamilton, said in part: He thanked the local club for asking him to be present. He has visited some of our local industries. He noted his visit to the Colonial Weaving Co. He took samples from the factory. He also spoke of Peterborough Canoe manufacturing.

He was here 18 years ago, the days of small things in Peterborough. He hopes that Peterborough will never develope the slum houses. It was 21 years ago from the coming December when Goldwin Smith issued his work on Canadian affairs. In that year, he and four others organized the Canadian Club. He discussed Goldwin Smith's character with the British Ambassador, Mr. Bryce in Washington. Mr. Bryce knew Mr. Smith at Oxford. The speaker did not agree with Mr. Smith's conception of Canadian manners, [illegible] from Goldwin Smith's book. Canada is not lacking Canadian character. He sees [illegible] in unity. Canada now presents a united people. Mr. Bryce says, we have made a success of confederation of our far lying provinces. Anyone who has visited Canada from sea to sea find there is a long string of Canadian Clubs looking towards the development of a national spirit. The speaker again denied statements made by Goldwin Smith, when he said that Nova Scotians and British Columbians deny their Canadianism.

TO INSIST THAT NO CREED PRIVILEGES GO

Peterborough Protestant Benevolent Association to Hold Meeting for Dominion Expansion.

The growth of what is known as the Protestant Benevolent Federation of Peterborough, since its inauguration has been phenomenal and it is likely to soon become one of the latent forces of the country. There is at present on foot a movement to organize a Dominion Council in connection with the Association. A meeting for this purpose will be held on the evening of the 23rd inst. One or more speakers from a distance will be present to address the meeting.

It might be out of place to mention that the local Association has over 1000 members and is increasing at a very rapid rate.

The objects and aims of the Association are, as indicated by its title, of a benevolent character and also to battle for equal rights as far as political matters are concerned. The Association concedes to non-protestants every advantage and privilege that they themselves possess. Their purpose is to consistently and persistently fight against special privileges to any creed or race.

Already strong Association are in process of organization in Toronto, Ottawa, St. Catharines and other places. It is understood that in Ottawa over 1000 members are already pledged, while in Toronto the Association will open with 10,000 members.

COMPANION CORPSE SECRETED FOR YEARS

Remarkable Story of an Aged Spinster Who Lived With Corpse of Her Friend

In the world of fiction as well as in fact the dread of being haunted by the dead has led to many a dramatic situation and many a strange sequel.

The quiet little market town of Wimborne, in Dorsetshire, provides the latest contribution to the history of romance in this respect, by supplying the remarkable story of an aged spinster who lived alone for nearly three years in a house, with the skeleton of her friend and companion.

More than thirty years ago Mary Kerley and Ellen Griffin were fellow servants in London, and they formed a friendship which endured till death. They resolved to save [illegible], with the object of taking a boarding-house. After years of economy they found themselves in the possession of £300, and ultimately took over a house at Paddington. Unfortunately, boarders did not prove so plentiful as was expected, and the venture ended in financial failure. The women, driven to despair, sold their furniture, paid what debts were owing with the proceeds and sought seclusion, in order to nurse their sorrows, in the quietude of Wimborne, the early home of Mary Kerley. Here they lived the life of the recluse, and were seldom seen out of doors. How they managed to exist was a mystery, for they were only known to do "little bits of dressmaking." They troubled no one, and nobody appeared to worry about them, the devoted old spinsters being shut up alone with their sorrows, brooding over the loss of their hard-earned savings, which they had hoped to devote to commercial advantage.

Some three years ago Miss Griffin, whose age was then seventy, became ill, and, although medicine was obtained, it was agreed between the two friends that no doctor should be called in. During the last days of her life Miss Griffin, in her delirium, harked back to the days of her childhood, when she spent many a happy hour on the banks of the river at Richmond, and appealed to her companion to promise that when she died her burial should not take place "anywhere, if not at Richmond."

"If you can't afford to bury me at Richmond," she said, "keep me as long as you live." At last the friends were separated by death, and Miss Kerley, unable to realize that she had lost her companion, slept in the same bed with the corpse for two nights. Days, weeks, and months passed away, and still the dead body was kept in the house.

The grim secret of the dwelling, situated in a terrace, adjoining Wimborne Railway Station, was revealed at the inquest as the outcome of a visit to the house of the local surveyor, under the Town Planning Act. The full story of the tragedy was related at the Wimborne Police Court, when Miss Kerley was charged with unlawfully failing to give notice to the coroner of the fact that a body on which an inquest ought to have been held was lying unburied.

Miss Kerley's signed depositions at the inquest were produced, in which she admitted being present when Miss Griffin died. She had slept in the house ever since, and her intention was to keep the remains till her own death, had they not been discovered by the surveyor.

When the magistrates' clerk was reading that it was the wish of Miss Griffin that she and the accused should be buried together, and that the dead woman would "come back and haunt" Kerley if she buried Miss Griffin in Wimborne, the accused wept.

The coroner expressed his own opinion that the skeleton was lying in a natural position, and had evidently been so since death—apparently a natural death, which must have taken place nearly three years ago.

Police-Sergeant Andrews said that Miss Kerley could not in any way have been benefited by concealing the death or the body.

The chairman (Sir Richard Glyn) informed Miss Kerley that she might have been sent for trial, but perhaps she hardly realized that at the time. There was evidently no idea of crime on her part, and she probably acted more in ignorance and, perhaps, superstition than anything else. It was neither the wish of the Bench nor the Home Office to punish her, and she would be discharged.

To give potatoes a flavor add half a teaspoonful of sugar, as well as salt, while boiling. This does not make them too sweet, but gives a delicious flavor.

To keep bread boards a beautiful color, rub them well with half a lemon; then wash them in cold water, and stand them in the wind or in the sun to dry.

Before using table oilcloth, paste at each corner on the wrong side a square of cotton. This prevents the corners from wearing out as soon as they otherwise would.

When cooking liver and bacon get a sour apple, slice it very finely, and add it to the gravy. This will impart a delicious flavor, which is a great improvement.

To remove smoke marks from ceilings, mix a thick paste of starch and water, and with a clean flannel spread it over the mark. Allow it to get thoroughly dry, then brush off with a soft brush, and the marks will have disappeared.

Flatirons become rusty if left in a damp place or if put away flat when warm. Rub them first with beeswax, then with dry, coarse salt, using a short hard brush. When heating irons it is wise to remove them from a lighted gas-ring after a few minutes have elapsed, and to wipe away the tiny specks of moisture which will be found to have formed.

Leather chairs often become greasy-looking where the arms and head rest on the leather. To remove these marks try linseed oil. Boil half a pint of oil and let it stand until nearly cold; then pour in half a pint of vinegar. Stir till it is well mixed, and bottle, when it is ready for use. Put a few drops on a flannel and polish with soft dusters. This will thoroughly renovate all leather.

In cases of emergency a kettle or saucepan can be heated over a candle by the following means: Stand two chairs (with rungs) fairly near together. Place a lighted candle on the floor between the two. Then lay a pair of fire-tongs across the rungs of the two chairs, and on the tongs place a small kettle or saucepan immediately over the candle. The water does not take long to boil.

STRANGE MARKET FOR ODD ARTICLES

One-Legged Men Can Buy a Pair of Shoes or One Sock in London

The things that can be purchased in London for two cents are beyond belief, and no matter what the article, it can be bought more cheaply than in the place where it was grown or made. Everything under the sun is on sale, even that rarest of commodities, the odd article that usually is sold in pairs—an odd glove, an odd sock or stocking, an odd boot or slipper—and new at that. The thing is not a cast-off; it has never been worn.

To enjoy this advantage to the full it is necessary to go to Old street, in the Parish of St. Luke's. There, under the very shadow of that church, lies the Market of the Odd. Numbers of its dealers sell stockings and gloves singly, and within its borders lies the Mecca of the one-legged, to which cripples make pilgrimages from near and far in quest of a single boot, shoe, or slipper. Externally only an ordinary commonplace shoe store, it is actually the national clearing house for odd boots and shoes, and as such is known to many of the one-legged not only of Great Britain, but of the dominions overseas.

In its basements are bins heaped with "singles" in strange juxtaposition. Slippers of all kinds—satin ball slippers, babies' slippers, nurses' slippers, carpet and leather slippers—are lumped together by the hundred. In another section lie a multitude of shoes of the most diverse kinds, from the cheap canvas article to the dressy variety, and mixed up with these specimens of every-day footwear may be seen surgical boots, mountaineering boots, sea boots, even boots to which none save the expert dare give a name. And of these strangely assorted articles, numbering in all some thousands, no two ever met before, or may, once they leave the dealer's, ever meet again.

Where Do They Come From

By what channels have they drifted here? Some have journeyed from shops where their fellows having been lost or destroyed they had lain undisturbed for years. Others represent salvage—portions of stock saved from fire. But the majority have arrived circuitously from commercial travelers' bags after undergoing critical inspection by many pairs of eyes, because they were alone in the world. Though samples are made in pairs, a "drummer" carries only one shoe or boot to show retailers, and consequently a "right" may be in one end of the country, while the companion "left" is traveling in the other. One of the two is liable to go astray, and when this happens the other is ultimately consigned to Old street.

They go—where do they not go? Since a single shoe can be bought at this place for about thirty-six cents, cripples living in all parts of England and the colonies come or send to this establishment for their footwear. They somehow discover the place, and then they stick to it year after year, many remaining loyal to the end of the chapter.

Not Cripples Only

But it is not only cripples who make pilgrimages to the Mecca of the one-legged. Londoners with the normal number of nether limbs frequently wend their way thither with a shoe, "right" or "left," divorced from its fellow by one of those curious mishaps that agitate the family circle. Sometimes a mother reaches the [illegible] at the smallest provocation, because of the way that babies have of kicking off their shoes, or explains that Tommy, after achieving the proud feat of coming home from school without missing a single puddle on the way, surreptitiously put his shoes close to the stove to dry, with disastrous results to one of them. In general the mate of a shoe can be found among the dealer's stock, but sometimes a month elapses before the wanted counterpart turns up. Once a year, moreover, there is a sale of "pairs" of "odds" when roughly matched pairs are made up and sold for trifling sums. A hard and fast rule at these sales is "no trying on."

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

There are some men who when they go "out on a lark" think that they can sing, but as a rule the police disagree with them.

Editors of country newspapers should post a notice that the "freedom of the press" demanded by the Canadian people doesn't mean that a newspaper should be taken for years without being paid for.

Persons who have been so unfortunate as to drop large wads of money in court proceedings will appreciate the tender sentiment of the following verse, worthy of the pen of Tennyson:

"In Hell there is a deep abyss,
So roaring hot the furnace us,
The Devil dare not enter it,
But keeps it for attorneys."

The suffragets in England are very shortsighted. A short time agi they burned down a new lunayic asylum, thus destroying one of their places of final refuge.

ENCOURAGING AGRICULTURE

The interests of the farmers are being carefully cherished by the Ottawa Government and the Hon. Martin Burrell as Minister of Agriculture is carrying out his plan of extending the scope of the Agricultural Department. The spending of the grant made during last session is receiving the attention of the heads of the department and announcement is made of the work.

Several small demonstration plants in different parts of the provinces will be constructed as an aid to poultry-keepers. Demonstration fruit orchards will also be established. The same methods will apply to dairying tobacco growing, the maple syrup industry and honey production.

The minister, in his new agricultural policy of introducing better methods, will follow the lines already laid, while assisting the farmer to produce better fruit and more honey, tobacco, etc. Reports are being received from farmers all over the country, who are keen on adopting the principles of the department.

In connection with the third part of the new agricultural policy, namely, to teach the rudiments in the public schools, the department announces special courses for normal school training. It is proposed to establish agricultural branches of instruction in connection with French-speaking normal schools, and it is also proposed to enlarge the the scope of domestic science schools by adding to them work in agriculture [illegible].

All section of the Dominion are receiving a fair share and the desire of the present government to assist the farmer by the introduction of modern methods will lay the foundation of future prosperity.

THE STRAIN THAT BREAKS

There is a melancholy page in the latest report made public by the census bureau in Washington the other say. In cold figures is verified the oft repeated charge that the present day industry with its terrific pressure is slicing off years from the life of the average worker. It is the strain of the city's life and industry (hat breaks man down.

The striking manner in which industrial cities cut down men's lives is shown by a study of the comparative number of deaths at various ages in industrial cities and in rural communities. In Chicago, for instance the number of thise who die between the ages of 35 and 54 is sixty-one per 1,000 persons. It is higher in New York and Boston. In the state of Indiana, on the other hand, the number of deaths per 1,000 people of the same ages is but thirty-nine. The figures are approximately the same for a,l big cities and for all rural communities.

The lesson is plain; if you want a "green old age," don't look for it in big cities, but in the small country town where the pace is not so fast. Unfortunately, however, the job all too frequently goes with the big city and the search goes with the big city and the search for bread crowds out all thought of a green old age until it is too late.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing [illegible] of Catarrhozone, Which Are Breathed to the Further Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs attacks the trouble at its source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailments thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches th deepest air-cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and in fact have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM HAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolutely permanent cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00 smaller size, 50c. at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

FARMERS OF CANADA ARE BEING ASSISTED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Hon. Martin Burrell's Good Seed Campaign Bearing Fruit in More Ways Than One

(Special to The Times)

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Since Hon. Martin Burrell has become Minister of Agriculture he has taken an especially active interest in the promotion of the seed branch of the Department. He had developed the work of improving the seed of the Dominion in many ways. Hon. Sidney Fisher, while Minister, always objected to co-operating with the provincial government in a good seed campaign. Mr. Burrell following out the general policy of the government of co-operating with the provincial administrations has arranged to give prizes for field crop competitions.

This work in the past year has doubled and prizes are given.

Encourage Production

The objects of these competitions is to offer encouragement to the production and use of good seed more adequate to the importance of the grain growing industry and to stimulate greater interest in field agriculture. Until recently this no special attempt had been made by agricultural societies to recognize by prizes the farmers' practices in respect to grain growing. The fall fairs and large exhibitions were not adapted to giving retognisition to growing seed grain. In many places, particularly in the west, the fairs were held at a time of year when grain of the season's growth was not threshed. Most of the prize money went to the live stock classes and the grain and seed exhibits were of comparatively little importance. The grain classes were largely filled by exhibitors who specially cleaned, or perhaps handpicked, the small quantity required and often showed the same grain year after year. Under these circumstances, to offer large prizes for grain would be to develop expertness in cleaning the quantity required for exhibit rather than to encourage growing clean crops for seed.

In the Field

The only way to arrive at the value of a crop for seed purposes is to examine it when growing in the field. As it is impracticable to bring the crops to a fair for competition, the next best thing is to take the competitions to the fields. This the field crop competitions have done and they have had a pronounced educational as well as commercial value.

The organization and management of the competitions was handed over to the provincial Departments of Agriculture last year, support from the Seed Branch being given in theform of subventions amountinge to two-thirds of the money paid out in prizes,-up to $50 for each of three kinds of crops in a competition held by one agricultural society. While the provincial Departments of Agriculture are responsible for organizing and judging the competitions, the Seed Branch district officers in Quebec, the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia are assisting in the work.

Better Seeds.

Through the provincial departments of education, Mr. Burrell has inaugurated a plan to encourage the using of better seeds and the education of children in noxious weeds. Samples of good seeds and noxious weeds are being sent to many high and technical schools throughout the Dominion.

Important Inquiry.

At present an important inquiry is being made by the seed branch into the quality of seed used by farmers all over Canada. So far no less than 2,657 tests of seeds from every province have been made. The tests so far go to show that only about one farmer in five in Canada uses good seed, a situation which Mr. Burrell is very anxious to improve.

This evening dress is of pale blue charmeuse made very scant with a short pointed train. The tunic is of white tulle embroidered with pearls. The round neck and very smart sleeves are particularly girlish. A wide band of the beaded tulle, which forms a belt reaching from the normal waist line up to the bust, is lined and bound with satin.

Syrup For Fruit Drinks

A simple syrup for sweetening any fruit drink is made by adding an equal quantity of sugar to boiling water and stirring until the sugar is dissolved. Then boil for ten minutes without stirring. Keep in a cool place in bottles or jars to use as occasion requires. This is more economical than stirring the sugar into the beverages as they are made.

Cleaning White Veils

To clean white veils, lay them in luke warm soap suds made with white soap. Let them soak an hour or two, then squeeze them softly and put them through clean suds in the same way. Rinse in warm water, then in cold, and pass through water stiffened with a little gum arabic or rice water.

Many Flowers Poisonous

Flowers of the jonquil, white hyacinth and snowdrop all possess a poisonous nature, the narcissus being also particularly deadly, so much, indeed, that to chew a small scrap of one of the bulbs may result fatally, while the juice of the leaves is an emetic. The berries of the yew have killed many persons, and it is known nowadays that it is not safe to eat many peach pips or cherry kernels at once. The lobelias are all dangerous. Lady's slipper poisons in the same manner as does poison ivy. The bulbs seem to be the most harmful. Lilies of the valley are also as much so. There is enough opium in red poppies to do mischief, and the autumn crocus, if the blossoms are chewed, causes vomiting and purging. The leaves and flowers of the oleander are deadly, and the bark of the catalpa tree is very mischievous; the water dropwort, when not in flower, resembles celery and is virulent.

Tomato Sandwiches

A delicious luncheon sandwich is made with tomatoes for a filling. Slice the tomato, spread generously with mayonnaise and slip between the slices of buttered bread just before serving.

A Simple Dessert

A simple and quickly made dessert is to pour a plain boiled custard, very cold, over fresh bananas, sliced peaches or oranges.

Such a Parliament, it is said, could never obtain the money to complete the Land Purchase Act and other advantage the country now enjoyed. The men of Belfast believe that the only thing that Home Rule parliament could do was to go down to Ulster and pick the Ulster man's pockets. Ulster men were largely men in whose veins was a mixture of Scotch, Irish and English blood, the kind that made the best soldiers, the bravest fighters in the world—and picking their pockets would be an awkward business for the National League.

CANADIAN CLUB'S FIRST MEETING

He addressed a meeting in Vancouver four years ago, "and I give it to you, the 600 present were Canadians!" Twenty-one years ago there was a drifting in Canada. There is however, now, a deep rooted love of Canada among Canadians. He spoke of the enthusiasm developed by the Northwest Rebellion. A tremendous wave of patriotism swept the country then. He briefly referred to the Dominion election of 1891. He did not express any political opinion, but a great wave of patriotism resulted after the froth of political strife was blown away. The Globe of 21 years ago said, the Canadian Club dinner held in Hamilton should foster a national spirit. The press had helped the club. There is no real difference between the Nationalist and Imperialist, as far as Canada is concerned. If the people of Canada strive for constitutional government, as they have since 1837 they will succeed. If Australia, New Zealand and Africa develops a kindred spirit, [illegible] have [illegible]. Lord Grey said that some of Canada [illegible] about a common table, for a common purpose in the Canadian Club, although they differ politically. He hopes to see such clubs organized throughout the Empire given to bring young Canadians who have gone to the United States [illegible]. If proper encouragement were given they would come back and make good. The late poet, Mr. Drummond dedicated his book to the Canadian Clubs, from which the speaker read an extract. He referred to the Stricklands of Lakefield and spoke of Mrs. Moody's "roughing it in the back woods of Canada." When in 1849 some of Montreal's leading men were considering union with the U.S., Mrs. Moody was writing a Canadian book foretelling Canada's great future. We should give all that is in us towards the upbuilding of Canada.

Chairman Morris then called on Canon Davidson, who spoke briefly, as a member of the Canadian Club, spoke of the splendid speech given by the guest of the evening and the good work done for Canada by the Canadian Clubs. He paid a strong tribute to the men and men who made the Canadian Clubs possible.

The Chairman referred to a Mr. Miner, president of the Boston Canadian Club who was president.

The meeting closed with God Save the King..

A Boon to Humanity

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste [illegible].

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1913.
To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.
975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from [illegible] of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment [illegible] enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the sceptic public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL, and help suffering humanity.

KITCHEN ECONOMY

If canned pears are insipid, drain off the juice and cover them instead with the juice of oranges well sugared.

A nice way to make use of cold boiled potatoes is to put them through the ricer, season well with butter and salt, form into cones and brown in the oven.

Variety may be given to hashes by seasoning them one day with a little onion, some chopped green peppers another, and curry powder the next.

Beef fat added to lard, in the proportion of one part to three of lard, will lessen the tendency of fried cakes to soak fat.

To serve extra mayonnaise with an individual salad use as a receptacle half a lemon skin from which the pulp has been removed and a slice cut off the end, so that it will stand upright.

For the simple home luncheon the ordinary pancake may do duty for dessert.

By placing a few lumps of loaf sugar in the oven, nearest the fire, when baking pastry, the top crusts will cook a lovely brown.

By wetting the spoon before using it, you will find the serving of jelly much more easily accomplished.

Add a sliced banana to the white of one egg and beat until stiff. The banana will entirely dissolve, and you will have a delicious substitute for whipped cream.

After chopping parsley very finely screw it up in the corner of a clean cloth, hold it for a few seconds under the cold water tap, and squeeze it as tightly as possible. Then shake it out on the cloth, and it will fall like a green powder. Unless it is done in this way, the parsley will be clogged together in little lumps.

When making a pie the juice from the fruit often soaks through the under crust and spoils it. This can be prevented by brushing the crust over with the white of an egg.

When making baked custard pour boiling milk on the beaten eggs. It will then bake beautifully firm.

HEALTHOGRAMS

When there is an epidemic of typhoid—No raw water, no raw milk, no raw vegetables, no raw fruit, no raw oysters—nothing raw should be taken.

Brown patches on face and neck are due to constipation or congestion of the liver. External applications are of no value. Proper treatment under care of the family physician should be taken for underlying conditions.

Air more than 70 per cent. saturated with moisture is very oppressive when it is hot and very chilling when it is cool. Air less than 50 per cent. saturated with moisture dries the skin, throat, nose and bronchial tubes and causes infection when the air contains dust and bacteria.

Books can carry typhoid germs if handled by the patient or nurse during illness. The tuberculosis bacillus can live in books for months. Books that have been in a sick room, if the disease of the patient is contagious, should be carefully fumigated before being sent elsewhere.

Acute inflammatory rheumatism is due to an infection which travels to the joint through the blood. It may enter through one of several places, but the usual place where it gets in is the tonsils.

Buttermilk, under proper conditions, will remain in a condition fit to drink about twenty-four hours longer than sweet milk.

It is easier to build right than to rebuild a faulty structure. Take care of the child's health. Give it its share of outdoors, of wholesome food and proper sleep. This treatment will make the average child a healthy grown-up with strong resistance to disease.

CAUSES OF COUGHS

First Find the Cause and Then Treat That

Coughs are indicators of a condition existing at some point of the body. They are the forerunners of trouble and, if heeded, often serve to flag the disease train before it gets going at a dangerous speed. There are many different causes for a cough!

A cough often accompanies the dropping of the uvula, which, in turn, indicates a debilitated general state of health.

A cough may come from the breathing of dust-filled or impure air.

A cough may indicate an affected lung or a wax-filled ear.

A cough may come from smoking or be the natural and harmless accompaniment of a cold.

Regulation of the digestive organs will usually clear up a stomach cough which is likely to be very hard and rough in sound. The old plan of "taking something for a cough" and the same thing for all kinds of a cough has nearly gone out of fashion. Now people sensibly look for the causes of the cough, differentiate them and supply the remedy to the cause, according to needs.

FORTUNE TO BE DIVIDED BETWEEN THREE PRINCESSES

The Late King Leopold's Three Daughters to Share Huge Sum—$7,500,00

Brussels despatches say there is reason to believe that, in compliance with the wish intimated by the President of the Court of Appeal in favor of an understanding being arrived at between the Belgian government and the daughters of the late King Leopold on the question of the succession to the Royal estate, the government has agreed to allow the three princesses to divide $7,500,000 between them.

In his will King Leopold disposed of a large part of his fortune, estimated at $10,000,000, by making it over to a concern known as the "Foundation of Niederfullbach," and this aroused a storm of protest.

Princess Louise began an action against the Belgian State for the recovery of this money, one half of her sisters and herself. She lost her case in the lower courts, and appealed a year ago, with the above result.

The late King bequeathed to his daughters only $3,000,000, which he had inherited from his father, Leopold I.

MIXED FARMING IS GREAT NEED IN CANADIAN WEST

Says Premier Sifton of Alberta, Who Has Been in the East Lately—Province Will be More Prosperous When Farmers Go in for Mixed Farming

Premier Sifton of Alberta who has been in the east lately, is reported as having told a Toronto newspaper man that mixed farming is the great need of the Canadian West. In part he said:

"The Western Provinces will be even more prosperous when the farmers go in for mixed farming. Our demonstration trains are fast bringing this view home to the minds of the farmers with conviction.

"There is an economic reason for impressing this truth on the minds of the farmers. It is this. All grain farming is speculative. If weather conditions, and all else, remained calculable from year to year, grain farming would have no evils. But one year the crops are all A No. 1; then comes a poor year; next, an average good year; again a big year; then a failure. Under such conditions a man may be rich one year and a pauper [illegible]. But if the farmers went in for mixed farming, other crops besides grain and cattle and horses, there would be a balance of fortunes, and Western farmers would always be in a well-to-do position, with nothing to worry about."

Premier Sifton admitted that some of the discontent in the West was [illegible] by bad farming. "But," he said, "on the whole the farmers are satisfied with the land and with the climate. Those who grouch most are the speculative farmers who want to get rich quick and fail to do so."

HAMILTON FACTORIES

Immense Growth of Industries Under the National Policy

Hamilton, Ontario, known throughout the world as one of Canada's great industrial cities, has been celebrating its centennial. One by one, the city has magnetized new industries, until today, it has 394 factories and shops, representing capital invested of $[illegible] and turning out products every year worth over $[illegible].

A large number of United States companies have their Canadian branch plants in Hamilton, and several others have their commercial eyes turned that way. The citizens and the civic industrial officers have the knack of steering prospective manufacturers to the so-called Ambitious City, which now deserves a new nickname, having realized so many of its high ambitions.

A table gives statistics of the industries of Hamilton as compiled during the latest census. The figures show that over 21,000 people are employed in the factories of Hamilton, where they earn $[illegible]. The cost of the raw material used by the 394 industrial establishments in 1910 was $[illegible]. Hamilton makes everything from a paper bag to a threshing machine, from a biscuit to a boiler, from a bottle of "pop" to a railroad bridge. It is a city of diversified industries as the census facts show. Also it is an outstanding proof of the value of moderate protection.

BY THEIR TEETH

New Method of Identification Better Than Bertillon

At the present time the police departments of Europe and America are seriously considering a system of criminal identification by the teeth advocated by Dr. Richard Grady. Each cadet, on entering the academy, is examined by Dr. Grady to ascertain the condition of his teeth. Every irregularity is charted, and the peculiarities of each tooth duly noted. The chart is then carefully preserved, and should one of the cadets at any time be killed or mangled so that ordinary body marks might become unrecognizable, identification by means of Dr. Grady's card index is always possible, providing only that most of the teeth remain.

It is contended by Dr. Grady that if such a system were applied to criminals it would prove even more reliable and successful than any other system of identification. It is pointed out that thumbs and fingers may be covered or their lines altered by means of acids; scars can be imitated; birthmarks may be removed, or so changed as to become unrecognizable, but the man who had a noticeable peculiarity of the teeth—noticeable, that is, to the careful dentist who makes a cast of the individual's mouth, upper and lower jaws, and makes a careful chart therefrom—cannot change the record unless he has every tooth removed, which is a thing few criminals would have the forethought or fortitude to do.

HINTS FOR MOTHERS

Nothing gives a little girl as much pleasure as a paper doll, and wonderful jointed specimens are obtainable cheaply, as well as all the paraphernalia from which an extensive wardrobe may be contrived. But even the cheapest dolls, or pictures cut from magazines may be utilized and, with tinsel paper, embroidery cut of candy boxes and bits of tissue paper will keep a child entertained for hours.

Some mothers have adopted very artful tactics in inducing their children to drink milk. One learned that straws, such as are provided at soda fountains, if used in the milk glasses, make the milk disappear much more quickly. Another tried the ruse of pasting a pretty picture on the outside of the bottom of the glass in such a way that it could only be seen when the glass was empty. As she changed the picture frequently the diversion of uncovering it did not pall.

In order to enable children to hang up their own clothing have some low hooks in the clothes closet. It is well to teach them habits of neatness early, as well as consideration of mother's steps.

SOUTH POLAR EXPEDITIONS

Expeditions to the South Polar regions may thus be tabulated:—

Captain Scott	1903	82°	16 min
Sir E. Shackleton	1909	88°	23 min
Captain Cook	1773	67°	5 min
Captain Cook	1774	71°	15 min
James Weddell	1823	74°	15 min
Sir James Ross	1842	78°	11 min
C. E. Borchgrevink	1900	78°	50 min
Capt. Amundsen	1911	The Pole
Captain Scott	1912	The Pole

The Pole is 90°, and each degree of sixty minutes is nearly seventy miles. It will be seen, therefore, that, while Captain Cook attained a distance of within about 1,130 miles of the Pole, and Weddell in 1824 reduced the distance to less than a thousand miles, Captain Scott in 1903 succeeded in getting 300 miles further south than any of his predecessors.

Gem Found in Hotel Ruins

Recovered His Radium

The radium in one of the first bulbs that were received in London had a curious history. A physician in Portland Place was applying the bulb to a patient, when he accidentally let it fall, and a moment after crushed it under his foot. The value of the radium to the physician was very great. He removed his boot from his foot and cut out a square of his valuable carpet. He had boots and carpet burned, and out of the ashes refined the original radium salt. It was placed in a new applicator, and is in use to-day.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

STUDENTS WORK SIDE BY SIDE WITH NAVVIES

In the Evening They Teach and Write Letters for the Frontier Toilers —All University Men

Interesting, indeed, are the experiences of the students sent out by the Reading Camp Association from various Universities in Canada who spent the summer working shoulder to shoulder with the frontier laborers in the van of civilization—the railway construction camp, rugged mining camps in the distant timber limits, devoting their evenings to educational work among those denied the advantages for which they blaze the way. Many and varied, humorous and tragic are the stories told by these men who for a season substitute overalls for college gowns. Some are employed as axe men, others as graders, brakemen on "gravel pit limiteds," nurses in the camp hospitals, clerks, "cookees," blacksmiths, timekeepers, teamsters or "skinners," lumberjacks, and in other capacities.

The Association's work is to send an instructor into a camp, provide him with a car or tent, fitted as a combined reading room and night school, and keep him supplied with reading matter, books, (which are furnished in travelling libraries by the Provincial Governments) and current newspapers and magazines for the use of the men without charge. The instructor works with the gang in the day time, in any capacity upon which the camp boss may decide. He wins the confidence and respect of the laborers, following the exhortation of Froebel, "Come, let us live with our students." The evenings are devoted to work in the reading room, teaching classes of foreigners or illiterate and ignorant English-speaking workmen, informal lecturing, letter-writing for the men, and assisting in many other practical ways. Years ago a ministerial student, Alfred Fitzpatrick, a Nova Scotian by birth, graduated from Queen's University. Instead of settling permanently in the pastorate he devoted some time to a personal study of actual conditions in the lumbering and railroad construction camps of the frontier. The young student secured some financial backing and commenced to give his idea practical form. At first operations were necessarily conducted on a small scale. Many difficulties were encountered. Foremen were apathetic or openly hostile. But the husky youth who had conceived the plan was not discouraged. In 1900, three instructors were employed and stationed in lumber camps during the day as actual laborers, teaching in the evenings, on holidays, and when the weather would not permit outside work. In the spring of 1901, the Reading Camp Association was born.

Since that time the work of the Reading Camp Association has greatly expanded, until it now carries on its operations in six provinces between Quebec and British Columbia inclusive. The men stationed in Ontario on construction lines, clear between $200.00 and $250.00 each for their summer's work, while those in the West save from $250.00 to $300.00. In some cases the manual labor was trying on students unaccustomed to such exercise and many hardships were endured.

REGARDING INSANITY

A London Physician Makes Observations on the Topic

"Half the great poets were insane. Genius and insanity are closely related," said Dr. F. W. Mott, F.R.C.P., F.R.S., who has charge of 30,000 lunatics in the London hospitals. "The poets were in many cases the sons of erratic, nervous parents. There is not much difference between the highly imaginative thought of the poet or of the genius on one hand, and insanity on the other.

"Heredity plays a great part in insanity, a much larger part than is generally realized," he said. "As pathologist to the London County Asylums I have charge of 30,000 lunatics. Cards show that over 2,000 of them are related. Of this number 700 are brothers and sisters, or parents and children. Heredity is not all, however. Environment plays a big part. One member of a family by some chance [illegible] and goes on to success and is respected. Another meets misfortune and goes down to his grave, a suicide or dies in a madhouse. Much depends upon environment. Children of insane parents are taken out of the gutter by the Barnardo homes. Left alone they would grow up insane. Under proper care they make a success of life. Of course, some of them are beyond hope. You cannot make good out of bad material, but you can prevent a great deal of good from being spoiled. In cases that I have traced I have found that insanity appears earlier in each succeeding generation until it reaches the stage where the child is born insane or becomes insane so early in youth that there is no marriage. In other cases marriage with strong strains wipes out the insanity in the following generations."

Pheasant as the Sheep's Friend

A pheasant accompanied a flock of sheep the greater part of the way on their last melancholy mission to Reading Market from Kidmore. The bird had covered five miles when its presence was noticed at Caversham. Resenting the curiosity of the public, the pheasant flew away. The sheep were driven for another mile to the market, and no sooner had they arrived than [illegible] the pheasant, among his four-footed friends.

WHAT WRINKLES MEAN

They Afford a Good Clue to Character and Disposition

Two sharp, vertical indents on the forehead, just at the top of the nose, are a sign that the wearer is given to deep and serious thought.

A wrinkle each side of the nose, and extending from thence to the corner of the mouth, is indicative of a sarcastic and sneering disposition, whilst those who show one or more "cuts" at the corners of the mouth are usually of a cheerful disposition, amiable, and anxious to please.

Wrinkles at the corners of the eyes denote the jovial nature of an easy-going, careless person, fond of good things and of getting their own way, and—sometimes—rather indifferent to the feelings of others in attaining their own comfort.

Crowsfeet—the name given to those small wrinkles under the eyes—are almost invariably a sign of worry, trouble, dissipation, or ill-health, and are often accompanied by lack-lustre eyes and a tired and worn expression of the countenance in general.

A number of horizontal wrinkles on the forehead denote a fretful, petulant, worrying disposition, but one given to consideration for the feelings or sufferings of others. People whose brows are marked in this manner are usually good parents and staunch friends, though somewhat hasty and trying to the tempers of others.

MISS RAY IN TEARS

Musical Comedy Actress Granted Decree of Restitution

For ten brief minutes the strangely-assorted crowd that throngs the London Divorce Court gazed on the spectacle of a musical comedy actress sobbing as if her heart would break.

The central figure of the pathetic scene was Miss Gabrielle Ray, the dainty dancer, who was granted a decree of restitution of conjugal rights against her husband, Mr. Eric Raymond Loder, who did not defend the suit.

Opening the case for Miss Ray, Mr. Barnard, K.C., said the parties were married at St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church, Windsor, and afterwards lived together in London.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Loder had a mutual friend, a lady, and at times Mrs. Loder objected to this lady. Mr. Loder finally left his wife. As he had not returned at the end of two months, she wrote him this letter:

"Dearest Eric—I am writing to you once more, because I want you to know I have given up —— for good. I am feeling desperately miserable, and want you, my husband, so badly. [illegible] his old [illegible], and wonders if he will ever see him again. Thank you for the flowers you sent upon the anniversary of our wedding day. You cannot think how it all hurts.—Your wife, Gab."

Mr. Loder [illegible] in reply to that letter, [illegible] returned, and she wrote again. There was again no reply, and the wife then commenced proceedings.

Miss Ray then went into the box. After taking the oath she broke into tears.

She bore out the statement of her counsel relating to the marriage. It was, she said, a marriage of affection on her part, and she believed at the time it was so on her husband's part.

Marriage Sequel

At Mohill a young man named Edward Smyth, of Rossmore, Drumlish, was returned for trial, on bail, charged with shooting at and wounding his father Terence Smyth. The father's deposition was to the effect that he went to bed when he heard his son coming home on the car drunk from Longford. The son went upstairs, told him he had got married and that he and his wife would be the "bosses" there, and then pulled him out on the bedroom floor. Witness ran downstairs. His son followed him into the kitchen, and putting two cartridges into a double-barrelled gun, placed it under his arm, saying he would do for him. The gun went off then, and the charge went between witness's legs, the shot entering his flesh.

Born in the Trade

In the case of a Tonypandy milk vendor summoned at Ystrad for selling milk deficient in butter fat, a witness was asked if the defendant had delivered milk for twenty-six years. Inspector J. Davies: "He is only twenty-five." Defendant: "I am twenty-nine." The Magistrate: "Well, we will say he was born in the trade. Most infants have to do with milk pretty early in their career."

St. John, N.B., is a progressive Canadian city where the commission form of government has been tried with success, so it is said. The civic administration is in the hands of a mayor and four commissioners, the mayor elected for two years and the commissioners for four years, two retiring at the end of each biennial period. Any official may be removed from office by the recall, and popular government is further assured by the initiative and referendum.

Punishment to Fit Crime

Among Chinese coolies - favored method of stealing rice is to lean up against a pile of sacks and stick a tin tube through the sacking, the rice, which is dry, naturally flowing through the tube into the coolie's clothing. Flour is also stolen in this manner, and a common punishment in this case is to let the thief obtain a large quantity and then pour water into his clothing, which makes matters rather uncomfortable for him.

An Insurance Point

A man named Pat Mahony wrote to the Clonmel Health Insurance Society saying he had £30 a year "all found," and when he paid 6 cents insurance a week he had only 50 cents to put clothes on him, and he smoked.

Police Inspector as Auctioneer

District Inspector Irwin Newry, put up for sale at Warrenpoint, Ireland, two goats which had been seized by the police on the public road during the cattle embargo and had not been claimed by the owners. There was a big crowd present, and much fun was poked at the sergeant and the policeman holding the goats up for inspection.

Record Chancery Case.

A chancery case, the most expensive and the longest on record, was brought to a close, as far as speeches and evidence were concerned, before Justice Parker in London recently. The action which was brought by Messrs. John Aird & Co. against the Tanjong Pagar dock board concerned a $5,000,000 contract for construction of a wet dock at Singapore. The evidence heard on both sides covered 1,981 pages, representing 33,471 questions and answers, and took 36 days to hear. The speeches delivered covered about 300 pages and were delivered during a period of 12 days. Five K.C.'s and a host of juniors were briefed. The leader on one side received a fee of 2,500 guineas and a "refresher" of $500 a day. The leader on the other side received $10,000 with the same refresher. The fees ran into five figures, and the [illegible] of the trial alone worked out at $25 a minute.

FAT AND PNEUMONIA

Reasons Why a Cold is Dangerous For Stout Persons

Fat people and people who drink alcoholic stimulants are afraid of colds and pneumonia. There are two reasons why they should be so. First, they are more susceptible. Second, these ailments go much harder with them. When a person is fat an excess of fat is tucked away anywhere it can be; under the skin, around the heart or anywhere else to get rid of it. It isn't needed. It is a burden. When a person takes alcohol and food together, the alcohol is burned and the food is left to clog the tissues.

In case of a cold or pneumonia there is more or less strain on the vital organs. If these are cluttered up with unnecessary fat or weakened by alcohol, the chance of recovery is that much less.

No matter what the disease, the individual who eats moderately, exercises sufficiently to keep a normal weight and avoids alcohol has much the best chance to fight it off. And often this type of sane humanity goes much farther and escapes it altogether. Don't let yourself grow unnaturally fat.

"A GIGANTIC EEL"

Olympic Swimming Champion Attacked While Training

A cable from Honolulu states that Kahanamoku, the famous Sandwich Islands swimmer and the winner of the 100 metres swim at the Olympic Games, had a narrow escape from death while training. Kahanamoku was dragged under water by what is described as a gigantic eel, and did not reappear for three minutes. In his struggles to escape Kahanamoku lost some of his fingers.

Generous Breeze.

Apropos of the bumper crops of 1912 Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture said in Washington:

"I heard a story the other day about a long-headed farmer. An auctioneer was to auction off his fields of standing grain and the farmer said to him:

"'I hope to goodness we have a good stiff breeze the day of the auction.'

"'A good stiff breeze? What use will that be?' asked the auctioneer.

"'You must be green, young fellow,' said the farmer. 'Don't you know that when grain's waving in the breeze it looks a lot thicker—you see the same heads two and three times over.'"

Equal parts of linseed oil and lime water make a soothing mixture for burns.

Black stockings will always keep a good color if, after washing, they are rinsed through blue-water.

Coffee is a fairly good air-purifier, and a little burnt on hot coals will purify a sick room and abolish bad smells.

When driving a nail through a plaster wall, dip it in hot water first. This will prevent it from breaking away the wall.

Is Your Back Full of Aches All Day Long?

THAT STAB-LIKE PAIN IN THE BACK IS SURE INDICATION OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Mrs. Anna [illegible] writes as follows from her home in Valencia:—"For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky, I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I [illegible] the true cause of my suffering. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I strongly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

No greater medicine exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills for the cure of indigestion, constipation, flatulence, liver, bladder and kidney trouble. A fire broke out yesterday at the cheese factory at Bensfort about 11 o'clock, and within an hour the building was gutted. The loss is estimated at $2,000, part of which is covered by insurance. The factory is owned by Messrs. Taylor and Kerr. A shipment of cheese comprising 50 boxes was made a short time before the fire occurred.

A Mass Meeting.

A mass meeting under the auspices of the Royal Templars of Temperance, will be held in the Sunday school room of the George street Methodist church, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 21st, at 8 p.m. Mr. A. B. Spencer, of Collingwood, Grand Councillor, will be present and deliver an address. A collection will be taken. Everybody invited.

The Baptist Convention.

Murray street Baptist church was crowded to capacity again last evening. The delegates who were present on Wednesday night were greatly augmented in numbers. A visiting pastor from Essex was present at the Canadian Club banquet last night congratulated the speaker of the evening, Mr. McCullough on his admirable and patriotic address.

40th Anniversary.

Mr. Frank Mason, the well known local florist, this week will observe the 40th anniversary of his going into business in Peterborough. To mark this event he has decided to give a 20 per cent. reduction on cut flowers, jardinieres, bulbs, etc. for a few days. The public are invited to call and inspect his new emporium on Water street, where a magnificent display of flowers will be shown.

A New Feature in Coal.

Now, gentle reader, this is not a chapter from Hans Anderson's fairy tales. This is a 20th Century fact, established right in this good city of Peterborough. Yesterday a Times scribe happened to be in a Charlotte street coal office. On the scales outside was a cart loaded with coal. The driver yelled through the window to the clerk within "There's 10 pounds over the right weight." The clerk replied "Oh, that's all right, let it go!"

Is She Unlucky?

There is a young girl, daughter of a well known employee of the C.G.E. Co., whose life will run to the alleged fatal number 13. She was 13 years old on Monday last, Oct. 13. She is the 13th child in the family. There are 13 letters in her name. "There's nothing but superstition in saying that 13 is an unlucky number," the young lady said to The Times yesterday, when telling us about herself. "I've never had any accidents or misfortunes in my life," and her looks did not belie her either.

Garnet Innis on Trial

At yesterday's police court, Garnet Innis was charged with administering drugs to a girl. County Crown Attorney Wood acted for the prosecution and Mr. Gordon for the defence. The girl gave evidence, she is 17 years old. She took several drives to the country with defendant. She consented to Innis' proposals on the fourth drive. Her relations with Innis continued for months. She is now in difficulties. Defendant told her he would get her medicine. He gave her a box of pills. She took that box full. One of the pills fell into a basket. She found it afterwards and gave it to the County Attorney. Defendant furnished her with other medicine. The case was enlarged until Tuesday morning.

A Partridge Without Wings

Yesterday two well known young men drove out to Ennismore, accompanied by guns, a dog and a lunch. It might be noted that a goodly share of the lunch, possibly for protection against microbes, was enclosed in glass and corked down. The ozone of the country road created an appetite. Before the bridge was reached a corkscrew opened part of their lunch. Stimulated by the lunch taken and nerves aglow from the drive the huntsmen got out at a maple woods. The two hunters separated one taking the dog. A partridge was heard drumming by the man without the dog. He saw a movement between some small spruce trees. He took a chance and fired in the direction of the movement. With a howl the dog, getting some lead pellets in his northern hemisphere, discovered that it enjoyed city life far more than hunting and made for home. The lunch was finished but the hunters got no partridge.

HOW ANY WOMAN CAN REMOVE FUZZY GROWTHS

(The Modern Beauty)

Many beauty shops use a delatone paste for removing hair from the face, neck or arms, as it is more satisfactory in every way than the electric needle. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a paste, and spread on the hairy surface for 2 minutes, then removed and with it comes every trace of hair. After the skin is washed it will be firm and free from blemish. To insure best results, buy the delatone from your druggist in an original package.

WEDDING BELLS

Davidson—Hall.

Yesterday afternoon in St. Paul's Presbyterian church Isabella Charlotte (Chattie) eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall, of 83 Lansdowne street, became the charming bride of Mr. Archibald Davidson, of this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robt. Pogue. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. J. R. Hall, of Toronto, and was unattended. Mr. John Allan, organist of St. Paul's, played the wedding march. The happy couple left on the afternoon C.P.R. train for points west. Upon their return they will reside at 323 Rubidge street, where they will be at home to their friends after the New Year.

CLEANSES YOUR HAIR MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL

It becomes thick, wavy, lustrous and all dandruff disappears—Hair stops coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Mr. Frank Mason's Improvements.

Mr. Frank Mason, the local florist, has now gotten his recently altered premises on Water street in full operation. An account of the exterior changes made has already been given in the Times. The new and enlarged office is possibly worth attention. The whole exterior scheme is in pure white, as pure as the Easter lilies sold therein. A long office has been enclosed by a glass petition. The walls are surrounded by handsome glass covered cases where cut flowers, immortelles, etc., are exposed to view. Mr. Mason has shown great enterprise in these improvements.

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE

A large number of the visiting Baptist delegates dined yesterday at the National Hotel.

Roofing paper was yesterday begun to be laid on the roof of the fine new C.P.R. station.

A slight mishap to the machinery prevented the asphalt being laid on Hunter street yesterday. The work will start to-day.

It is understood that Mr. Dodd, local C.P.R. Agent, will have his office in the new freight shed at the foot of Charlotte street.

Mr. Tom Rutherford, the local contractor, leaves to-day for Millbrook in connection with a contract to put a stone front in three stores of Dr. Turner, on the main street there.

The chimes of St. John's church rang yesterday, by request of the Trustees, in honor of the visiting delegates to the big Baptist convention, held in Murray street church.

The Hamilton Spectator of Dec. 7th, 1912, contains a full page essay on Canadian Clubs, by Mr. Chas. R. McCullough, who addressed the Canadian Club here last night.

The electric light poles on the east side of George street, between Hunter and Charlotte streets were yesterday moved several inches west to make a better alignment.

The Lakehurst rural mail route will be opened in less than a month. The tender of Mr. P. J. Scollard being the lowest—it being $694—gets the contract.

The first lecture of the season under the auspices of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. will be held this evening, when Rev. Father McColl will give an address on "Woman's Place in Literature."

Local deer stalkers are now busy taking up rifles and painting canoes in readiness for the season. Some of them are bothered to know how far their deer hunting stories this fall may go and still be credited.

HEROIC CAPTAIN ASHORE AND KROONLAND NEAR PORT GOTHAM

Rescue Ships Bear Many Distracted Mothers Separated From Families

New York, Oct. 16.—The Red Star Liner Kroonland, from Antwerp, which was one of the ten ships helping in the rescue of the passengers from the burned steamer Volturno, was steaming slowly towards Port to-day delayed by an accident to its shaft, but it was expected that it would reach its dock by nightfall and set ashore Capt. Inch of the lost steamer and ninety other survivors of the disaster, including many members of the crew who were among the last to leave the doomed vessel.

Wireless advice from the approaching rescue-ship report that among the passengers among the Volturno's passengers on board are several women separated from their families, and three little children whose identity is unknown, there being no relative or guardian with them on the Kroonland.

Raised a Purse.

One is a five-year-old boy who speaks german, and the other two are girls three and four years old respectively, either Russian or Polish. The passengers on the Kroonland raised a fund of $714 for both rescuers and rescued. They are warm in their praises of Capt. Inch of the Volturno and Captain Kreibohm for the courage they displayed.

A wireless for C. W. McClure, a passenger on the Kroonland, reports a tragic incident, which viewed from the Kroonlands decks appeared to be the carrying out of the suicide pact between a young married couple. The man and woman were seen to take each others hand and jump together into the ocean. Passengers taken from the Volturno later, said that the couple were from France, but they did not know their identity.

"CASCARETS" CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Charged With Incendiarism.

Trenton, Oct. 16.—Something of a sensation was caused in town by the arrest last night of Earl Henderson, a young man of this town on a charge of incendiarism. A provincial detective has been quietly working about town for some days and the arrest has followed as a result of his investigation. The youth, who is only eighteen years of age was arraigned before Magistrate T. A. O'Rourke for a preliminary hearing this afternoon.

NO CHANGE IN DUTY ON WHEAT UNTIL NEW YEAR

Winnipeg, Oct. 16.—Buffalo elevators are filled with grain, and the eastern lines this week placed an embargo on the most of Canadian grain in bon through that port. On change in Minneapolis there was increasing talk that Western Canadian pressure on Eastern Canada will bring about the abrogation of the countervailing duty and permit Canadian wheat to come into Minneapolis duty free. Sir Rodmond Roblin, Premier of Manitoba, gave it as his opinion that nothing will be done in Canada towards changing the existing tariff regulations until January; as to what Canada may do then Mr Roblin would make no prediction. The Ogilvie Milling Company and other Canadian milling interests, and Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Railway influences are against any such reciprocal action by the Canadian Government as would permit grain to come free into the United States. The Canadian Pacific opposition is reported to be less pronounced as the road would probably make up through shipments over the Soo line, control of which it owns, for any losses of grain diverted southward from the western provinces and away from the Canadian lake ports.

WE ALL LOOK ALIKE

Impressions of Missionary Back After Many Years

Mr. Dan Crawford, who returned after twenty-three years' missionary work in Central Africa, found a great change in the dress of Londoners.

"In the old days," he said, "I could distinguish between the different sections of society by the clothes they wore. I could tell at once the mistress, her housemaid, her cook, and her scullerymaid. If all these were seated together in a 'bus to-day I could not distinguish between them. I find that all are hobble-skirted, all wear the same designs in hats, and all the same show of jewellery. Perhaps, if one looked carefully into material, or the quality of the jewels, one might notice a difference. But otherwise they appear to me exactly the same. This applies as well to the modern young man, the shop assistant, the clerk, the office boy, and the young peer. Twenty years ago the clerk could easily be recognized by his modest and sober attire. The office boy was distinct with his abnormally high collar, which added a touch of polish to his rather shabby clothes. I do not know if this is the result of a tendency on the part of tailors to standardise the clothes or of a reduction in prices, or of there being more money to spend among young men of the middle and lower classes."

Cutting New Bread

When cutting a new brown loaf, it is very annoying to find the bread crumble to bits. The simple but effective remedy for this is to place the knife in hot water for two or three minutes, wipe it, and then cut the loaf.

DAILY MAIL FOR HARVEY

Long Looked for Connection at Last Accomplished.

Harvey (Lakehurst) has been anxious for a long time to get a through daily mail service with Peterborough and it has got it at last. Mr. P. J. Scollard, whose tender was the lowest, viz., $694.00, will convey the mail from Lakehurst to Peterborough and back again daily service, the old Smith route as before, and dropping of the Ennismore mail at Ennismore. A new local mail circuit has been created in Ennismore for which Louis Sullivan was the lowest tenderer. It is to be hoped that a new motor stage will be put on the new Harvey route, especially in Ennismore, as tourists and Harvey people both need it badly.

GIVE ULSTER THEIR OWN CHURCH CONTROL IS THE CABINET'S PLAN TO PLEASE IRISH

Brand New Idea May be Successful Move to Settle Home Rule Row—King and Court for United Idea

London, Oct. 17.—To-day's Cabinet Council closes a remarkable series of three meetings at which the Ministerial position was carefully reviewed resulting in a policy decided upon as regards Ireland.

It may be summed up in Mr. Asquith's own dictum, "Wait and see."

The Churchill-Smith suggestion for the elimination of the Orange sections of Ulster from the Home Rule Bill was not finally rejected. Indeed, Mr. Birrell and Sir Rufus Isaacs have gone to Dublin to examine minutely whether the difficulties of this solution are as insurmountable as Mr. Redmond's speech suggests. In any case the Ministers are united in the maintenance of the principle of the creation of an Irish Parliament, with a fully responsible executive. They are united also in reliance on the Parliament Act as ensuring fulfilment of that principle, while leaving the door fully open next session for opposition proposals while the bill is before Parliament for the third and last time.

Then a Conference.

Should the proposal for the elimination of Ulster prove impossible, the Government would be "ready to assemble for a conference on the basis of constructive suggestions of the Unionists themselves, made when the bill was before Parliament last session."

Mr. Hewins, M.P., secretary on Mr. Chamberlain's staff commission, indicates to The Times that these amendments together constitute a Unionist alternative policy.

It is believed, says The Times, Ulster opposition would be robbed of much of its bitterness if the Orange communities, while coming under the Irish Parliament, were given broad local powers of control over educational and other matters where their views are diametrically opposed to the Nationalists. It is believed Ulster would cease to create difficulty if at once assured that their educational and religious life with its appointments and endowments would be kept in their own hands under Imperial guarantees interposition of the united powers of the [illegible] Church and Irish Hibernians. This in bold outline is the direction in which authoritative statesmen of both parties are moving to-day.

SUICIDE ATTEMPTED AT LOCAL LIFT LOCK

Yesterday afternoon a man, formerly employed by a Water street plumber, tried to solve death's mystery. For obvious reasons, as may be gathered by the context. The foolishly impelled attempted suicide's name is omitted. He has been drinking heavily for some weeks, and it is thought, began to see purple elephants clad in green pantalettes. Anyway he wandered over to the lift lock and with one despairing glance at the Otonabee hills, jumped in. An eye witness claims that he found the water too cold for suicide purposes and fragged it to the gates. Here a number of men who saw his leap for death, hauled him out with the business end of a pike pole. The police were telephoned to and took the unfortunate to the station. Here he was supplied with dry clothes and other things. He will appear in the police court this morning.

CATHOLIC REGISTER ATTACKS MR. WEBB

In a column and a half attack on the Rev. J. R. Webb, the Baptist Church and Protestants generally, the Catholic Register justifies all that Mr. Webb said about it. It admits that the words of the ritual are "Do you also anathematize every heresy that shall arise against the Holy Catholic Church?" Reply, "I do anathematize it." The Register then goes on to say that "heresy is what is here anathematized." "Does Mr. Webb identify himself with heresy?" &c. It will thus be seen that the Register admits that heretics are to be cursed and damned. It is unnecessary to say that heretics are all those outside the Catholic Church. That such people have been burned at the stake in the past is of course because, being cursed, they were liable to be cut off and destroyed as the unfruitful tree mentioned in the Bible and because they were a source of eternal destruction to others. This playful way of looking at the opinions of others is really so fierce that people now-a-days, especially amongst Protestants, who couldn't be induced on any pretence to burn anybody on account of their religion, are at a loss what to make of it, but the fact remains and is established in The Register of no more remote date than Oct. 15th, 1913, that the Church of Rome is the only true Church and that all outside of it are enemies of God and where they have had fair warning are properly the object of the Church's curse and the Church's punishment. It may be said, however, that the people of this country, as in Ireland, France, Spain, Italy, &c., have no intention of allowing men who put on black coats and call themselves the chosen instruments of God to do as they please with the lives of the people. That idea may be given up.

NEW BISHOP'S OATH

Orange Sentinel's Correspondent's Version of the Matter

Nothing has ever happened in Peterborough to equal the sensation caused by the exposure of Bishop O'Brien by Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray Street Baptist Church. The occasion was one staged with all the pomp and ceremony of which the Catholic Church loves to boast. The papal delegate, Archbishop Bruchesi, Archbishop Spratt, Archbishop McNeil and goodness knows how many common ordinary bishops and priests were there. The city had given itself over to the solemnity of the occasion. The city fathers and the mayor were there. An address was presented by them to the holy fathers. Peace and harmony reigned. The church was herself again.

But, alas! the Rev. Mr. Webb knew Latin. The new bishop knelt before the Supreme Pontiff's representative. In fact, Christ Himself was there—so the faithful believed. But Mr. Webb heard the new bishop, who said that he cursed Protestants and Protestantism with all his heart and soul. He said it in Latin, but Mr. Webb knows Latin, and the jig was up. The city fathers and the peace and harmony people look as foolish as the parrot after the cyclone.

So this was the peace and harmony so loudly proclaimed by the new bishop—and after the great procession and the big talk. The like of it will not happen again for a long time.

Mr. Webb said he was glad to have been included in the number receiving cards of admission to the Cathedral for several reasons—because it was a time of rejoicing with a large and respected portion of our community; because some of his own best friends are Roman Catholics; because of the manifest reverence in the sanctuary which might well put Protestants to shame; because in Mr. Webb's opinion the man installed in the exalted office is as worthy of that honor as any man in that ancient church; and lastly, because he was privileged to hear a really great sermon by the Bishop of Calgary.

On the other hand there were, the preacher said, certain things which might well raise questions in the mind of some of the listeners. It was no surprise to find the entire service in the Latin, but why was this so when the Apostle Paul says, "Unless ye utter by the tongue speech easy to be understood, ye will be speaking into the air." The fact was, said the speaker, the service was not intended to be understood by the common people. It was a service for the eye, not for the ear and the mind.

It was rather strange the preacher said, to see the Mayor and City Aldermen present in their representative capacity listening to the public cursing of the cherished beliefs of the majority of their electors, and more strange to see these same men presenting an engrossed address to the papal delegate, who had to demand this anathema from the bishop-elect. The Roman Catholic Church, he added, should have every attention and courtesy extended to that of other denominations, and no more.

PRISONERS TIED TO TRIANGLE PUT IN TROUGH OF ICE WATER DOUSED WITH HOSE IN CELL

Former Employe Makes Startling Allegations Regarding Conditions in Kingston Penitentiary

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 17.— Though the Royal Commission appointed to investigate certain conditions at the Penitentiary concluded its labors yesterday evening, pertinent facts were learned this morning which had not been brought to the attention of the Commissioners.

From an ex-guard the story was gleaned of certain system of punishment which were invoked to deal with the refractory inmates.

First of these was the triangle to which a prisoner was tied hand and foot and kept there for periods of twelve hours.

Also there was a trough in which a man was plunged and held down in icy water.

Again there was the hose system, which consisted of a high pressure stream being turned on the prisoner in his cell until he begged for mercy. Often his entreaties were disregarded and the pressure of water was kept on him until he became insensible. Moreover he slept in his drenched clothes.

"Inquests Were a Joke."

There had been cases, it is alleged, in which prisoners had died as the result of this drastic treatment, but the subsequent inquest had not revealed any of the facts. Inquests declared the ex-official, were regarded as a joke.

Of all the disciplinary punishments none was worse than the dungeon cell, where men were frequently confined for minor infringements of prison discipline.

The cell was darker than the tomb and after being released convicts had been thereafter rendered blind for many hours. They dreaded this punishment more than any other, he stated.

The ex-official, who was a former N.C.O. of the British army, gave it as his opinion that in many instances the convicts so submitted to discipline were not guilty of the offences which had occasioned their disciplining.

FORTUNES MADE OVERNIGHT BY DISCOVERY OF OIL AT CALGARY

Sale of Leasehold Nets Newspaper Collector Thirty-five Thousand—Number Given to Men in Line Awaiting Chance to File on Property

Calgary, Oct. 17.—Clarence Scott, who a year ago was a collector in the employ of a local newspaper, negotiated the sale of a leasehold adjacent to the section on which the Dingman oil well is situated, to-day received $35,000 for his interest.

Thomas Jackson, farmer, sold a leasehold of a half section for $6,250. He had held the leasehold less than a month, and paid $5, his filing fee for it.

Trade is brisk to-day in leaseholds. The city is revelling in the excitement, and scores of companies and syndicates are being organized. Gas was struck in a High River well yesterday, causing a flurry of land filings in that section. The Dominion land office is working overtime to take care of those who would file on oil leases.

The crush was so great yesterday that it was decided to give out numbers to those in line. When office closed at night over 1,100 numbers had been given out.

As only about 100 applications can be written up in the course of a day's business, the office will not be able to take care of the last comer for the next ten days.

[illegible] was resumed at the Dingman well yesterday. The progress of [illegible] was impeded somewhat by [illegible]. Half a dozen times [illegible] day it was necessary to [illegible] the oil. During the past [illegible] this process has resulted in an estimated product of 25 barrels per day. The value is about $3 per barrel.

GIBSON TO KINGSTON EARLY IN MORNING

Every Precaution to Be Taken to Shield Him from Public.

Toronto, Oct. 17.—Arrangements were to-day completed for the taking of Charlie Gibson, convicted slayer of Joseph Rosenthal, to Kingston Penitentiary to-morrow morning, there to begin his life sentence. Unusual efforts to protect him from the public gaze will be made following special instructions, and the officers of the sheriff have been told that he must not be allowed to talk to anyone.

The Union Station authorities were notified to-day so that they would be able to hustle the party throughout without any delay.

HIGH LIFE

"Life must be pretty dull up here, eh?" asked the visitor in Alaska.

"Yes," replied the native, "about all there is to do is to fish and drink."

"Is that so?"

"Yep. And in the winter it's too cold to fish."

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Unsettled and cooler.

UNITED STATES MAY RECOGNIZE CARRANZA

But Constitutional General Is Bargaining With Huerta, It Is Said.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Tacit recognition of the Constitutionalists loomed up to-day as a possible solution of the Administration's Mexican troubles. Officials have abandoned hope of a satisfactory solution under Huerta's regime.

Insistent reports reached here today that General Carranza, leader of the Constitutionalists, is bargaining with Huerta to bring about peace by establishing Pedro Sascurain temporarily in the provisional presidency, restoring congress, and holding elections.

President Wilson's abandonment of his target practice trip was regarded as a recognition of the serious possibilities of the Mexican situation.

LARGE EXPORTATIONS FELT BY BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Oct. Oct. 17.—Consumers here are beginning to feel the pinch of large exportations of milk, cream and cattle to the United States. Local butchers have been notified by the wholesalers of another increase of $1 per 100 lbs. Milk dealers supplying Brockville are about to boost the price to eight cents per quart. The supply of milk and cream has been greatly curtailed the past few weeks, owing to the inroads made by the demand from the American market.

ROYAL HONEYMOONERS THANK VETERANS

Toronto, Oct. 17.—His Majesty's Army and Navy Veterans, in Toronto, cabled good wishes to Prince Arthur and his bride on the occasion of their marriage and this morning, Major Collins received the following acknowledgement:

St. James' Palace, London.

Please convey to the Veterans our grateful thanks for good wishes.

Arthur and Alexandra.

WEE GIRL CHASED BY BULL FROG, IN DANGER

New Orleans, Oct. 17.—Mr. Bull Frog sat under a burdock leaf and looked at two-year-old Dorothy Incardona. His home was in the gutter at Milan and Laurel streets.

Dorothy gave him the once over. There was nothing like that in Dorothy's Noah's Ark. Dorothy, with eyes fastened on the frog, started to run towards the gutter. Startled himself, Mr. Bull Frog began to take prodigious hops the same way. Naturally, Dorothy decided Mr. Bull Frog was pursuing her, and she let out another link.

And then, splosh-up! She somersaulted into the gutter waters, about two feet deep at that point. Kerplunk! came Mr. Bull Frog in the next instant. By standing on her toes Dorothy found that she could keep her nose above water. But she had to lean her head back to scream.

"My toes got tired of bein' stood on," said Dorothy later, "and Mr. Bull Frog might have bit 'em anyhow. But I didn't want to get bubbles in my nose so I stood on 'em. I yelled. Then the policeman came and pulled me out. I must say I'm glad I didn't drown."

Officer Lipse August of the First Precinct Station was the gallant man of blue and buttons who saved the little beauty from the gutter and the beast.

TWENTY-SIX DIE; GERMAN AIRSHIP BURSTS HIGH IN AIR

Admiralty Officers Aboard for Test Victims of To-day's Disaster—Guest of Officers is Only Survivor

Berlin, Oct. 17.—A disaster in the air involving the destruction of another great Zeppelin dirigible and the loss of the lives of 26 out of the 27 on board, occurred this morning near the Johannisthal Aerodrome, when the new dirigible "L II," was making its trial trip before acceptance as a main unit of the aerial fleet attached to the German navy.

An Admiralty Board, consisting of a number of officers, including Lieutenant Commander Behnisch and Senior Lieutenant Freyer, of the German naval flying corps, was on board. The pilot was Captain Glath a veteran steersman in the employ of Count Zeppelin, and Lieut. Baron Von Bleul, of the Queen Augusta Grenadier Guards, who was making the trip as a guest and was the only survivor of the wreck. He was injured very seriously and is in a dangerous condition.

Bodies Unrecognizable.

Many of the bodies of the members of the crew were burned to such an extent that they were not recognizable.

To-day's disaster gave rise to a feeling of consternation in Berlin, whose public life had within a week been saddened by the loss of many German passengers on board the burned Volturno and by the accounts of the terrible mining catastrophe in Wales.

A NEW PRINCIPLE IN COMPLEXION TREATMENT

(From Society World)

Most creams are injurious when used habitually. They clog the pores and eventually form a permanent, [illegible] film which interferes with eliminative action and makes the skin sickly and pasty. There is an application—mercolized wax—which acts upon an entirely different principle. While perfectly harmless, it has the peculiar property of removing by absorption the dead and half-dead particles of cuticle, as well as unhealthy matter in the pores. Thus it takes away from instead of adding to the complexion, differing in this respect from cosmetics. The result is a perfectly natural and healthy young complexion. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store (one ounce is sufficient) is applied at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

The newest principle in the treatment of wrinkles is to tighten the skin, which naturally irons out the lines. A face bath, remarkably effective in this direction, may be made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel.

LOST OFFICER OF LIGHT BRIGADE DIED TO-DAY AT 81

London, Oct. 17.—Sir George Orby Wombwell, the last of the officers who took part in the charge of the Light Brigade at the Battle of Balaclava in October, 1854, died to-day at the age of 81. He was a Lieutenant in the Seventeenth Lancers during the Crimean War and in the course of the famous charge two horses were killed under him.

THE SAPPHIRE

Beautiful Gems of Many Colors Found in Many Climes

Blue corundum, ranging in color from the lightest blue to deep, blackish blue, is the same stone as the ruby the only difference being in the color It is also found somewhat more frequently than the ruby, and is consequently less expensive.

The choicest color is the soft, velvety blue, approaching the cornflower in shade, and exhibiting that color vividly by artificial as well as by natural light. The deeper-colored stones are known as male, and the light-colored ones as female sapphires.

Mineralogically, all sapphires are practically alike, but different localities produce distinctive colored stones, which are known as Cashmere, Burma, Ceylon, Montana or Australian sapphires.

The Cashmere, or Kashmir, sapphire occurs in India, in the State of Kashmir, in the noted Himalaya mountains, and is noted for its clear, corn-flower blue. These stones are full of imperfections, however, and flawless ones are rarely obtainable in any great size.

The "[illegible]" or [illegible] sapphire usually comes in [illegible], not from Burma, but from the neighboring country of Siam. These are of a very dark blue.

The island of Ceylon produces sapphires ranging in color from a delicate, pale, grey blue to a purplish blue, and of a larger size than are found in most localities.

Beautiful, electric blue sapphires are found in Montana, but most of these stones are cut in Europe. The color is very uniform in all stones found in these mines.

Greenish and blackish blue stones are found in Australia, and the distinctly blue sapphire is rare, but when found is quite as valuable commercially as gems of a like color coming from Siam or Burma.

Among the fancy sapphires are the Oriental emerald or green sapphire, which does not approach the true emerald in depth of color, but out classes it in hardness and brilliancy; the purple sapphire or Oriental amethyst, which shows up better in artificial light than does the common amethyst and several other "Oriental" stones which are given this name to distinguish the corundums from the less valuable minerals of the same colors, which they resemble, but which they greatly surpass in beauty and value because of their superior brilliancy and hardness. The star sapphire, a wonderful mineral production, and very valuable, is of greyish or dark blue. The stone is cut convex and when exposed to one candle or other artificial light, shows a beautiful, six-pointed star produced by foreign substances in the corundum. The bright lines of the star following the light move over the surface of the stone and cause a remarkable effect.

SINGING CHANCELLOR

Tenor Voice of Remarkable Purity and Strength

Mr. Emlyn Davies, A.R.A.M., the noted baritone vocalist, declares that the statements frequently made that Mr. Lloyd George is not himself musical to the extent of being able to sing in tune are entirely incorrect. "I can speak with some knowledge of the matter," says Mr. Davies, "because for ten years I occupied the seat immediately behind the Chancellor at Castle street Welsh Baptist Chapel, London, where Mr. Lloyd George is a deacon. I can assure you he has a tenor voice far above the average, of remarkable strength and purity. I remember him on one occasion, when we were trying a new hymn tune, turning to me and saying, Emlyn, sing the tenor part until I get the hang of it,' and this he soon did. He told me his favorite song was 'Captain Morgan's March,' the warlike refrain of which he is constantly humming during the social hours that brighten the experiences of the Welsh congregation at Castle street."

Our Point of View

Trades unions for wives is the latest idea in England. Husbands will be obliged to live up to their demands or he may be forced to go without his meals.

Members of the Liveral government in Great Britain continue to assert that Home Rule will be carried through. ' It looks now as if that would be the only way in which it could arrive.

Winnipeg offers to send Sir Edward Carson a regiment to fight for the cause in Ireland, and Montreal has subscribed $6,000 for John Redmond's campaign funds. Which goes to show that Canada has got the men and money too.

"L'Association Canadienne Francaise d'Education d'Ontario'j is the chartered society which is after the local government and will spend all kinds of good money in promoting its campaign. Judging by Pyne's surrender it has the government beaten already.

AUTUMN DAYS

A deep silence has settled on the wood. Across the rill a grey grouse is drumming on the grey trunk of a fallen tree. The grey squirrel is gathering nuts for the winter. The young deer has changed his summer coat for one of a more sombre hue; a red-brown to match the autumn leaves. Now the leaves are falling, unveiling the forest and opening long avenues through which we get glimpses of jumping deer.

This is the time to visit the Algonquin National Park, a delightful spot to enjoy a few days rest, study wild animal life, enjoy autumn life ahead during the winter months.

Good accommodation at the Highland Inn at reasonable rates. Any Grand Trunk Agent can tell you how to get there, or write Mr. J. E. Colson, Manager, Highland Inn, Algonquin Park, Ont.

CANADA'S CREDIT HIGH.

Under a strong administration—recognised the world over as the strongest that the Dominion has yet seen,—Canada is enjoying an enviable position in the financial world. Without strong men at the head of the country's affairs the events of the last six months, the general financial stringency and the shameful conduct of the leaders of Liberalism in Canada, the credit of the Dominion must unquestionably have suffered. Confidence begets confidence. The Borden Government had and showed an absolute confidence in the ability of the Dominion to race safely through far more troubled waters than those which seemed to be menacing the financial world. A few weeks ago the Canadian Minister of Finance was able to borrow money in London on terms much more advantageous than other British dominions have been able to obtain. Announcement is now made that the Dominion of New Zealand is borrowing at 98½ with an option of conversion into stock which mqkes the price really 97. Canada's recent loan was mane at 99.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually By Catarrh

Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. Its rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months price $1.00; small size 50c; trial size 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

CLAIRVOYANT TOLD WHERE TO FIND SEED STOLEN BY BROTHERS

Confession of One of Men Implicated Confirmed Story of Woman With Occult Powers.

Welland,) Oct. Oct. 17.—Occult powers succeeded in locating about $40 worth of clover seed stolen from the farm of Peter Neff, about five miles west of here.

When the seed disappeared from Mr. Neff's barn one night last week he consulted a clairvoyant in Buffalo and after the mystic went into the trance she told him just where the stolen goods might be found, describing minutely the barn where it had been hidden. Mr. Neff made a search as directed, and found the seed in the exact place described.

The clairvoyant's description of the thieves tallied with his suspicions and he laid informations against three men of the district. As a result Harvey Barrick was arrested, and in confession to the police, he implicated his brother, who has skipped the country, placing on him the blame for the instigation and perpetration of the theft. The police today, followed up the search fot for missing man.

Mr. H. P. Carr, Mr. F. Goode and Mr. H. J. Wallace, all of Toronto, passed through Peterborough on Thursday en route for Rice Lake for duck shooting.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

IS THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT AGREED ON NAVAL POLICY

Ottawa Opinion is That Attempt is Being Made to Work Up Another German Scare

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The semi-official announcement in the Conservative press to the effect that while in England Hon. Geo. E. Perley may discuss with the British Admiralty the question of the purchase of three Dreadnoughts, now under construction probably means that the government has abandoned all idea of November session of Parliament. Premier Borden and his Ministers, it is learned, are not quite decided as to what the Government should do in regard to the Navy bill this session although the majority of the Government are inclined to the opinion that the measure should again be brought in. During the past fortnight there has been an attempt made in cable despatches from London to the Government press to work up another German scare. This is probably a preliminary move designed to convince the people that Canada should without further delay make a contribution to the Admiraly. The press campaign will be kept up with increasing vigor until the House opens in order if possible, to create a strong public sentiment favorable to the reinterducing of the bill.

It is doubted here whether Mr. Perley has been armed with authority to enter into direct negotiations for the purchase of dreadnoughts.

MYSTERY NOW PUZZLES COPS HOW MAN GOT INSIDE TANK

The Aperture is Now Only Four Feet Long and About Fifteen Inches Wide

Toronto, Oct. 17.—Despite the alleged suspicious circumstances surrounding the discovery of the body of Antanas Thomas Anko in a benzine tank at a dye works on William street, the police are firmly of the opinion that the man was not the victim of foul play, and had either died from meningitis or had committed suicide, but it is a mystery how he got into the tank which is a small receptacle in which to put the body of a man of Anko's size. It is a wooden barrelled shaped affair, lined on the inside with zinc, being 48 inches in length, while the aperture through which the body had passed is only 14 inches in width, the opening running the full length of the tank. It would be a difficult task for a man to get through it.

Hard to Get In.

Questioned on this point, the detectives replied that they had no doubt but what Anko had got in himself, as they were of the opinion that even a larger man than he could have done so unaided, although they admitted that some difficulty would be experienced. Another fact upon which the police base their contention ol suicide is that Anko was found in the tank with his boots off, which they claim he removed so as to allow him to get inside.

Lid Was Taken Off.

A wrench and the lid of the cask were found lying upon the ground. As there were six screws fastening the lid to the tank and as the wrench just fits the screws it can safely be deducted that the wrench was used for the purpose of unscrewing the lid. And as the proprietor claims that the wrench had been taken from the engine room, which is not much used, it appears that the tool was taken from its place by somebody who evidently knew the lay of the land, and who the police assert was one of the plumbers, who had been working at the premises, although, if the suicide theory is uphold it is more likely that Anko took it himself.

REV. DR. SULLIVAN WITH US.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The Reverend Dr. Sullivan, who is to address a meeting of Protestants in the Opera House on Sunday afternoon on "The History and Mission of Protestant Christianity," is a well known minister of the Baptist denomination, being at the present time pastor of Olivet Church in Montreal, the largest church of the denomination in Quebec Province. Dr. Sullivan is a graduate of the University of Rochester and also a graduate of Rochester Theological Seminary. He took post-graduate work in Roman law and International Law in Columbia University, and also in Union Theological Seminary, New York. McMaster University in Toronto has honored him with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He has made a special study of the history of the church, and every lenten season gives special addresses to large audiences in Olivet Church, Montreal. He comes of an old Catholic family in the City of Dublin, and is himself an ex-Catholic, but not an ex-priest.

Dr. Sullivan has three brothers and one sister living who are devout Catholics. He numbers amongst his friends scores of Roman Catholics, dozens of them priests. His lectures are not fanatical or pyrotechnic displays. He believes that some day all Christians will unite on a common platform. But he also believes that this consummation can only be brought about by, first of all, an earnest study of the history of the primitive Church, and by each church measuring up to the primitive standards. Dr. Sullivan tells the truth but does so like a gentleman and a Christian minister. He is heard every day by broad-minded Catholics. He is frank in the best sense of that term. He wins his audiences by his love of truth, his genial disposition and his manifest love of fair play. He is well worth hearing, and there will be no evil effects left a this city by Dr. Sullivan's coming and address.

F. A. CONNERS

"TAG DAY."

Editor Morning Times

Sir.—Will you allow me a line in which to emphasize the appeal of His Worship, the Mayor, on behalf of the Children's Aid.

Both officially and personally I have had frequent occasions to note the good work of this society in looking after some of God's little ones. Surely at this Thanksgiving time there is no better way of giving thanks for manifold blessings received than by sharing them to some extent with others. Emmerson says, "Man was born not for prosperity alone, but to give and suffer for others like the noble rock maple which bleeds and gives its sweetness for the service of man." So and only so does the giver obtain his best. Again, the little children, orphaned or worse, need help and that is the best reason for giving it. Further if we do not pay now to support and make good citizens of them, those who come after us will have to maintain prisons and asylums for their correction and reformation.

May we hope that all previous records will be broken by Tag Day of 1913.

E. C. S. Huycke.

ABOUT RATINE

Its Discovery a Mere Accident Resulting From Carelessness

Ratine has secured so strong a place in popular favor that it cannot detract from its position to tell a little story of its origin which shows that it is not alone history, customs of the countries, popular interest regarding any special period of the times or other important events which influence the fashions, but the origin is sometimes of an absurdly accidental nature.

According to the story it is to the carelessness of a factory girl at her loom that we are indebted for this beautiful material. It seems that this girl in the textile mill neglected to watch her machine and several thousand yards had been run off before it was discovered that the stitches were out of order. To prevent a total loss on such mis-patterned goods seemed quite impossible, and the manufacturer was in despair. The selling of the stuff as second-grade material appeared to be the only course, when some one to whom he showed the goods conceived the idea that a demand might be instituted in some way, for it was really very handsome after one had become accustomed to the rough appearance.

It was accordingly taken to Paris, where a few of a certain class of society whose approval will make almost any style popular, were prevailed upon, at a price, to wear garments of this "new" material, and it soon became the rage. Fortunes were made from the line, but we are not told what per cent. of the profits accrued to the negligent textile worker at her loom, who was responsible for the novelty.

Drink Buttermilk

Buttermilk is one of the best of drinks. It should not be taken too cold nor too fast.

As much care ought to be observed in buying buttermilk as in buying sweet milk, as there is just as much likelihood of impurity and dirt.

It is a fat producer. It has all the advantages of sweet milk except that it is more easily digested.

Mustard in Sandwiches

In making a large number of ham or other sandwiches requiring mustard for seasoning, cream the butter and mix the mustard with it. The flavor will be more even, and less time will be consumed in preparing the sandwiches.

A Boon to Humanity

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste Dequene.

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1913.
To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.
975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from excesses of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL [illegible] relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the sceptic public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL and help suffering humanity.

SANOL, positive cure for Gall Stones, Kidney & Bladder troubles, Gravel, Rheumatic pains and ailments of Uric Acid origin. Price $1.50.

IMPROVING LOT OF OF FARMERS WIFE

Conditions Much Better Than Generations Ago But End Not Necessarily in Sight

Half a century ago men and women were about on an equality in the matter of the drudgery of farm life. The man had to slave among the stumps and stones. The woman had to make soap, weave, spin and knit. The man was obliged to break his back over the sheaves in the harvest field, to wield the corn knife and to labor with the flail and hoe. The woman had to carry water from the spring, to carry in the wood and sometimes to chop it, to sweep and scrub and fight flies, says Farm and Fireside.

Necessity has largely emancipated the man. Invention made it cheaper and better to use the mower, the binder, the corn harvester, the windmill, the gasoline engine, the shredder, the silo, the riding plough, the manure spreader.

The cream separator and the milking machine are making the wife's work easier, too, and so are many other things. But in many things the inventions of to-day have not been placed in the woman's hands because it has been necessary to adopt them in order to make the farm pay.

So in the course of events that led up to making the farm pay, the woman has kept on as she used to do, in order to make possible the purchase of implements by which her husband could do more work with less effort.

The time has now come when we must move the flag of woman's comfort up to that planted for men. Any farm that can afford a silo can afford an electric light or gas, the vacuum cleaner, the dishwasher, and the washing machine.

Any farm that can afford a gas engine can afford a bathroom. And any farm that can afford a manure spreader and a hayfork in the barn can afford running water in the kitchen.

DOCTOR'S LIFE NOT ALL JOY

Certainly Some Drawbacks to the Profession if this Incidents is Correctly Reported

This story is told by the wife of a physician living in a small town in central Kansas to illustrate some of the drawbacks to the medical profession: "We were attending church, something rather unusual for us, together with a visiting cousin and the baby, when a messenger from the telephone office came in search of the doctor. The minister paused in his sermon until they were safely out of the church. Then the baby, who was partial to his father, became so unruly on being left in my charge, that I, too, was compelled to leave the service, causing a second pause in the minister's discourse. Then it occurred to the cousin that he had the key to the office and that the doctor could not get his surgical case, so he, also, left the church, requiring a third interruption in the morning worship.

"When we reached home the doctor was swinging leisurely in the hammock.

"'Didn't you have a hurry call to an accident case or something of that sort?' demanded the unsophisticated cousin.

"'Oh, no,' replied the medical man. 'Just my old Swedish friend in New Gottland phoned to inquire if he could have a "lectle" sugar in his coffee.'"

Culmination of and Old Romance Looked That Way to Some People

By W. P. DUNN.

"Well, James, what is it?" asked rich Mrs. Tuckerman, testily. "I told you I didn't want to be disturbed. The guests will be arriving in half an hour and I must get things ready for them."

"I beg your pardon, madam," answered the butler. "There's a young person outside with a violin who says she has an appointment with you."

"O, it must be that Miss—what's her name?" said rich Mrs. Tuckerman, crossly. "Let her sit down in the hall and wait until I'm ready."

"Yes, madam," answered the butler. Half an hour later Mrs. Tuckerman, flushed of face, emerged from the reception room and found a slender young woman, with a wreath of copper-colored hair and timid demeanor, waiting, a violin in her hands. At the sight of her patroness she rose.

"Well, so here you are," snapped Mrs. Tuckerman. "I don't know whether I shall want you or not. It depends on how tired my guests are after Krissel has played. You had better wait—you had better wait in the cloak room, and I'll give you three dollars extra to take charge of the ladies' wraps, because my maid hasn't come."

The girl felt the blood surge into her face; then, remembering the sick mother at home she bowed her head. "Yes, I shall be glad to, Mrs. Tuckerman," she said.

"Good!" said Mrs. Tuckerman. "James! Show this young woman to the cloak room and instruct her in her duties. And keep an eye on her if you have the chance," she added in a lower voice. "I don't know about that class of person, and I don't want anything stolen."

"Yes, madam," said James.

Mrs. Tuckerman's reception was the talk of the avenue, for Herr Krissel, the famous pianist, had actually promised to grace it with his presence. And every one thought it an honor to have Herr Krissel, since he was an intimate friend of the music-loving regent of Bonn, where a lady who ranked socially high above Mrs. Tuckerman had met him and taken him up. And so Herr Krissel's tour of America was punctured with social triumphs. Had these good people known it, however, Herr Krissel was not at all conscious of the honor that he was receiving, nor of the reflected glory of the regent of Bonn, which he showered over his hostesses. He attended such functions because he had always done so, and to his simple Teutonic mind all whom he met were his equals.

Herr Krissel Was Short, Stout and Bald.

"Yes, Herr Krissel is really coming," said Mrs. Tuckerman to her guests as they assembled. "You know whom I mean—the great pianist, the friend of the regent of Bonn. You know his romantic story, don't you?"

Then, before the other could reply, Mrs. Tuckerman would plunge into the often repeated tale of how, twenty years before, when Krissel was a poor music teacher, he had fallen in love with the daughter of a rich landowner and secretly married her; how the marriage was discovered, and the count, furious at the discovery, had him drafted into the army, where he served seven years, hearing nothing of his wife. When at last he was permitted to return the count was dead, the petty state had been swept into the maw of Austria, and the war which had devasted the land had obliterated all traces of his wife. He had never found her again. And so, not knowing whether she lived or died, he had never married, but had devoted himself to his art.

"Dear me, how romantic!" exclaimed the other invariably. "I am so anxious to see Herr Krissel."

"Hush! Here he comes now," said rich Mrs. Tuckerman.

The first glimpse of the famous man was admittedly disappointing. Herr Krissel was short and stout and bald, and if any romance had ever come into his life it must have been fully twenty years ago. Then, too, he acted as naturally as though he had never been in society before. He laughed loudly, and sometimes wiped his forehead with a red handkerchief; so that the guests, not knowing whether to resent this or to admire it as a token of genius, were somewhat at a loss what to do.

But when at last Herr Krissel was seated at the piano and [illegible] and began to play every chattering voice was stilled. Under the magic touch the piano produced the full tones [illegible]. All eyes were fixed upon the player when, suddenly [illegible] a crashing chord, he rose from the seat and bowed.

At the end of the room the young girl stood enthralled. At the first sounds of the music she had stolen from the cloak room, and now, clutching her violin, and wholly oblivious of her surroundings, she watched Krissel as one in an ecstasy. Krissel saw the rapture in her eyes.

"Mrs. Tuckerman," he exclaimed, "will you not present me to that young lady with the beautiful hair?"

A woman seated near by tittered loudly. She could not help it; this was the funniest thing that Herr Krissel had done. But Mrs. Tuckerman, perceiving the young performer, frowned angrily.

"O, my dear Herr Krissel," she said, "you are mistaken. That is the cloak room maid. She has no business in here at all. I am very angry."

"But the violin?" faltered Herr Krissel.

"Well—I thought perhaps that as the young woman had some skill on that instrument she might possibly play us something later. But now I shall send her home at once."

She walked hurriedly toward the girl, but before she could whisper to her to leave the room she found that Herr Krissel was at her side. And the famous pianist did a still funnier thing than ever before. He put forth his hand and tugged at a locket on a slender chain of gold around the girl's pretty throat.

"Where did you get that?" he exclaimed tragically.

"It is my mother's," faltered the girl, recoiling from the pianist in something approaching terror.

"Your mother! You are a German? Who is your father?"

"He is dead," whispered the girl. "He was killed in the wars, years and years ago."

Everybody was hushed now, dimly conscious of some impending denouement to this strange scene. Herr Krissel wrenched apart the half shells of gold, carved with the arms of Laufert. Inside was a faded portrait—his own, taken in Germany 20 years ago.

The girl saw the likeness now, as she had half-unconsciously recognized it before. Herr Krissell placed one arm round her, with a look of infinite tenderness and, without speaking a word, he led her from the room.

And that was the funniest thing he did that evening.

LADY BARBERS

New Calling Increasing in Popularity in London

Lady barbers are growing in popularity in London. There is an increasing demand for this class of "lady help."

There are quite a number of lady barber establishments distributed throughout the Metropolis. It is one of the "new callings" about which so much is being written. In the West End they are recognized as quite necessary adjuncts.

Many of the young ladies are experts at manicuring and ladies' hairdressing as well, and this kind of employment is being undertaken by ladies to an ever-increasing extent. Some of the young women earn quite big money.

TELEPHONE UNDER THE SEA

New Invention That Promises to be of the Utmost Commercial Value in the Future

Long distance telephone calls and conversation between continents is claimed for the near future, as the result of the submarine telephone, invented by an English engineer named Williams.

The first demonstration test was made recently from the Pacific mainland to an island 21 miles away, a bare iron wire being stretched the distance and lying in naked contact with the salt waters. Then over the bare wire went the sound of human voices and distinct conversation was kept up for several hours.

This invention is said to overcome two supposed basic laws of electricity. The one which claims that any bare wire conductor in contact with water would be short circuited the minute a current of electricity passed through it, and the other which claims that it is not possible to have an electrical charge on a metallic conductor without that conductor's possessing an electrostatic capacity. Both the above things, however, were accomplished.

The commercial value of the invention may be judged from the fact that whereas it will cost the United States $400,000 to lay a new cable to Alaska, according to present conditions, the new invention would enable the work to be done for $20,000.

Didn't Want to Take Chances.

I remember once hearing of a man—a farmer he was—over in the County Down. He was a great one for inventing—always turning out great ideas that were great failures. Naturally, in a place like that he was the "great joke" of the countryside. Well, anyway, he invented a flying machine. It was really a pair of wings made from wire and hens' feathers.

He took a year to do it—secretly. But the night before he made his first attempt to fly, being both a hopeful and cautious man, he went round all the cottages within reach, and after sitting for a little while chatting, but never mentioning his great invention, he said, in an off-hand way, before leaving:

"If any of you see a strange [illegible] flying about the country to-morrow, for the love of [illegible] don't be shooting at it. [illegible]"

ARTESIAN WELLS

Water-filled Strata of Sandstone or Other Porous Rock

Artesian basins, or the underground water supply which furnishes artesian wells with their constantly flowing streams, sometimes spouting to a considerable height above the surface, are often popularly referred to as "subterranean rivers," which are believed to "flow" at great depths, eventually finding their way to the surface to feed some visible stream. Or they are thought to exist as great caverns or reservoirs, deep down in the earth, which is tapped by the drill furnish the tremendous flows of water which characterize some of our biggest artesian wells—several hundred thousand, and even in some cases half a million gallons a day. It is true that artesian waters are stored up in underground reservoirs, but they are not of this character. Most artesian water supplies consist simply of water-filled strata of sandstone or other porous rock material, through which the water very slowly percolates, confined from above and below by other strata of impervious rock or clay. Through this inclosed layer of porous rock the water works its way with infinite slowness, following the dip or slant of the rock, and where tapped coming to the surface, if the surface at this point be below the source of the supply. Coarse sandstone is capable of holding a great quantity of water, as much as 6 quarts per cubic foot; but the rate of its movement through this rock is so slow as to be almost inappreciable. To illustrate how slowly the water travels the "Scientific American" mentions that many artesian, or flowing wells are found along the Potomac River at Colonial Beach and other points in Virginia, about 60 miles south of Washington. This water is obtained by drilling into a sandstone formation which extends along the Potomac Valley and into Maryland and outcrops near Frederick, Maryland, some 50 miles north of Washington. It takes about 100 years for the water of the "subterranean river" to flow that distance; that is, the rains falling upon the exposed portions of the porous rocks near Frederick sink in and move southward at the rate of about 1 mile a year. The water issuing from the wells at Colonial Beach to-day fell as rain on the uplands and mountains of Maryland around about the time that Washington was President.

Binding Armor Plate

The objection to armor plate composed of alternate layers of hard and soft steel, which separate under hammering, has been overcome by the insertion of sheets of copper between the plates before they are rolled together to bind them.

Damages for a Shave

Sheriff Umpherston, in Dunfermline Court, decided an action at the instance of George Whyte, miner, Bowhill, against Alexander M'Lean, hairdresser, Cardenden. Whyte sued for $100 in respect of loss and damage sustained through a foul shave which he alleged he had received. The sheriff granted a decree for $60 with $30 expenses.

Wanted Their Mother Back

In response to a husband's appeal to have his wife back, Lord Hatherton, chairman of the magistrates at Penkridge, promised to write to the Home Secretary about the matter. A Cannock man pleaded for the return of his wife, who was sentenced at a previous court to three months' imprisonment for neglecting and abandoning her children. He said he had been put to expense and the children could not get on without their mother.

Cathedral for Aberdeen

A proposal is being matured in Aberdeen Episcopal Church circles with the idea of raising St. Andrew's Church, Aberdeen, to the status of a cathedral. The scheme has in view certain structural alterations and a considerable enlargement of the existing edifice. The proposal is finding complete favor in the diocese.

Attracting Recruits

With the view of securing recruits for their ranks the 4th (City of Dundee) Battalion of the Black Watch carried out a route march and torchlight tattoo. Headed by the pipe band the battalion traversed the principal streets of the city. A number of recruits were secured.

Strike of School Children

The village of Strathblane, Scotland, experienced the novelty of a strike of school children. The attendance dropped to about a dozen, though there are 120 pupils on the school register. Some time ago the School Board decided to abolish some of the holidays. Much resentment was shown by the parents, and their feelings were reflected in the absence of the children.

The Wrong Man

A strange case of mistaken identity was disclosed in Clonmel, Ireland, when it was found that a man, who appeared to answer a charge of drunkenness, was not the man who had been arrested for the offence. The Head Constable said the policeman who arrested the man was new to the town, and it was probable that somebody had imposed on him, and given him the name of the man who appeared in court.

Dead Hero's Mother Rewarded

A young man named Alfred Hopkins, a well known athlete of Barry, Wales, was drowned whilst attempting the rescue of a lad in the sea. The attention of the trustees of the Carnegie Hero Fund having been called to his bravery, Mrs. Hopkins, the mother received the Carnegie medal and a cheque for [illegible].

"I am the Seventh Redeemer"

At the inquest at Darlington on Lottie Scott, a little girl, whose head was smashed in with the butt-end of a gun, the jury returned a verdict of "Wilful murder" against Walter Scott, her father. The mother said that just before committing the deed her husband said, "I am the seventh redeemer of the world, and have to be hanged."

Colors and Gas Light

For matching colors by artificial light an Englishman claims to have invented a screen which will filter out the foreign rays of gas or electricity, making their light practically daylight.

BELLE OF VILLAGE

Edna Wilbur's Startling Discovery; New and Fashionably Dressed Admirer a Burglar.

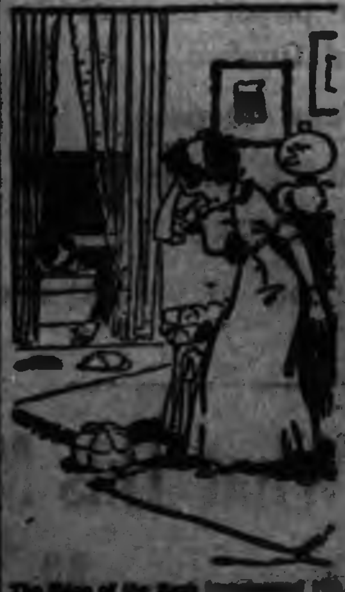
By WALTER J. DELANEY.

Edna Wilbur never looked prettier in her life than upon the day when the "Industrial Exchange" opened at Millville. Imagine an old-fashioned double store made over into a modern emporium of trade, permanent counters and gaily decorated booths all about it. Add an airy dancing room overhead and you have a mere idea of what the Village Young Ladies' club had done for the factory hands down the river and the families of farmers all over the county.

The original idea of this progressive move for the social and business betterment of the district had been born in the busy little brain of the belle of the town. Edna and her girl friends had got rich old Jabez Hull to fix up the ancient building. Her club had set everybody at fancy work. The village merchants had donated some of their goods liberally, even the farmers had subscribed handsomely. The place was to hold a sort of permanent fair every Saturday. Admission was free; all the articles carried were for sale or exchange. It was hoped to encourage the poor mill girls in needlework, and give to all cheap household knickknacks at cost price.

Then there was to be a band, a supper, a clean, instructive picture show, and dancing. The social and economic features of the enterprise appealed to everybody, and now, just before dusk, a great throng crowded the busy street in front of the Exchange.

It was a pretty sight. The doors of the place were crossed and recrossed with white ribbon. In the center of these, just over the knob of the door, was a great vari-colored rosette. All life, animation and beauty, Edna stood at the threshold. The mayor of the town, in evening dress, lifted his glossy silk hat, first to her and then to the crowd. In a neat little speech he welcomed his townsmen to the Exchange. Then he drew a pair of silver scissors from his coat pocket. Edna took them, placed them across the ribbons, and snipped them in twain. They floated like streamers in the gay breeze, and, pressing in the doors, the mayor proclaimed loudly:



The Edge of the Sash Imprisoned His Neck.

"The Exchange is open—welcome."

A fashionable dressed young man pressed his way through the throng, about the first of those to enter the Exchange. He was at Edna's side as she passed into the cashier's booth.

"The sweetest of all flowers for the belle of the occasion," he said impressively.

Edna received the bouquet of radiant lilies of the valley with a happy smile and secured them at her corsage.

"A handsome couple—look as if they were mated for one another," said an observant visitor to his companion. "Who is he? Stranger, I see."

"Yes," was the reply. "Been here only a few days. Chicago stock broker, they say, taking a little vacation. Calls himself Eugene Allen."

"Rich, I suppose?"

"Pretends to be. Acts a pretty active figure—automobiles and all that. Taken quite a shine to Miss Wilbur."

Edna was very busy, as were all her assistants, for the next hour. There was a great throng, and the affair was certainly a wonderful success. More than once Edna stole a hurried, disappointed look about the room.

"Why did Robert not come?" she asked herself, and her rosebud lips pouted slightly. She had been flattered at the graceful attentions of Allen, but why had not Robert Dean been on hand, as she had anticipated, as she had a right to expect?

They were lovers, almost engaged. They were neighbors, their homes near together. Mary Dean was Edna's closest friend. And then as Edna at last saw Robert enter the room, a handsome brunette, a stranger to her, on his arm, her face drew down and she turned her back deliberately upon Robert as he smiled at her.

Purposely she evaded him after that. When the band struck up and the dancing began upstairs, she allowed the handsome stranger, Mr. Allen, to take most of the dances on her card.

"I want to introduce somebody to you, Edna," Robert managed to say to her in a crush at the supper.

"Some other time," retorted Edna pettishly, and when the dance was over she again evaded Robert, seeking for her with a hurt, mystified look on his face.

Edna allowed Mr. Allen to see her home and to carry the handbag containing the proceeds of the sales. She listened to his handsome compliments, and spitefully compared his elegant ways with those of the plain but honest Robert. When she got home, however, and reached her room, she sat down with a sigh and a dull pain at her heart.

Her parents were away visiting a relative in another town. Only deaf old Aunt Jane was in the house. The place seemed dreadfully silent and lonesome. It was the more so, because of the sentiment that she and Robert had become estranged. Before she knew it, seated in a comfortable arm chair, Edna was asleep.

She woke to the echoes of something falling, a human groan. The light was still burning in the room. With a low cry Edna sprang to her feet. A startling picture was revealed to her.

The window overlooking the porch roof was partly open, and held so by a muffled man. The edge of the sash imprisoned his neck. One arm was reached through, striving to reach a pistol that had fallen from his hand and rolled over near the dresser.

In a flash Edna realized that the intruder was a burglar, who had opened the window to have it fall upon and imprison him. Upon a table lay the handbag and her diamond sunburst pin. There, too, were the silver scissors.

The man was struggling to force up the sash. Edna summoned up all her courage. She darted to the table, seized the scissors and ran at the intruder.

"If you move," she cried in a tremulous but brave voice, "I will stick you with the scissors!"

What should she do? She dared not leave the room—the burglar might release himself. Her eyes fell upon a toy telephone apparatus near another window and an electric button near it. It ran over the trees to the Dean house. Robert had rigged it up to enable his sister and his love to hail each other when they liked. The button operated a wire electrically charged, and ringing bells at either end of the line. Soon there was a response. The bell rang in the room.

"Mary! Mary!" gasped Edna. "come somebody, send over at once. There is a burglar here!"

Inside of five minutes Robert Dean, his sister, their brunette visitor and a hired man hailed Edna from the garden. She called to them to force a way into the house. The burglar was unmasked—behold Mr. Eugene Allen!

"Oh, Robert! Robert!" sobbed the repentant Edna, when the elegant stranger was safe in the town jail and her lover had explained that the dark brunette was his cousin. "Can you ever forgive me?"

"I can always love you," replied Robert staunchly, "and that should answer every question."

Glass on Vessel Hulls

To protect the bottoms of sea going vessels from marine growth an Englishman has invented a method for plating their hulls with glass, separated from the steel by a coating of wood pulp to act as a cushion and prevent the glass breaking when heat expands the steel.

Coal Mining Army

The coal miners of the United States now number nearly three-quarters of a million, about one-fifth of them being employed in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields.

Buried Village Exposed

In the year 1665 the sea rolled up to the village of Eccles, on the Norfolk coast fifteen or sixteen miles beyond Yarmouth, engulfed it, and drowned every inhabitant, covering the whole with tons and tons of sand. Only the tower of the parish church remained above to mark the place where a whole community had lived and worked for centuries. In 1896 the tower collapsed.

Recently, after a violent gale, the covering sand was found to have been swept right away from Eccles beach, leaving the church and village exposed. A similar thing happened in 1862, but later on the sand again covered the place.

Dizzy Headaches Cured in One Night

Is Troubled With Head-Fullness, Ringing Noises, Specks Before the Eyes, the Stomach is at Fault.

Quick Relief and Certain Cure Came From Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away, and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set me wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would still be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy, and healthy, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

We Are Lucky.

As a proof proof that Peterborough folks should consider themselves lucky with the present comparatively summer weather it might do to show how weather conditions are at Vonda, Sask. Yesterday Mr. Frank Montgomery received a letter from his son, Will, who conducts a big ranch at Vonda. Mr. Montgomery writes to say that they had a heavy fall of snow and the nails inside his ranch house were white with frost.

Afraid of Canine Poison.

A lady living on George street has heard of the terrible results of ptomaine poisoning. Yesterday she was in a local grocery store. To one of the clerks she remarked "That last can of peas I bought from you was swelled at both ends, and the contents were discolored. Now, I can't understand why you sell such goods and put your customers under the risk of getting canine poisoning!" The clerk took a scoop and dug into a tea canister under the counter to conceal his smiles.

40th Anniversary.

Mr. Frank Mason, the well known local florist, this week will observe the 40th anniversary of his going into business in Peterborough. To mark this event he has decided to give a 20 per cent. reduction on cut flowers, jardinieres, bulbs, etc. for a few days. The public are invited to call and inspect his new emporium on Water street, where a magnificent display of flowers will be shown.

The Late Miss Might.

Deceased is survived by her mother three brothers and six sisters. The funeral will be held on the arrival of a sister from the west.

Thinks Proposition Is Good

Mr. F. Price of Hamilton, who is interested in the Victoria Heights proposition, now handled by Messrs. C. J. Carroll & Co., of Water street was in the city yesterday. In conversation with a Times representative Mr. Price expressed the opinion that the Victoria Heights property is wonderfully situated for residential purposes and will ultimately be the choice location for such purposes here.

Will Claim $200 Reward.

The young man who was instrumental in having O'Connor, the self-confessed horse thief arrested will apply for the $200 reward offered by the County. By-law No. 791 of the Co. of Peterborough, says, in part, that anyone arresting or causing the arrest and conviction of any person stealing a horse or mare in the county shall be paid by the county the sum of $200.

Where Shooting is Good

Mr. George Garlick of the Munro House, was yesterday talking with several guests about the opening of the partridge season. Mr. Garlick noted that one year ago yesterday he was on Vancouver Island, B. C., He remarked that, whilst in this part of the country one may see an odd fleeting partridge and be lucky if the shot from one's gun gets within ten feet of the swift flying bird. In Vancouver Island one may bag, without difficulty all the cock English pheasants one wants. He saw one lady shoot two cock pheasants from her back door step within half an hour.

Elevator Capacity on Grand Trunk Railway.

At the present time there are on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in Manitoba 25 elevators with a capacity of 757,000 bushels. In Saskatchewan there are 178 with a capacity of 5,350,000 and in Alberta 26 elevators with a capacity of 745,000 bushels giving a total capacity in interior elevators on the G. T. P. in the Prairie Provinces of 6,852,000. In addition the capacity of the Grand Trunk Pacific elevator at Fort William (conceded to be the largest elevator in the world) is 5,750,000 bushels making a total elevator capacity on the Grand Trunk Pacific of 12,602,000 bushels.

Pavements Reaching Completion

The last chapter in the history of Peterborough's street paving was opened yesterday when the final coat of the asphalt paving was begun to be laid on Hunter street, west of George street. Waggons brought the hot mixture composed of crushed stone, three kinds of sand, carbonate of lime and asphalt was spread on the substructure. Italians raked the steaming mass to a level surface. Then a steam roller rolled it smooth. Afterwards a laborer, with a red hot iron, at the end of a pole, put the final polish on the roadway. Laborers on wooden snowshoes, or rather asphalt shoes, smoothed down the newly deposited mass.

Cruelty to a Horse.

Patrick Lavery was yesterday charged with having unnecessarily beaten a horse. He admitted beating the horse. "Your honor, if I didn't bate the horse, it would not go at all." It was a livery horse. He had had one or two glasses of ale. An employe of the livery stable said when Lavery brought the horse back it was covered with ridges and sweat. The horse belonging to Mr. Robinson does not need the whip. P.C. Sills counted over twelve lumps on the horse made by a whip. Lavery was under the influence of liquor. Lavery was fined $20 to be paid in ten days.

Blacklister Heavily Fined.

Robert L. Anderson, a blacklister was charged with having been drunk. The magistrate said: "You are here so frequently we'll let you down a bit." $20 or three months in jail. When asked where he got his liquor Anderson said "I got it in Hastings." The chief remarked "Bob, I saw you sober two hours before you were arrested." In the box, Anderson said, under oath, he got the liquor in Hastings on Wednesday. He paid $1 for two flasks. He gave a man here $1, on Thursday to get a bottle of whiskey, but did not see him again. The man wrote his name on a piece of paper but never saw the man again. Anderson was remanded for a week to get his memory working.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time It! — "Pape's Diapepsin" makes your upset, bloated stomach feel fine in five minutes

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcomes indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn, and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE

Peterborough like Lindsay seems to be somewhat "shy" of laborers.

Port Hope's new Public Library has been formally opened.

Work has been resumed on the new C.P.R. station at Havelock.

The Lakefield Rifle Club will hold a shoot at the new rifle range, on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 20th. last much longer. The local coal barons will yet get a crack at your saving bank account.

Lindsay's population is now 7,400. Quite a nice little increase in our Scugog suburb.

Nine prisoners entered the police court yesterday morning. Peterborough is getting quite cosmopolitan.

The Mission Band of St. John's Church held a most successful entertainment last night.

Peterborough seems to observe the Liquor License Act better than it is carried out in Toronto. In that City of Churches and civic graft liquor is freely supplied to guests in hotel rooms.

One of the visiting delegates to the Baptist convention yesterdgy remarked to the Times: "You have a splendid city but you don't seem to have enough cheap rent houses suitable for the working man."

Yesterday morning when Mr. Sam Ray, the Hunter street tobacconist, arrived at his store, he discovered that some one, presumably a boy, had thrown a stone and broken a big colored light in his illuminated swinging sign.

Apsley Correspondence, Lakefield News.—A large gang of men from Peterborough drove through Tuesday en route to John Watson's camp, Anstruther.

Kingston is erecting a high mast for wireless telegraphy. We save that expense here as most wireless messages are conveyed by some of our society leaders.

The corner of Simcoe and George Streets was a scene of unusual activity yesterday morning. An extra large gang of men was engaged in taking out and breaking up the cement crossing.

David Norman, in the police court dockyesterday morning said he came here from Toronto to go apple picking. He and his friend Hamilton had the money to pay fare to Toronto and were let go.

His Honor Judge Edmison, County Magistrate who held court in Norwood on Thursday, has reserved judgment in the case of some transient traders who are alleged to have done business without a license.

Peterborough for a city of over 20,000 has remarkably little of the social evil in her midst. This speaks volumes for both the efficiency of the local police and a high grade of public opinion.

A Zeppelin airship exploded in Germany yesterday and killed 36 people. Some local politicians have suffered from using too much "hot air" round election time.

Before the business of the Baptist Convention was proceeded with yesterday evening, Rev. F. J. Sawers, president of the Ministerial Association, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Association.

Settlers living contiguous to the Scugog River, on the east and west shores, are still clamoring for the erection of a bridge at a point opposite or adjacent to Janetville station or another suitable point.

No Scuffs, this fine weather cannot Yesterday afternoon at 4.30, 18 bicyclists were cycling around on the newly laid pavement on Hunter street. The contractors complained that the not-then hardened pavement would be spoiled so P.C. Sills stopped the riders.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Lena Deane and Miss Phyllis Deane, of Toronto, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. G. Deane fir the holiday.

Mrs. McRae, of the Normal School staff, is spending the holiday in Toronto.

Mrs. Russel Widdifield, Toronto, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. G. Deane for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. F. J. Tate has rented Mr. F. J. Lillicrap's residence at Lakefield and will reside there during the winter.

Mr. Chas. B. Martin, asst.-inspector of Customs, who has been in the city for the past fortnight, left yesterday for Ottawa.

Mr. Walter Perks, leaves to-day to accept a lucrative position in Winnipeg.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong and son, Charles, left yesterday for Campbellford where they will spend the holiday.

Mrs. T. D. Young and Miss Irene Young were in Port Hope on Thursday attending the funeral of the late Robert Barry.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartshorne, London Street, left Thursday morning for Ottawa, where they will spend the next few weeks.

Mrs. Brown, who has been the guest of her cousin, Miss Effie Munroe, Reid Street, has returned to her home in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Trebilcock have returned to the city after spending a delightful honeymoon in New York and the Berkshires. They have taken up residence on George street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Drummond announce the marriage of their daughter, Ann Jean, to Doctor Sidney Burnett Tyon, on Saturday, Oct 4th. 1913, in New York City.

Mr. Max Hamilton, formerly of this city, whose headquarters for his district for the Hudson Bay Co., is located at Norway House, 400 miles north of Winnipeg, resides in the same house once occupied by his father, the late Hon. Robett Hamilton.

The Poor Man's University

"JONES knows more about motor cars than any other man I know," said a man to his friend. "He has obtained his knowledge chiefly from motor car advertisements, and the catalogues and booklets circulated through them."

"All I know about photography," declared a well-known amateur, "I have learned from the men who advertise cameras, plates, papers and films."

Advertisements have been well called "The Poor Man's University," but other than poor men have been schooled thereby.

Much of what the average individual knows concerning personal and domestic hygiene, modern office methods, books and authors, electricity, precious stones, investments, and almost everything else, he has learned from advertisements.

Advertisements have stimulated our intelligence, added enormously to our knowledge, and given us aspirations which have raised us to higher levels of thinking and living. Advertising is indeed "The Poor Man's University."

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

CHATEAUGUAY ELECTION WAS A MONUMENT OF POLITICAL GRAFT

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Makes Bitter Attack on Conservative Methods—Corruption and Robery

Joliette, Que., Oct. 18.—Returning to his discussion of the tariff, the substantial lowering of which it is thought to be a matter the Liberal party in Canada is now considering as a policy, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the leader of the opposition, in the course of an address here, said that cheap bread was a more important matter to Canada than battleships. He said the naval question was dead, though he promised that if the prime minister introduced next session a naval aid bill similar to that rejected by the senate, the liberal party would oppose it as vigorously as they did last session.

Sir Wilfrid said that Canada needed larger markets and none were more suited to her purpose than those of the United States.

In the recent bye-election in Chateauguay, where a seat Liberal since confederation went Conservative, Sir Wilfrid said that it was a monument of political graft, corruption and Robbery.

It was engineered by brains, expert in those kind of manoeuvres.

Austria Steps Into Balkan Trouble

Vienna, Oct. 18.—Austria to-day sent an ultimatum to Servia, demanding the immediate and complete evacuation of the points in Albania occupied by Servian troops after the recent conflicts between them and the Albanians.

POPE ORDERS INVESTIGATION OF MIXED MARRIAGE QUESTION

Circular Issued From the Holy Office Requesting the Opinion of all Bishops—Affirmative Answer From All Hierarchy of Canada Would Mean the Abrogation of Famous Ne Temere Decree

Montreal, Oct. 18.—News from Rome announced that the holy office of which His Holiness the Pope is prefect has ordered all over the world an investigation on mixed marriages by requesting the opinion of all the bishops on the opportunity of favoring such marriages in certain countries. An affirmative answer from all the hierarchy of Canada would mean the abrogation of the famous ne temere decree. The inquiry is ordered in a letter signed by Cardinal Rampolla, in which the following questions are asked:

"What was ten years ago, and what is to-day in your diocese, the number of Catholics, non-Catholics and non-baptized?

"What is the average number of mixed marriages which have been concluded or attempted in the past ten years, with and without dispensation?

"Have the precautions such as prescribed been omitted or refused, and in how many cases?

"In other cases what results have such precautions brought the one concerning the education of all the children in the Catholic religion especially?

"For what rites, especially after the promulgation of the ne temere decree, are followed in the celebration of such marriages? Are they celebrated in the church? Are they announced at the sound of the bells, while the presiding priest is clad in canonical vestments, with the [illegible] of the organ, the benediction of the ring, a sermon, or not?

"With all the answers you will please formulate your answers on the following question: In your diocese considering the particular circumstances, would it be convenient in the future to favor or to oppose mixed marriages?"

GIBSON BEGINS HIS LIFE WITHIN WALLS

Taken From Toronto Jail to Kingston on Saturday—Leave Taking Pathetic.

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Early Saturday morning Gibson was placed in a cab at the Toronto jail, where he has spent the last year and a half, and rushed to the Union Station where he was placed on the Grand Trunk train for Kingston. He was heavily shackled, hands and feet, when he took his seat in the smoking compartment of one of the cars, and accompanied by officers of City Sheriff Mowat. Gibson's parents, his fiancee and a party of friends were at the station when the train pulled out, and the parting with parents and fiancee was especially pathetic. Of those present, however, the convicted man was the most composed, displaying the same lack of emotion that has characterized him since his arrest, and expressing the sincere conviction that new evidence in the case would turn up, and that he would eventually be freed.

The news that Charles Gibson, who has occupied so much space in the public mind for the past year was being taken to Kingston, spread through the station like wildfire, and those who were not hurrying to catch their trains gathered around the coach in which he was confined and endeavored to catch a glimpse of him. The blind, however, was pulled down and he was protected from their curious gaze. A few people followed the parents and the fiancee of the young man, when they walked through the station arm in arm after the train had gone.

ASKS GERMANY TO STOP NAVY WORK

London, Oct. 18.—The invitation to Germany to indulge in a "naval holiday" was repeated to-day by Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty, who in the name of the British Government made a specific offer to delay the fulfilment of Great Britain's naval construction program next year if Germany would consent to do the same.

QUEEN SURPRISES MILITARY CADETS

Kingston, Oct., Oct. 18.—On a very sloppy field, with a heavy wind blowing and a misty rain falling, Queen's and R.M.C. clashed this afternoon in their first encounter in the Senior Intercollegiate series. There was a very small crowd, only about six hundred fans turning out. R.M.C. are the favorites, in fact, their supporters are giving them a ten-point lead.

At the conclusion of the game, the score stood: R.M.C. [illegible], Queen's 6.

MRS EMMELINE PANKHURST ON BRIEF HUNGER STRIKE

Changed Her Position as Soon as She Heard That Immigration Commissioners Would Consider Case

New York, Oct. 18.—On the ground that she had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpiende, Emmeline Pankhurst, the noted militant suffragette, was ordered excluded from the United Seates by a board of special inquiry of the immigration bureau, when she arrived here to-day on the French liner La Provence.

As soon as she heard the decision she declared hunger strike. She said she would eat no food while she was detained on Ellis Island pending her appeal to Washington.

Half an hour later, Herbert Reeves her lawyer employed by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, told her that he had arranged over the telephone with Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti to meet him in Washington to-morrow morning to talk over the matter of admitting Mrs. Pankhurtt under bond. Mrs. Pankhurst at once declared the strike over. She sent to the restaurant for a lunch—roast beef, potatoes, sliced tomatoes and "sweets" and she ate heartily.

TAG DAY GOT IN OVER $1,140

Splendid Success Crowned Charitable Work Despite a Continuous Drizzling Rain

Saturday was Peterborough "Tag Day," held to raise funds for the Children's Aid Society, one of the most commendable institutions in this city with her many admirable charitable institutions. In the morning a drizzle of rain and lowering sky threatened to put an end to the efforts of those who played so splendid a part in this philanthropic work. It was, early in the day decided to postpone the event, however a break appearing in the overhanging grim clouds, the girls disposing of tags concluded to proceed with their work. And work they did! The little and big girls worked like beavers, and, in the circumstances, success crowned their efforts. They report very few refusals on the part of those solicited to buy tags. Had the weather been fine, there is no doubt but what the crowds on the streets would have been doubled in numbers with a comparative increase in the receipts.

The Receipts.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather and consequent small number of citizens on the streets, the receipts totalled some $1140. These figures are not absolutely exact, but approximately [illegible]. The street receipts amounted to $1045. Figures from the schools were not available, but Mr. P. Campbell estimated that a full report wil, show about $1140.

Well done, girls, and well done the older folks who engineered the splendid work to its successful conclusion.

Irish Home Rule Impossible

Ireland plunges on toward civil war. It is certain that Ulster Protestants will not submit to a Dublin Parliament until they are overcome by the British troops. Dare any Government at Westminster employ its forces against a population whose chief glory has been their devotion to the Empire, who if they must fight will fight under the Union Jack, and who ask that that they shall continue to be the subjects of a Protestant monarchy instead of the taxpayers for a Catholic Parliament at Dublin?

PHYSICIAN FACES CAARGE OF BIGAMY

Head Doctor at Alexandra Sanitarium Arrested in London, Ont.

London, Ont. Oct. 18.—Dr. W. H. Rose in July, 1905 at Buffalo. She dra Sanitarium at Byron, was arrested Friday afternoon, charged with bigamy. Dr. Rose was married a few weeks ago to Miss Bernice Blackley a young society lady of Toronto. Dr. Rose is at present in the county jail. He will be given a preliminary hearing this afternoon. The complainant against Dr. Rost is Briget Ryan of Chicago. She states that she was married to Dr. Rose in July, 1905 at Buffalo. She saw the account of Dr. Rose' marriage in a Toronto paper and came to London Thursday where she placed the matter in the hands of Crown Attorney McKillop. She charges that she and Dr. Rose have been separated for five years, but not divorced.

JAMES R. FALLIS IS PEEL CANDIDATE

Brampton, Oct. 18.—(Special).—James R. Fallis of Brampton was the unanimous choice of Peel County Conservatives as their representative to contest the provincial riding at the approaching by-election, Nov. [illegible]. Conservatives in large numbers assembled at the Brampton concert hall this afternoon and intense enthusiasm marked the proceedings.

Sam Charters, M.L.A., who has resigned the seat to assume the county registrarship, was presented and spoke briefly, calling upon the delegates to enter into the campaign with spirit. He expressed pleasure at the choice of Mr. Fallis as one well qualified to represent the constituency.

It was expected that there would be considerable rivalry among the candidates for this position, but each resigned in favor of Mr. Fallis.

Among those nominated were Mayor Dunvan of Brampton and F. J. Jackson of Meadowvale.

HUERTA MAY HAVE RESIGNED UNDER THREATS OF DEATH

Officials at Washington Confidently Expect Such Word—Only Extreme Crisis Would Move Him

Washington, Oct. 18.—While official confirmation of President Huerta's reported resignation was lacking in despatches received to-day from Mexico City, officials confidently expected such word within the next twenty-four hours. They argued that if the reports of the abdication were borne out, Huerta must have retired under threats of assassination. An official close to the administration declared his belief that army leaders, incensed at Huerta's dictatorship, threaten serious revolt and his death, declaring that only the most extreme crisis would force Huerta's retirement.

Official confirmation was received to-day of reports that the diplomatic corps at Mexico City, excepting Great Britain's representative, were seeking intervention by the United States.

Officials here were inclined to view Great Britain's recent attitude as opposed to the United States policy although they did not anticipate that it would alter the administration's plans.

AID TO DESERTERS IS U. S. MARINE LAW

London, Oct. 18.—Shipowners in London and authorities on International shipping law, interviewed yesterday, spoke in the strongest terms against the United States Seaman's Bill.

"It is no use pretending that it is anything else," said an authority on shipping regulations. "For a long time crimps in America have had too much their own way, and now this measure comes at a time when shipowners are anxious that American legislation should do something to stop desertion which is already too prevalent at American ports.

"I call this measure an act of International dishonesty. If every country did what the United States proposes—that is, break a contract between the owners of a ship and the crew as soon as she enters an American port—we should be plunged in a state of anarchy.

"It means that if a man wants to be clear of a ship he can step ashore and he is to all intents and purposes an American citizen. Briefly put, we have got to be Americanized whether we like it or not."

On the other hand, Havelock Wilson, president of the National Sailors and Firemen's Union, defended the provisions of the bill and more particularly that which proposes to abolish the arrest of seamen for desertion. His title for the measure was "The Right to Quit Bill."

THE HISTORY AND MEANING OF PROTESTANTISM EXPLAINED

Grand Opera House Crammed to Hear Rev. Joseph Sullivan D. D. of Montreal, A Most Educational Meeting

Getting Ready to Support Demand

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.—Articles in the Conservative papers in the West would indicate that they are getting ready to support the demand for free wheat.

Yesterday afternoon the Grand Opera House was filled to repletion with an immense audience who assembled to hear Rev. Jos. Sullivan, D. D., pastor of Olivet Baptist church, Montreal. It might be noted incidentally that Mr. Sullivan is prominently connected with the annual Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec that has been in session here, and is a member of the official Board of the Baptist Church. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Peterborough Protestant Benevolent Federation.

The meeting opened with prayer. This was followed by "Onward, Christian Soldiers," sung lustily by the audience. The chairman then asked for "Nearer, My God to Thee." This was followed by a well rendered vocal quartette. Mr. Pratt next gave a vocal solo. The chairman noted that Dr. Sullivan is pastor of the largest Baptist church in the Province of Quebec. He briefly remarked on the various honors Dr. Sullivan has been crowned with by several seats of learning in both Canada and the United States. He then introduced Dr. Sullivan.

Dr. Sullivan.

The speaker expressed the delight he felt in being in Peterborough. It is most fitting that we should hold such a meeting especially at Thanksgiving. "Owing to my beautiful Irish face that I can't get rid of, I am often taken for a priest," laughter. He is often taken for a priest in Montreal. The priests there often have a good laugh at seeing him taken for a priest. The Catholic students give him the grand hailing sign of their respective orders and he answers with the best benediction a Baptist pastor can give, laughter. He had been taken for a priest in the grey nunnery and had once been asked by a sister to get her a Catholic book, which he did. He noted other laughable instances of being taken for a priest. He gave the press [illegible] for making him out to be a Catholic priest.

On speaking on the history of Protestantism, he intended to throw no mud. The day for that has gone by. When a joint committee of Catholics and Protestants was formed in Montreal to do prison work, the Archbishop reproved his weak-kneed followers for doing this, saying to the Protestants, "you may allow this, but the business of our Church is to proselitize." There are three kinds of Christianity, Greek, Catholic and Protestant. He then briefly described the Greek form of Christianity. It is the religion of millions in Russia and the far East. The Roman Catholic Christianity is the latin form. Protestant Christianity is, first of all, a "protest," as denoted by its name. It is more than a mere protest, however. The word "Protestantism," has a wider application than indicated. Protestantism is a restoration of the primitive form of Christianity. When he was a boy, he thought Henry VIII. and Martin Luther were the founders of Protestantism. There is not a single thing that Christ taught that Protestants do not believe in. Protestants of all denominations believe "In God the Father Almighty, etc." quoting the creed as used in the Anglican Church. That creed, the oldest in the world, was written when there were no Roman Catholics, no Greek Church and no Protestants. He knew more at 17 years old than he does now (laughter). He then knew that Protestantism was originated by Henry VIII. and that it was bound to send its believers to Hell. (Laughter.)

The Roman Belief.

The Roman belief should be considered from its doctrinal and historical standpoints. That Church claims to have been founded by St. Peter. Historical fact, however, does not bring this out. It was possibly Jews that had been baptized at Jerusalem and then went back to Rome. St. Paul's letter clearly showed that he did not recognize Peter as head or bishop of the Church. Its members were set fire to light the Appian Way and torn by wild beasts for the cause of Christ. The Catholics put the mother of Christ on an equal footing with the Almighty God. But because Catholics do this, Protestants should not belittle Mary. If ever there is to be a reunion of Christianity it must be along historical lines.

The speaker gave a graphic description of the days of ancient Rome, when men were expelled from the church, how they, heart-broken from conscience, crept into the Catacombs and begged to be taken back. The only kind of confession that Tertullian wrote of was a public confession. In the time of Gregory I. the confession became a part of the Church's doctrines. He considers "Absolve te" a very arrogant statement. If we confess our sins, God is just and will forgive us. When five firemen recently laid down their lives in Montreal in the course of duty, four were Catholics and one Protestant. The Protestant was buried by a Presbyterian and Anglican ministers. The four brave Catholic firemen who gave their lives for duty were buried by the priests and the Archbishop sent in a bill for $400 for masses to the Quebec Government.

The Archbishop in Montreal has [illegible] a newspaper which stood for a higher system of education.
